Roanoke, Virginia
Foreword

In this, your 1953 Acorn Annual, we of the staff present to you... Jefferson—School of Magic. This is a picture story of your friends, your classes, your life, and your "Magic" moments; and is presented with the hope that in future years it will become your "Magic" memory book.

Magicians . . .
The ideal situation is one in which the home, school, and community work together... the PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATION is the agency which makes this possible... helping to make the student's three years at Jefferson the happiest and most fruitful period of his life... from the mystified Sophomore to the dignified Senior, dazzled by his exalted position... supporting many drives for worth-while purposes... raising money to be used for the benefit of the students... quarterly meetings... frequent study courses... all these keep parents informed of their child's studies and his progress in this, our SCHOOL OF MAGIC.
DR. D. E. McQUILKIN... coming to Roanoke to teach English at Roanoke High School in 1900... becoming Principal in 1912... Superintendent of Roanoke City Public Schools since 1918... fourteen schools in Roanoke at that time... Dr. McQuilkin... receiving his B.A. Degree in English from West Virginia University... his Master of Arts Degree from Harvard University... finally, the greatest honor of all, Doctor of Humane Letters from Roanoke College, in 1949. Roanoke School system changing... two hundred twenty-three teachers employed in 1918... six hundred twenty-six teachers in 1953... eight thousand one hundred forty-nine pupils in 1948... in 1953, fourteen thousand eighty-two pupils...
The center of the educational system is the principal with his assistants. Activities of over 1,300 people must be co-ordinated. The responsibilities are shared by the principal and assistant principal. Duties of the principal as an executive, educator, and personnel director are manifold in managing a system as extensive as ours. Mapping out various methods of procedure, supervising the activities and curriculum of the school, presenting the school's needs to the superintendent, making talks to many civic clubs, working with individual students concerning their problems, acting as liaison officer between school, home, and public for the benefit of all.
planning and scheduling . . .

ACTIVITIES OFFICE . . . center of the business system of our school . . . MR. McNEACE . . . bearing the brunt of all financial matters . . . always striving to keep Jefferson out of "the red" . . . giving us the benefit of the best with a minimum of expense . . . the business manager of all athletics . . . making the necessary arrangements for rooms and meals for our teams . . . setting the dates for games . . . business manager for all forensic activities and publications . . . in truth, he holds the purse strings for the school . . . always willing to appropriate money for necessary purposes, but only for necessary ones . . . MISS PARRISH, his secretary . . . ably assisting him in his duties . . . issuing and accounting for all books . . . selling school supplies . . . "saving the day" for many who have run out of these necessities . . . selling all kinds of tickets . . . seasonal football . . . student tickets for college games . . . and plays . . . handling subscriptions and payment of Senior, Junior, and Sophomore dues . . . general all-around, never-ending bookkeeping.

MISS CHESNEY and MRS. MORRISSETT in the main office . . . receiving and carrying out the directions which make the school run on schedule . . . preparing college applications, a large item requiring much detailed work . . . many everyday duties . . . answering endless telephone calls . . . making up the home-room notices and absentee lists . . . keeping records of each student throughout his three years at Jefferson . . . indelible records of our successes and failures.
reading shakespeare, shelley, and sandburg . . .

ENGLISH . . . foundation for all the other subjects . . . an opportunity for creative writing and self-expression . . . essays . . . themes . . . debates . . . book reports . . . climaxed by the ever-dreaded Senior Theme . . . practice in writing business and social letters . . . poise and confidence gained by talks given in class . . . fascinating stories from literature of all ages . . . mystic realms of long ago . . . places unheard of today . . . acquiring taste for the great masterpieces of literature . . . comparing past writers with those of the present . . . forming friendships with authors and the characters they create . . . a joy in the future to recall the passages memorized . . . although a seemingly arduous task now . . . tracing the development of the English Language from its incipiency . . . grammar . . . drilling over and over . . . proving that "practice makes perfect" . . . realizing the importance of spelling in everyday life . . . English used unendingly throughout life.

Magicians seen in the halls . . . mumbling mysterious equations . . . \( X + Y = XY \) . . . \( A^2 + B^2 = C^2 \) . . . \( ZN + CL_2 = ZNCL_2 \) . . . are not inmates of a mental institution . . . but merely apprentices of MATHEMATICS and SCIENCE in this school of magic . . . use made of symbols and letters unfamiliar to the rest of the school . . . test tubes . . . dissecting knives . . . compasses . . . and pencils, of course . . . all familiar tools . . . hours of going over and over a problem . . . to find some careless mistake . . . tedious but interesting . . . learning to calculate the height of a flag pole without actually measuring it . . . cruelly cutting up a fish stiff with formaldehyde . . . combining chemicals . . . horrible odors and ghastly colors produced . . . always afraid that something will blow up . . . all making Science one of the most fascinating subjects offered in our curriculum . . . realizing the close link between the sciences and mathematics . . . stressing the practical and cultural values of each . . . applying what we have learned more and more in our daily lives.
finding out about the past . . .

Miss Mary B. Duncan
Chairman of History Department
Mrs. Ethel J. Field
Mr. C. L. Pitzer, Jr.

HISTORY . . . one of the most valuable subjects offered in high school . . . a basis for understanding this modern world's problems . . . "To know nothing of the past is to understand little of the present and to comprehend nothing of the future" . . . characteristics and qualities of the famous leaders of the past seen reflected in the lives of our present-day leaders . . . profiting from past experience . . . enabling us to avoid the same mistakes made in the past . . . the world of tomorrow is in the hands of today's youth . . . realizing the necessity of learning the fundamentals of good government to be able to act in a mature and intelligent manner . . . understanding the various functions of the three departments of our government . . . learning the causes and prevention of crime . . . comprehending the working of our complex financial system . . . appreciation of the great American heritage, our Constitution . . . guaranteeing full freedom of speech, press, and religion . . . realizing the sacrifices made by our ancestors to give us these precious liberties . . . resolving to preserve them for our posterity . . . always thankful for our beautiful land . . . learning the best ways to conserve our natural resources . . . realization of our responsibilities as citizens . . . informing ourselves of our duties as future leaders . . . better qualified as adults to take our turn at the mighty wheel of progress.

SOPHOMORES ... the younger set ... standing at the doorway of a new world ... a new school ... big and cold on the outside ... warm and friendly inside ...

First impressions ... new teachers ... strange rooms ... crowds of new people ... later to become well known ... and well loved ...

The months march on ... get acquainted ... becoming a part of school life ... study ... exams ... cram ... the first year creeps by ... and we are left with great expectations for our Junior year.
