Community

Word of the approach of the enemy has just been received. Immediately the fleet prepares to depart from its base and give battle. The men below deck recheck the engines. Each ship is alive with activity as the call, "Battle Stations," is sounded. The fleet admiral has taken his place on the flag bridge, where he will direct the movements and strategy of the entire fleet.

Gracefully the fleet steams out to sea, with each ship occupying a definite place in the line of battle. Every man goes about his duties with the grim realization that a wrong move may spell disaster for him and his shipmates. As a result, each individual takes the winning of a battle as a personal task, sacrificing personal feelings for the good of the ship. Each man, each ship, knows its job and is confident of victory.

The local community, especially in time of war, feels the immediate need for local mobilization. Each person comes to realize that an organized effort is no better than the single individuals who make it up. To be really effective in accomplishing a formidable front, each unit, school and local organization learns inter-cooperation as well as self-sacrifice. The whole community appreciates the great value of a single command in achieving the final goal.

Community

On December 8, Jefferson students cast off any lurking semblance of lethargy. The school as a separate society had ended. The school and community had united. It was discovered that the school had a vital part in the war effort as it is here that the majority of the community of homes are represented. In school also is the reserve of youthful, strong workers, willing to devote time and effort to the various necessary duties of a community at war. The many ways in which Jefferson students have shown their loyalty and willingness to help are:

$50-$60 worth of defense stamps are bought by loyal Jeffersonians each month.

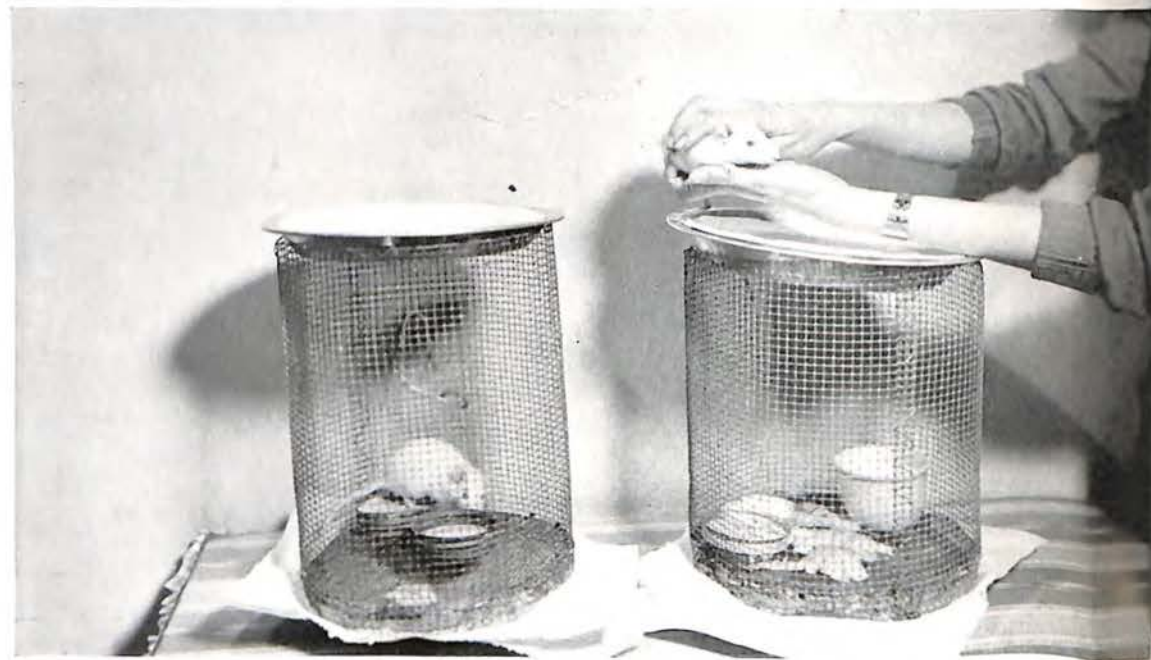

The V. P. F., a home guard force, has been organized to replace the National Guard, which was called into service. In this new organization, Jefferson boys learn to wage war and to defend our homes. They are preparing to fight the enemy under various conditions. Here they are seen as they prepare to repulse paratroops attacking Jefferson.

TOP: "Keep 'Em Flying!"

CENTER: Rats do their part for the health of the nation.

BOTTOM: Student Government officers lead the student body in cooperation with war effort.

Effort

Physical education has been emphasized greatly. The new inner system is taking the possible future rejectees of selective service and building them up while they are still in high school.

The necessity of First Aid has been proved repeatedly, and a new emphasis is placed on this training through Physical Education classes.

An army fights on its stomach. Jefferson girls are learning to keep army stomachs in A-1 condition through nutrition classes and with the aid of several white rats. Air raids are becoming part of the Jefferson students' daily schedule. We have become accustomed to them and are very serious about the possibility of real blitzes. Jefferson has its own civilian defense organization.

We are at War! Jefferson students realize this and have rallied to the call. Forming a bond between school and community, Jefferson students assist the war effort in innumerable ways, and help to awaken their elders to the threat to our way of life.

BOTTOM: First Aid training in the gym. (Heaven help the victim!)

Dedication

"There is no Frigate Like a Book"

*W*E WHO stand on the threshold of a troubled world, impatient to play our part, harrassed by events around us, find ourselves seeking, from time to time, to gain some equilibrium in a world of calm and relief.

Because she has made us at home in such a world—a world of books, because she has helped us to experience the thrill of research, and because she has stimulated us along the delightful paths of good reading, we dedicate, with appreciation and affection, this Fiftieth Anniversary Issue of the Jefferson High School Annual, THE ACORN, to "PRESENT ARMS," is the order given a squad of Marines. The bugle notes of "To the Colors" float across the tropical sea. Every sailor topside faces the flag and salutes. The flag is slowly hauled down and stowed away. With this simple but significant ceremony, the Navy pays tribute to its flag and all it symbolizes.

The making of an all-round sailor is a difficult job. The Navy has a definite program which broadens and enriches the mental, physical, and spiritual aspects of the individual. The eventual success of such a program depends entirely on the attitude of the recruit and the way in which he accepts the training given him.

The training of the high school student is not unlike that of the Navy recruit. The simple school flag ceremony tends to teach devotion to the country and the need for a serious attitude, so much desired in the well-rounded student.

The high school boy and girl needs careful guidance, for it is in these school years that lasting impressions, which play such an important role in later life, are formed. A certain amount of discipline is needed, as is a deep understanding between student and school. The aim of the school program is not merely the assimilating of subject matter, but the producing of hardy citizens who are capable of serving their community and country to the extent of a definite contribution to society.

On the Bridge

JHIS has been a year of tension and strain. Much has taken place beyond the ordinary—events that have necessitated radical adjustments.

Faculty and students alike have made their adjustments and accepted new responsibilities with courage, poise, and good judgment. Faculty and students alike have gone into the armed forces, war industries, and civilian defense, and have helped in the rationing and conservation programs. Nevertheless, the instructional program has gone on with even more seriousness of purpose.

Other changes and adjustments must come, but Jefferson has demonstrated that it can and will measure up to emergencies, as they arise, with energy, enthusiasm, and efficiency.

John D. Piddick

Principal, Jefferson Senior High School.

THE launching program is under way. The air breathes with excitement as the restless crowd waits eagerly to see the ship plunge into the water. After a few prefatory remarks by the dignitaries, the signal is given, and the trigger pin coordinates with the crash of a champagne bottle. The great ship slides easily into the water. The drag chains indicate that she is subject to final work on shore.

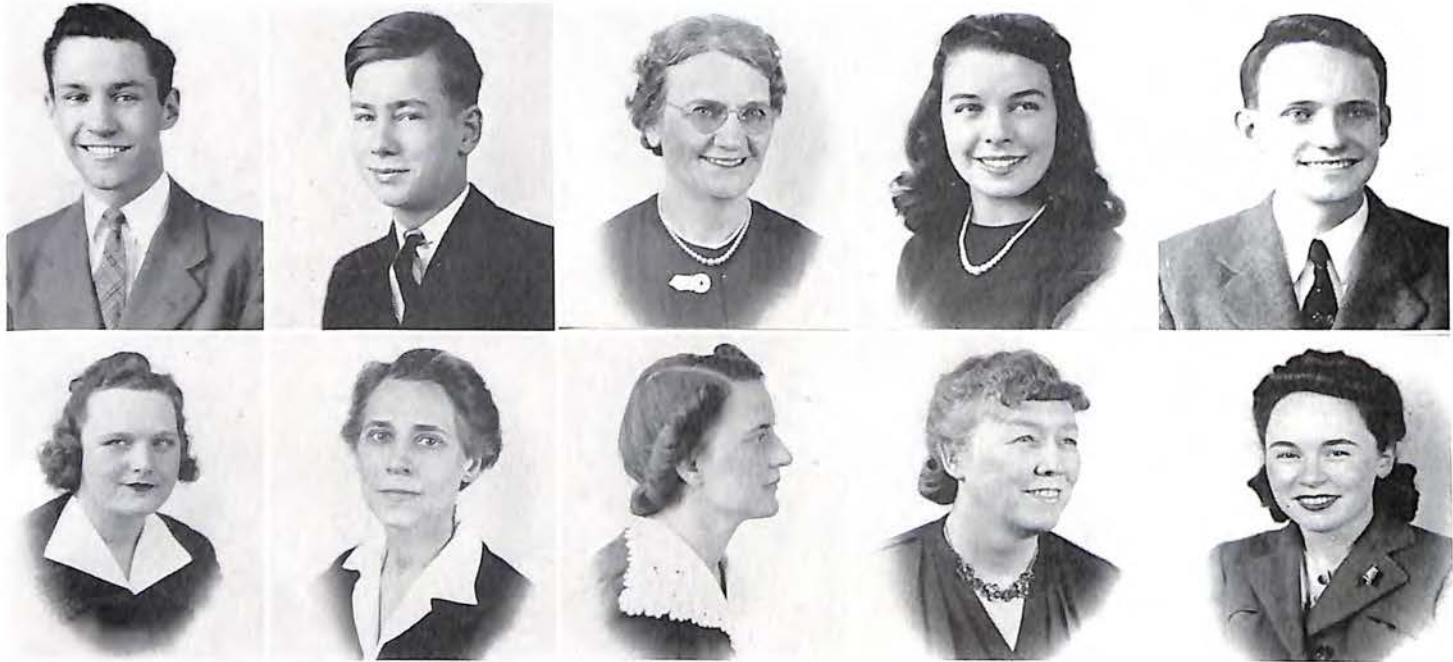

Tugs meet the ship and maneuver her into position at the outfitting dock. She is not ready for the sea, yet. The newly-launched ship is simply able to float. Valuable machinery and other vital parts have yet to be added. A great deal more work and time will be required before she will be able to control herself safely and capably.

The graduating senior at commencement exercises is bid farewell with the gala program and best wishes of the speakers. But after the day is over and the real commencement begins, like the ship, he needs the careful management and guidance necessary for his initial experience in the great sea of life.

The senior in the school occupies the coveted position of top man. He has faced the joys and trials of high school life and has emerged successfully. He is ready for the outside world but, at the same time, senses the need for clear thinking, good judgment, and experienced guidance.

THE work that immediately follows the laying of a ship's keel and continues until the launching ceremonies is extremely important, for it is in this span of time that the bulk of the ship is made. The ribs are built in place. The lower parts of the hull are constructed. The bulkheads and the compartments below are securely built so as to insure a sturdy structure for the engines and boilers.

By this time, the general size and shape of the ship is evident. It is now that the workmen realize the potentialities of their project. Each individual goes about his work with the confidence that soon this majestic form will go to sea, and serve as a good ship wherever she sails.

The student's junior year in high school is probably the best index obtainable as to what use he will make of the knowledge and experience he has acquired in his school years. The junior, in spite of his feelings of self-satisfaction and security, begins to realize the necessity of sincere application in culminating a satisfactory school career. However, he has an inquiring eye toward the future that is not fazed by the attractive program of junior and school activities.

One can fairly definitely determine the harmony and efficiency of a school by the attitude of the junior. He forms the backbone of the school life, and presses forth with his matchless zest for a full program to bring the student body schedule of events to a successful conclusion.

AMID the noise of shops, machinery, and the activity that prevails around the ways of a busy shipyard, we see a crane carefully hoisting a piece of steel in the air. The workmen have cleared the ways; the construction foreman gives the signal; and the first section of the keel is gently laid in place. When the complete keel has been laid, the proper connections are made between the steel sections, and the workmen feel confident that they have laid the foundation for a sturdy ship. They have laid a solid keel bed and are anxious to follow their work with other well-planned construction.

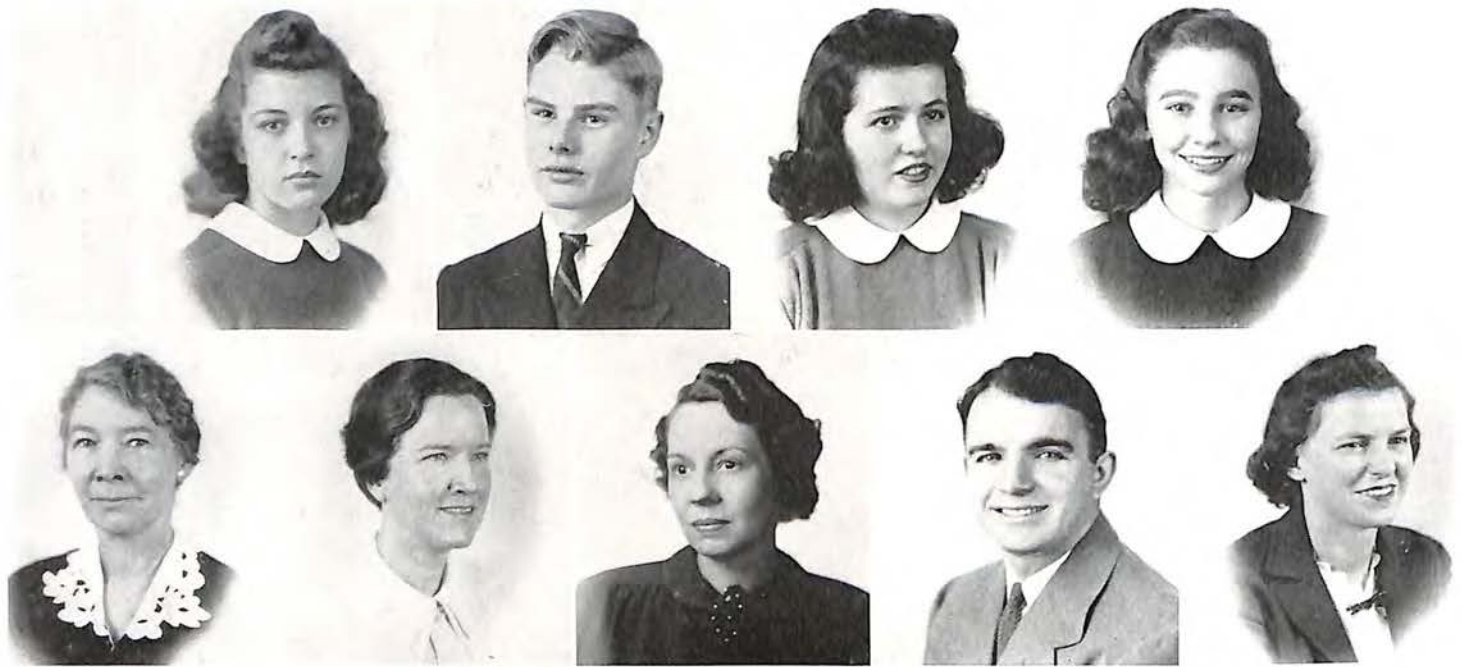

Every experienced ship builder knows the value of a well-laid keel, and, as a result, he sees that these "ship foundations" receive special attention. A good bulkhead and strong superstructure cannot be erected on a weak keel. Thus the whole company, from officers to workmen, strive for a good beginning.

The sophomore entering high school encounters situations similar to those of laying a ship's keel. There are problems to be solved. Becoming used to the new system of doing things and the strange environment of new faces and organizations often tend to perplex the newcomer more than usual. But, with well-planned training and patient handling, he is eased into the system with little difficulty.

The school authorities fully realize the importance of preparing the sophomore for the events of the future. There is built up a bond of confidence between school and sophomore. He soon realizes the necessity of mastering the preliminary program and establishing a firm foundation before he can hope to obtain a place higher up.

FEATURES

IN a production program, especially war production, the need for skilled and prepared workers becomes more acute, and as a result, the training schedule to turn out needed craftsmen for industry is more intensified. Ship building, plant construction, and manufacturing — all stand in need of specialized men to carry out the different stages of their respective fields.

The country's armed forces require a large number of production and repair men to maintain successfully "the front behind the front." Again, these important skilled workmen must have acquired the necessary technical knowledge before they can participate in this program.

This year at Jefferson, more than ever, new emphasis has been laid on a skilled training program. There has been a great tendency for students to take advantage of the facilities and equipment installed for these courses because of the nation's need for skilled men.

Not only are technically advanced workmen important in the sense of production, but they are also helpful in teaching the attribute of the coordination of mind and muscle, the development of the body, and clear thinking. Welding, drafting, riveting and machine work all have their definite place in forming these characteristics. Jefferson High deems it a privilege to contribute and cooperate to the fullest extent with a program that trains and develops the future American builder — backbone of the nation in war and peace.

Training

Jefferson High did not wait until December 8th to gear its Curriculum set up to a production program. In September, important training began in courses directly connected with war production.

The Smith-Hughes Act in 1917 started aid to vocational training. Workers then amounted to 65,000.

Today, as our nation wages war, 1,776,000 workers are being made available.

Drafting is a prime factor in making up this project.

Welders are being trained, as they are in great demand for the building of ships and other steel construction.

Aircraft construction is tremendously dependent upon sheet metal workers. In fact, the largest part of the actual construction of the ship goes to them.

TOP TO BOTTOM:

- Mechanical drawing, an essential subject for engineers.
- Welding at vocational school.
- Metal workers in this and the following picture may be needed in shipbuilding.
- Automobile mechanics will be necessary in winning the war.

Program

The aircraft industry has drained the country of a great many of the automobile mechanics who are to be converted into airplane mechanics — but jeep cars, tanks, and trucks have to be produced just the same, so great emphasis is being placed on training new automobile mechanics.

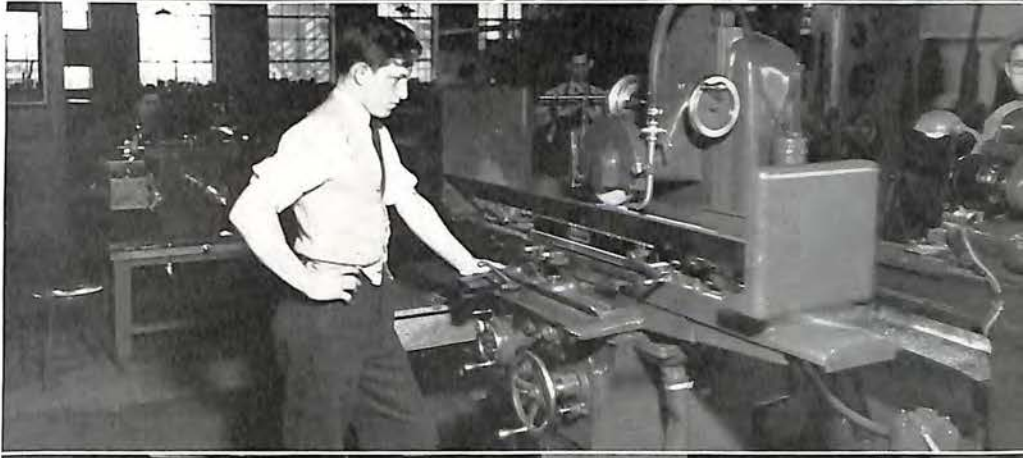

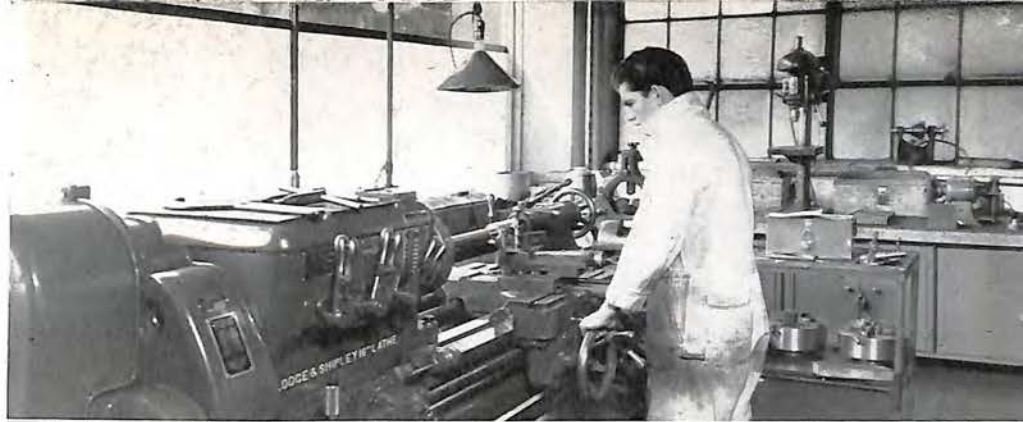

The whole war is dependent upon the skill, accuracy and speed of the machinists — airplane motors, guns, cannons, ships, etc. In every field of construction of the actual implements of war, the machinist has had a pertinent part.

The government is calling on all schools to build 500,000 model airplanes for training purposes, gun practice, and civilian defense.

There is also need in our war effort for men and women trained in production management and selling of retail products. The Distributive Education program is handling this end with great success. Here is offered the opportunity of actual participation while learning.

TOP TO BOTTOM:

- The nature of the complex machines in these pictures escape us but the fellows operating them know all about it.
- Model airplanes requested in thousands by the government.
- Student leaders run Heironimus for a day.
- D. E. students benefit by contact with the public.

ACTIVITIES

A SMALL, fast-motor torpedo boat speeds toward its destination. The well-trained, hand-picked crew is at action stations ready for any eventuality. There is no confusion. Every man knows his job and calmly attends to it. The men below, while not seen in so glamorous a setting as those topside, perform a vital task by keeping the engines in good working order so as to maintain that essential quality of speed. Every man is a necessary part of this small fighting unit, cooperating as best he can to insure success. The skipper now maneuvers the boat into position. Torpedoes are launched—and the "mosquito boat" quickly turns to avoid them.

Life aboard a torpedo boat is hard, and only those with real stamina and the will to do can possibly be active members of the "mosquito fleet." But in spite of the hardships encountered, there is a chance to learn and observe. There is a real thrill when the seaman begins to demonstrate his capabilities and discover his potentialities.

High school activities, like torpedo boat life, teach the participants to develop stamina and to discover and more fully realize their respective talents and attributes. They soon learn the value of each individual's cooperating for the eventual success of the group. There is a place in school activities for all of the various aptitudes, and each soon becomes a necessary part of the organized group by efficiently carrying out his work.

The proficient activity, like the trained engine crew of the torpedo boat, does not show on the surface the long periods of preparation, but the pride of all is in the finished product that functions smoothly and is a credit to the whole group.

Student Government

Student Government's work for this year began with an orientation program to acquaint all new students with the school club, regulations, the building, and Student Government itself. A number of committees functioned all year, these including the regulation of Fire Drills, Bulletin Board, Point System, Smoking, and Step and Locker Monitors Committees.

Delegates were sent to the Southern Association of Student Government Convention at Memphis, Tenn. This is the third year that Jefferson has been represented at this association. Jefferson was elected vice president for next year.

Two of the main projects of Student Government for this year were the Junior Red Cross and the Paper Drive, in which paper has been collected in barrels in each home room, proceeds going toward purchasing a recording machine.

Among other projects taken over by the Student Government was the raising and lowering of the flag.

Gala plans were presented on the annual Old Grads' Day Dance. These included a grand parade, broadcasts, and selling of tickets in booths downtown. The annual Christmas dance proved to be a great success.

Delegates were sent to the State Student Government Convention on May 1 and 2, in Charlottesville, Va., thus climaxing another successful year.

The Pep Club was reorganized. This group sponsored pep rallies over the radio and parades before football games, besides boosting school activities.

National Honor Society

The National Honor Society consists of a group of students who maintain high standards of achievement in both studies and school activities throughout the year. Requirements for membership are that a student be either a high junior or a senior, and that he have an average of G on all credit subjects, and no failures.

The organization is primarily of an honorary nature, although meetings are held once a month when literary programs are given.

Last fall Mr. J. P. Fishburn gave a number of City-County forum tickets to the club, thus enabling the members to hear nationally-known lecturers.

The Honor Society strives for enthusiasm in scholarship, worthy leadership, development of character, and service for others.

The torch of knowledge is the symbol of the Honor Society and can be found on the attractive club pins.

The Girl Reserves of Jefferson are junior members of the Y. W. C. A. The program is three-fold, aiming to help the individual, mentally, spiritually, and physically. Under the leadership of Betty Burnett, this year has been one to be remembered.

Football Hops, the Lynchburg Conference, the Mother-Daughter Banquet, Thanksgiving and Christmas baskets for needy, the Easter Assembly and Cabaret, the stamp, books, and paper drives, week-ends at Tree Top, and the Sweetheart Banquet, were some of the events in which the members participated.

Speech Department

"SMILIN' THROUGH"

Hereon we find four scenes from "Smilin' Through" chosen this year for the annual Costume Play of the Speech Department. In the first picture Mary Lee Penn, playing the part of Ellen, the maid, is bringing Jimmy Driscoll (Dr. Harding) a glass of barley water as he plays dominoes with his old friend, John Carteret (Billy Wade). Immediately below them we find the wedding guests assembled, consisting of Doris Shriver, Joe Krisch, Sara Hale, Charles Lemon, Mary Liz. Barbour, Ben Sparks, and John Willard. On their right we find Billy and Jimmy (John and Dr. Harding) with Sylvia Farnham as Moonyeen. Above them is a scene between the two modern youths, Bobby McCray (Willie Ainley) and Josh Vaughan (Kenneth Wayne), who are mystified at the dress of Frances Whitefield (Mary Clare) and Woodrow Hurd (Jeremiah Wayne).

Latin Department

The Latin Department has an active chapter of the national Junior American Classical League. The purpose of this organization is to keep alive in the hearts of the youth of today a love for the culture of ancient Greece and Rome and an appreciation of its contributions to the understanding and enjoyment of present-day life.

The chief extra-curricular activity of the Jefferson chapter is the publication of the "Roanoke Roman," which has for the past few years won first-place rating both at the S. I. P. A., Lexington, and the C. I. P. A. in New York.

The officers of the League are: Henry Jordan, President; Peggy Ott Hackler, Vice President; Kathrine Fulton, Secretary.

The staff of the "Roanoke Roman" is as follows: Mildred Martin and Katherine Settle, Co-Editors; Margaret Nash, Assistant; Barbara Barnhart, Secretary; Arden Kiser, Business Manager; Doris Proffitt, Fred Wright, Suzanne Scheiner, Kathrine Fulton, Jean Hudson, Ann Logan Baird, Class Reporters; Lewis Attala, Typist; Henry Jordan, Charles Burnette, Margaret Bays, Ethelene Sink, Business Managers for Junior Schools.

French Department

The achievements of the French Department were this year as great as ever. Many participated successfully in various activities. Twenty-seven contestants took part in the French Tournament held at Roanoke College on the eighteenth of April.

Several speakers who had lived or traveled in France addressed the Fleur-de-Lys Club, the officers of which are: Jean Dot Roller, president; Susan Leftwich, vice president, and Norma Lee Eskey, secretary.

An entertaining Halloween Party in the form of a scavenger hunt, and a radio program given at the WSLS, rounded out the fall projects.

Monograms have been received by those earning the fifteen points, accorded for outstanding work in French, as well as individual efforts for the Fleur-de-Lys and the "Echo."

The French paper, "l'Echo de Roanoke," won for the third time in succession the trophy of the S. I. P. A. at Lexington and the first place at the C. S. P. A. at Columbia University. This is largely due to the leadership of the editor, Robert Field, and assistant editor, Boyd Dickerson, and the loyal support of their staff, Juanita Reed and Louise Perdue, typists; Lois Larson, business manager; Norma Lee Eskey, Lucille Townsend, Malcolm Reed, Russell Shideler, Herbert Morris, Meta Coleman and Marie Fallwell.

A very successful assembly topped off the year.

Senior Hi-Y

The Senior Hi-Y of this year has had many interesting programs and projects centered around its purpose which is to create, maintain, and establish throughout the school and community higher standards of Christian living. Several prominent Roanoke ministers have spoken to the club on this subject in Bible study classes held this spring. Along the same line the Hi-Y presented an assembly to the school at which time a prominent American minister of British birth spoke. The club also gave an underprivileged boys banquet before Christmas at which about twenty boys were given a turkey dinner.

The Hi-Y also tried to instill this purpose in every student at Jefferson by distributing cards in the spring and fall with this purpose and the four planks printed on them along with the Jefferson creed and a calender of spring events.

Among the Hi-Y's social activities were a Mothers' banquet, a Fathers' banquet, and several hay rides to Camp Roanoke, the Y. M. C. A.'s camp.

Junior Hi-Y

Clean living, clean sportsmanship, clean speech, and fellowship therein are the ideals of the Junior Hi-Y. The club meets each Tuesday at the Y. M. C. A. Supper meetings are held there at 6:30. After these suppers, short business meetings are conducted by the president and club. The club has either guest speakers or some kind of entertainer quite regularly.

The Junior Hi-Y participates in all regular school activities, athletic or otherwise. Last year the Hi-Y ushered at all the Jefferson High football games at home. The club is also taking an active part in the current war effort by collecting waste paper.

Annual plans for each coming year generally consist of hay rides, dances, a Mothers' and Fathers' Night banquet, and a Truth Conference.

An annual feature is the Truth Conference which is held in the open after a hike. The boys, one at a time, get up. Each with his back to the club, hears criticism from the members. It is all done in the spirit of helpfulness.

The Martha Washington Literary Society strives to promote a democratic and entertaining program annually to encourage among girls at Jefferson a better feeling of friendship and understanding; to interest them and their associates in finer arts and activities along the "literary road"; and to help all those interested to find some definite work in order to gain their awards with a feeling of greater accomplishments.

Activities of the Club, such as teas, parties, suppers and, this year, some kind of cabin party, have been planned in order to bring the girls in closer fellowship with one another. The annual assembly included "The Powder Room," an original one-act play, and a pantomime called "And the Lamp Went Out."

Presidents Louise Yost (fall) and Audrey Hatcher (spring) received full cooperation from the club, which made progress with the aid of Miss Mary DeLong and other officers.

With gradual rising such as this year has been, the Martha Washington Literary Society has a future ahead twice as long as the past.

Jeffersonian Literary Society

The Jeffersonian Literary Society, one of the oldest school organizations at Jefferson, has hung on in an age of speed and specialization. The fact that adults no longer have time for leisurely literary pursuits reflected in the fact that the society held few meetings this year and was less active than usual. A small band of old members who were still upholding the traditions of J. L. S. managed to perpetuate the name, however, in the hope that a future group might carry on. The society had trouble in keeping a president or, indeed, any officer for any length of time because a requisite for membership is participation in a number of school activities, particularly literary activities. We regret that in the present day of war and preparation for war it is impossible to emphasize speaking, writing, debating and kindred arts as much as we do the practical side of things, but the Jeffersonian Literary Society hopes that they will not be completely forgotten in the hustle and stir of a nation at war. It hopes that in the future its organization, or a similar one, may rise to a place of prominence at Jefferson.

Officers were elected for both terms but were unable to take office. They deserve mention. James Kavanaugh was the fall president-elect, and Harrison Winstein, the spring president-elect.

Mr. D. W. Persinger, long an adviser of the J. L. S., continued to extend his helpful guidance.

The Choir

The school pays tribute to the Choir, which has once again completed one of its most successful seasons. Under the direction of Mr. Robert M. Griffey, it has endeavored to bring to Jefferson's faculty and student body the kind of music that is both good and enjoyable. It has participated in a number of the school's assemblies and many community enterprises, upon request. Choir members, in their maroon and white satin robes, have appeared before large audiences throughout Roanoke.

Christmas brought an active program for the choir. Besides caroling in a downtown department store to lighten the hearts of tired Christmas shoppers, the Choir appeared before various clubs and churches. The Christmas assembly at Jefferson would be incomplete without the Choir to render a background of sacred Christmas music.

Members of this group journeyed to Richmond again this year where they won several superior ratings. Those achieving superior ratings were: Helen Blair Graves, piano; the large Choir; and the small boys' group. Entries rated excellent were: The small girls' group; the small Choir; soloists, Sue Deaton, soprano; Maxine Mustard, soprano; Billy Parker, baritone; Chris Hanzas, tenor. Other ratings received were of the third division.

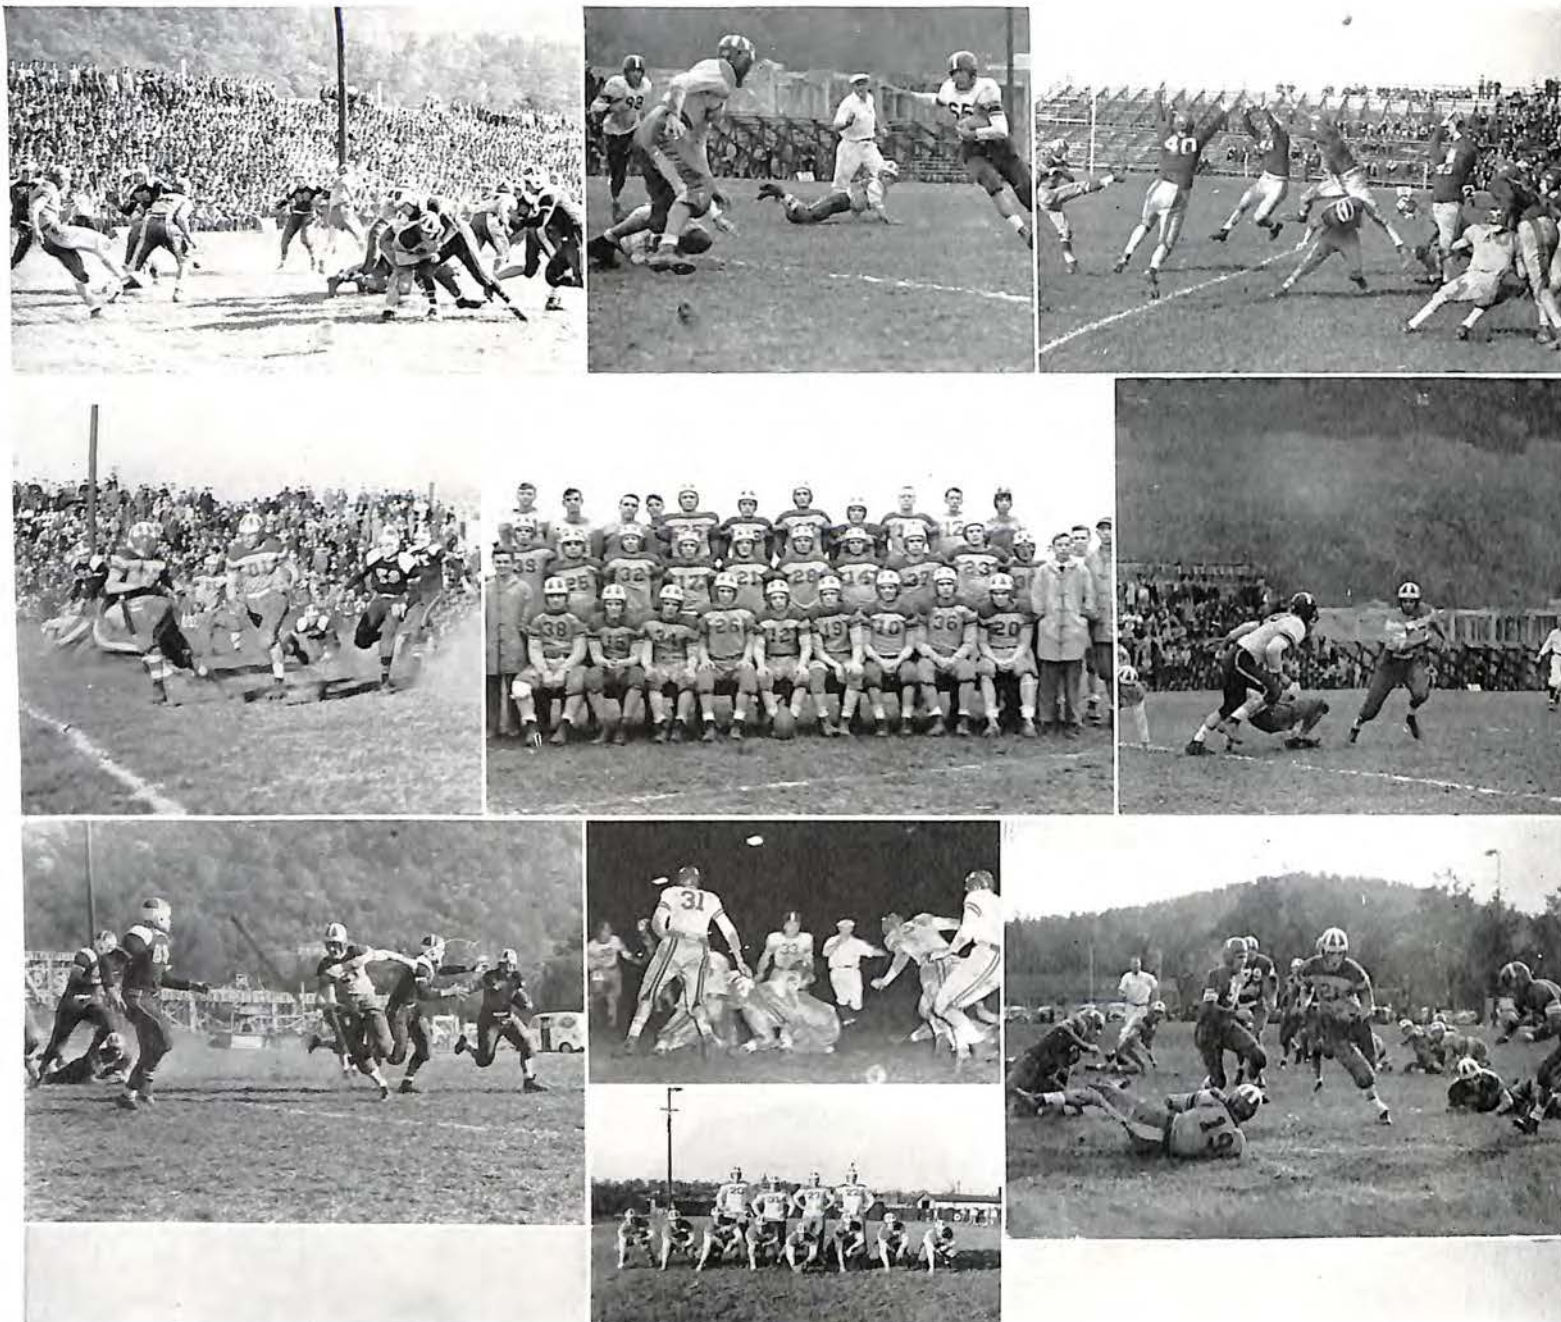

Band

To the citizens of Roanoke there was no more vital proof of the existence of Jefferson High School during the year 1941-1942 than the high school band. Marching in their maroon and white uniforms for the last season, the Jefferson bandmen were a very important link between school and community taking part in all parades and many civic functions.

Under the leadership of J. R. White, the new conductor, the playing of the band improved. Many marches were added to the library, a system of demerits for misconduct was introduced, and the discipline in the band was enforced by student officers.

At the State Music Festival in Richmond, the Brass Quartet made a score of excellent, and the Reed Quartet, a score of good.

Football

Two new coaches and a fine bunch of boys carried us through another excellent season.

Although the schedule was scattered with several defeats, the victories far outnumbered them.

Harry Walton finished his fourth season of brilliant playing by making the first string all-state team. C. O. Paugh and Dickie Dickerson are able reserves.

Clay Bear and Reg Weaver held the safety position down. Jack McConaghy and Dick Whitehead were the unsung heroes that worked the blocking back spot. Buddy Shoaf and Leon Briggs backed up the line with much success. Dave Smythe and Jimmy Gill were the able ends with John Cassell, Sam Rae, and Eddie Sharpe ready reserves.

Dink Engleby with Sam Bohon were the main tackles, Lloyd Straub and Eldrige Vest were their confident reserves. James Butts and Jack Guilfolye handled the guard positions, with Kirk Myers and James Fitzgerald backing them up. Charles Rush and Rudy Keffer shared the center post.

The Team

Basket Ball

Basket ball has always held an important place in the sports field at Jefferson. During the past several years, Coach A. D. Hurt has developed some very excellent teams. This year's cagers were no exception.

Several casualties hampered the team, but by no means dismayed the players. The loss of Jimmy Akers was, though serious, taken with no disheartenedness. Several players suffered physical casualties of a slight degree; however, these were quickly overcome, and no occasion was more than one game missed.

Captain Billy Flint led the Magicians' scoring as well as otherwise, and as expected, proved to be the number one man. Clay Bear's speed was a great asset, as was Wilson Balthis' dribbling. The reach and height of Norris Thompson, "Ab" Ellet and Bill Kirk proved valuable in all games. Kearny, McQuilkin and Billy Atkinson saw plenty of action, their all-round good playing coming in handy plenty of times. Robert Houff and John Hildebrand were two able members who were an important part in most games.

Track

Manager Carmines

Coach Craft

J. Wade, Sponsor of Spring Track

T. Beckley, Sponsor of Indoor Track

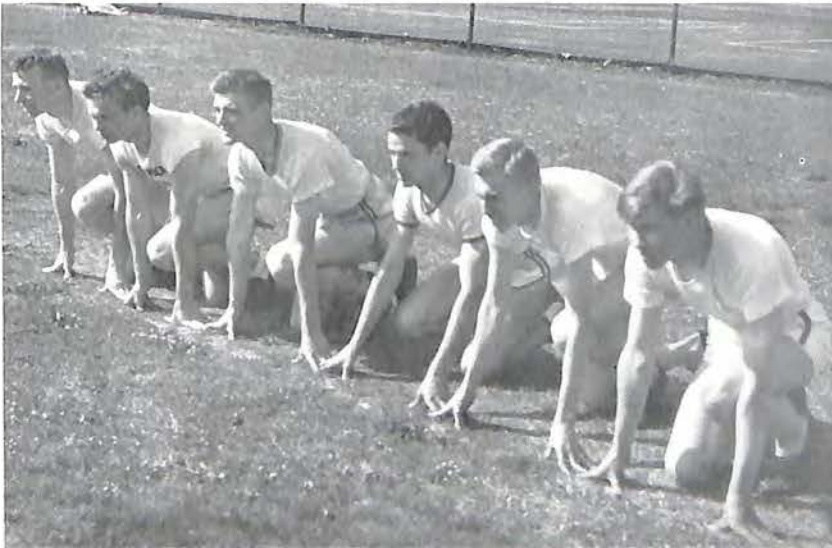

The "hard luck" team would be an appropriate title for this year's track squad. Besides having several of its members knocked out at the beginning of the season with broken bones and sprained ankles, namely Bob Fagg, Coach S. I. Craft got his commission in the Navy one meet before the end of the season. Walter Edwards, leading man, was confined to his bed because of illness three days before the State meet, but in spite of this he placed second in the mile run.

Harry Walton, as usual, was leading quarter miler, setting a new school record. Harry also competed in the high jump, broad jump and half-mile run.

Sammy Rae, with Buddy Sexton following in his tracks, was all-dash man. Sammy also led in javelin, shot, and discus, and was second man in the high jump.

Pete Myers with Bob Paine was good for plenty of points in the half and the mile, as was Bob Mason. Harvey Smallwood was number one man in the low hurdles, and Dick Whitehead pulled in plenty of points in the dashes.

Intramurals

This spring at Jefferson, in an assembly of all the boys of the school, presided over by Mr. Riddick, the coaches and athletic directors of the school, outlined an attractive program of spring sports open to the boys of Jefferson. This program was new and different in that, instead of laying emphasis on building up a team for winning in competition with other teams, it stressed athletics for all. A basket ball tournament was arranged. A tennis tournament was played and every afternoon a large group of boys was seen, as above, engaged in playing volley ball. Girls also participated in intramural sports.

Although this was the first year an intramural program has been tried on a large scale at Jefferson, it met with unexpected success. It is hoped that this trend will continue and more of the boys of the school will avail themselves of this opportunity.

Girls' Sports

The health of the girls is 50% of the health of the nation, and girls' athletics were not neglected at Jefferson this year. Under the able leadership of Miss Dorothy Snedegar, herself an athlete of ability, the girls had a large and active Monogram Club, which is pictured at the left.

Swimming at the Y. W., these girls attempt a floating figure. This swimming is accepted as credit on gym work, and many girls choose it.

Coordination and rhythm were emphasized in the wand drill, which was exhibited on the football field between halves one Saturday afternoon with the band furnishing the music.

50 IS A LOT OF YEARS

On October 16, 1891, International Correspondence Schools enrolled its first student.

In the same year, Jefferson Senior High School started out on its long career of service to this Community. Each institution, unique in its particular field, has made life more worth living for the thousands of students who have enrolled for the various courses offered.

On this auspicious occasion, I. C. S. takes pleasure in saluting Jefferson Senior High and wishing for it many more years of continued usefulness to this community.

Yes, 50 is a lot of years—but the mission of the I. C. S. has just begun. Today, more than ever before, American industry and American workers understand the need for practical, up-to-date training.

And today, when America's security lies in America's ability to produce, I. C. S. is proud of the part it plays in helping to raise the productivity of individuals and organizations engaged in vital defense industries, through Modern Training.

Anyone interested in improving his position should get in touch with

CONGRATULATIONS
ON YOUR 50th ANNIVERSARY!

We, too, are celebrating an anniversary—our 13th year of steady growth and conscientious service to advertisers. A service which is based not only on creative ability and a comprehensive knowledge of advertising, merchandising, and public relations practices, but also upon a constant, thorough, and sympathetic understanding of each client's selling problems.

What plans do you have for the future after graduation? Do you know that Chiropractic offers sincere, earnest people a great opportunity, in an uncrowded field, to be of matchless service in getting sick people well?

Chiropractic is scientific in its methods, correct in its principles and effective in results obtained because it harmonizes so completely with the laws of nature.

If you are interested in Chiropractic as a field of service, write to the Palmer School of Chiropractic, Davenport, Iowa, about their curriculum. Or, if you prefer, consult us in our office.

Listen in over WDBJ Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, at 10 o'clock, to the Health Chat program, for information about Chiropractic for better health.

Entertainment to Fit Every Purse

You Graduates!

Now that you have finished high school, what are you going to do about it? Are you going to sit down and take stock of yourselves? Are you going to try and reason out what it's all about? If you'll do this you'll have a great revelation. You'll then be able to give thanks that you were created a human being. You'll realize what a glorious world you live in. Something else you'll realize is that it is more fun and joy and glory in a work well done than trying to get by the easy way. So, keep on studying as long as you live that you may work and be helpful to the end of your days. For only when you live in a way that you leave the world better for your living can you hope to win the ultimate victory.

The "Annual" Result

For two generations the STONE imprint on college yearbooks has carried with it the assurance of high-quality printing and "on-time" delivery. We handle the entire production job, with careful supervision from beginning to end. Working in close cooperation with the editors and staff members of college annuals, our skilled artists plan the layout. Half-tone illustrations are made under the direction of engraving experts. The utmost care in printing and binding produce a finished job of which any school may well be proud.
