BEFORE BEING REMOVED DUE TO CONSTRUCTION, THE CAVE SPRING FLAGS STAND AT ATTENTION.

Another institution set to leave was social studies teacher Ms. Linda Long. Long, who came to Cave Spring after leaving Hidden Valley Middle School in 1983, retired after 39 years of teaching. "I'm looking forward to my retirement because I'm excited to travel in my motorhome and not have to be back on Sunday night in order to go to work on Monday," she said. "In my retirement, I will miss the students. I have been blessed to teach some really great young men and women. I will also miss the teachers I work with, especially the social studies department. I really love what I do and I chose a great career that has given back to me in more ways than I could have ever imagined."

A MOVING TRUCK SITS IN FRONT OF UNFINISHED TRAILERS ON THE NEW CAVE SPRING CAMPUS. The school's contents were supposed to be moved over Winter Break; however, unexpected hurdles in construction forced a delay in schedule. "Originally, I thought the move and trailers were a terrible idea. They took a long time to plan it all out, but then there were still some problems when we moved in," senior Amanda Bowman said. "The walkways weren't finished, and the bathrooms didn't work properly. But, now it seems like everything has worked out."

FENCING, CONSTRUCTION EQUIPMENT AND TRAILERS ARE THE NEW NORMAL FOR STUDENTS AT CAVE SPRING HIGH SCHOOL.

Students and faculty both had to get used to a new way of life. Some weren't fans of their new environment, but some liked the change of scenery. "My least favorite part about the trailers is having to go outside between classes, whether it's to print or use the bathroom," junior CJ Williams said. "I like the trailers. They're brand new, so they're nice and clean. Each one has windows, so they're always bright. I also love being able to eat outside for lunch each day," junior Riley Freccero said.

A PARTIALLY-DESTROYED ANNEX LAYS IN RUIN ON THE GROUND. Originally added in the 1980s, the annex was partially razed early on in the renovation process. "It's really weird driving by the school and seeing old classrooms being torn down and the school completely empty. I spent three years in that building, so it's strange to think everything is going to be completely changed. At least the students coming up will have an awesome, new learning environment," senior Taylor Loving said.

PURE JOY ON THEIR FACES, junior Kobey Simon and senior Marc Sharrer run across the field after snagging the first-ever state championship for the boys' soccer team. The team defeated York High School at Roanoke College at the close of their 2017-2018 season. "Everyone's goal was to win states, but I was in absolute shock when it actually happened," Simon said. "What we had just accomplished felt surreal and unbelievable. The win meant a lot, because it was the first state title for our school's soccer program."

BREATHTAKING LANDSCAPES GREETED EF TRAVELERS ON EACH LEG OF THE COSTA RICA EXPEDITION.

Travelers on the Education First tour spent nine days exploring the Central American destination, spending time in locations such as Tortuguero, Sarapiquí and the Arenal Region. "Going to Costa Rica was the first time I'd left the country and the first time I'd been away from my family for so long. I was terrified, but I'm so glad I decided to go," senior Rachel Boch said. "Not only did I get to experience a different culture, but I got to know classmates I wouldn't normally hang out with."

THE GROUP WHO TRAVELED TO COSTA RICA ENJOYED A NINE-DAY TRIP THAT ALLOWED NEW AND OLD FRIENDS TO BOND. Whether it was a boat ride in the middle of a jungle, cleaning a beach or playing soccer with local school children (clockwise), travelers immersed themselves in the country's rich culture. "When given the chance, enjoy what other cultures provide. I have found this advice allows you to leave much happier than when you arrived and will give you a refreshing perspective about the lives of others and even yourself," senior Audric Gayo said.

KAYAKS ALIGNED FOR A GROUP PICTURE, travelers enjoy a calm ride on Arenal Lake. The group not only enjoyed kayaking, but were also able to snorkel and go white-water rafting in class II and III rapids on the Sarapiquí River. "When I saw what we would be doing in Costa Rica, I was most excited for white water rafting. I've done it before, but the previous time didn't compare to our time in Costa Rica. It was an experience I'll never forget," senior Taylor Loving said. WHILE AT A LOCAL MARKET, senior Anna Gentiluomo speaks in Spanish with a papaya vendor. Gentiluomo put her AP Spanish skills to work during the Central America trip. "I was trying to find out how to pick a ripe papaya so I asked the woman which fruit was the best. It was also cool to talk and play with kids at an elementary school in their native language," she said. SHOWING OFF SOME IMPRESSIVE JUMP-ROPE SKILLS, senior Travis Schuck plays with elementary school children while visiting a school. While there, travelers visited classrooms, talked with students and teachers and watched a dance presentation. "One of my favorite parts of the trip was when we visited an elementary school in Tortuguero. The kids treated us to a cool dance presentation and then we played some games afterwards. I did some jump rope with them and they showed me up," Schuck said. SHOCKED BY THE TEMPERATURE OF A WATERFALL, seniors Sara Stewart, Casey Fentress and Grace Wetzel stand under one of the many waterfalls at a hot spring resort. Local springs fed multiple pools at the resort, with temperatures reaching over 100-degrees in some pools. "The waterfalls were a blast. The water was so hot, it felt like an exotic shower with a ton of strangers," Wetzel said.

TAKING ON A LOCAL TORTUGUERO STUDENT IN A FRIENDLY GAME OF SOCCER, senior Katie Harris enjoys an active day at a local elementary school. Students enjoyed activities, such as dancing and soccer, during their daily recess breaks. "My favorite memory was playing soccer with the kids. I loved seeing the smiles on all their faces and how much they enjoyed the little things like going out and playing a pickup game with people they don't even share the same language with," Harris said. "Seeing how two different groups of people can connect through small activities was amazing."

say WHAT?

"I always speak Spanish when I am at home with my family. I started learning English when I was nine years old."
Oliver Hernandez, 9

"My mom speaks English, but my dad, who is from the Czech Republic, speaks Czech. I am fluent and have spoken in both languages since I could speak."
Josphe Kupidlovsky, 10

"Portuguese is my first language. I learned it before English. When my mom's family comes over to visit, that's the only form of communication we use."
Giovanna Gilbert, 11

"I speak a mixture of Nepali and English in my home, but mostly Nepali. Sometimes I serve as a translator for my parents."
Abhinav Khanal, 12

the SMELLY BOYS

Twenty-two travelers journeyed to Costa Rica, but four formed a special bond and dubbed themselves the "Smelly Boys." Entertaining, fun-loving and, well, smelly, seniors Ethan Harris, Andrew Ditmore, Garrett Breiner and Matthew Colozza left their mark on Central America.

Ethan Harris: "Being a smelly boy is probably my most dearly-held honor and means more than could ever be expressed with words. Whenever I'm with with these guys or think of them, I realize how much I love them and how I will likely never have a group of friends like this again. We have a lot of fun, and our time together is never absent of a good laugh."

Andrew Ditmore: "The bond held amongst the smelly boys is one that shant be broken. This group is the pinnacle of brotherhood. The time spent with this group of young, ravenous, and might I say handsome, men is what hanging with the boys is all about. I wouldn't trade it for anything in the world."

Garrett Breiner: "I am proud to be a smelly boy because it represents strength in unity. We have all been with each other through the good and the bad. Our 'club' represents the importance of relationships. No matter how far we are from each other next year, we will always be there to support our bros."

Matthew Colozza: "The smelly boys represent a bond that is unbreakable. It is a constant reminder that no matter what happens in my life, I will always have my boys there for me. My fellow members are some of the strongest and most supporting people I know. We shared an incredible experience in Costa Rica, as well as many more afterwards that not many other people get to have with their best friends."

CONFES

I learned more about the men's department at Macy's in gov class than actual gov...

When I was in preschool I thought I was home and began undressing in the hallway

I have been in love with Brooke Fretwell since we first met in 7th grade

I jumped around like a frog when I was in third grade.

In first grade, we had a pajama day. I forgot about it and went to school in a regular outfit and wanted to be a part of it so I took off my pants and went the whole school day in my underwear and no one said anything. I lost my pants and when I got home my dad was embarrassed of me.

I had a crush on my 2nd grade teacher & cried when everyone found out

I'm almost an adult and my mom still doesn't let me go on dates w/o her approval

I put sunflower seeds in my friend's orange juice 😊

Last Christmas I spilled my mom's red wine by accident on my grandmas white rug... I blamed my little sister and she got screamed at by my parents and my OCD Grandmother. Still haven't come forward.

MY FRIEND PEEED ON MY GRANDMA'S FLOOR AND BLAMED IT ON MY DOG. SHE FIGURED IT OUT.

I'm single and not ready to mingle.

I still feel bad ☹️ in 7th grade I came out as gay to Mrs. Sarver because I was tired and didn't want her to talk to me.

When I was in kindergarten, I had trouble doing jumping jacks... and took my aggression about this out on the boys by beating them up. I spent a lot of time in the principal's office ☹️

HE EARTHQUAKE
PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI, ON TUESDAY,
JANUARY 12,

2010, AND WE HAD NO TIME TO PREPARE FOR THIS DISASTER.

It came out of nowhere. I was outside and everything around me started to shake.

The ground that I was standing on fell out from under me, and I fell into a ditch. After that, a building fell on my body, crushing my right quad to pieces. I also suffered a severe brain injury. Next thing I knew, I was waking up from a coma in the hospital. I spent a year in a wheelchair. I went to physical therapy every day. I had to learn how to walk again.

A group from the United States traveled to Haiti to help those in need after the earthquake hit. In that group were the couple who would eventually adopt me. The group was able to bring me to the States, so that I could have surgery on my leg. Arriving in America was very nerve-racking and scary. Seeing so many white people was different from what I was used to. I didn't speak any English and didn't know where I was going.

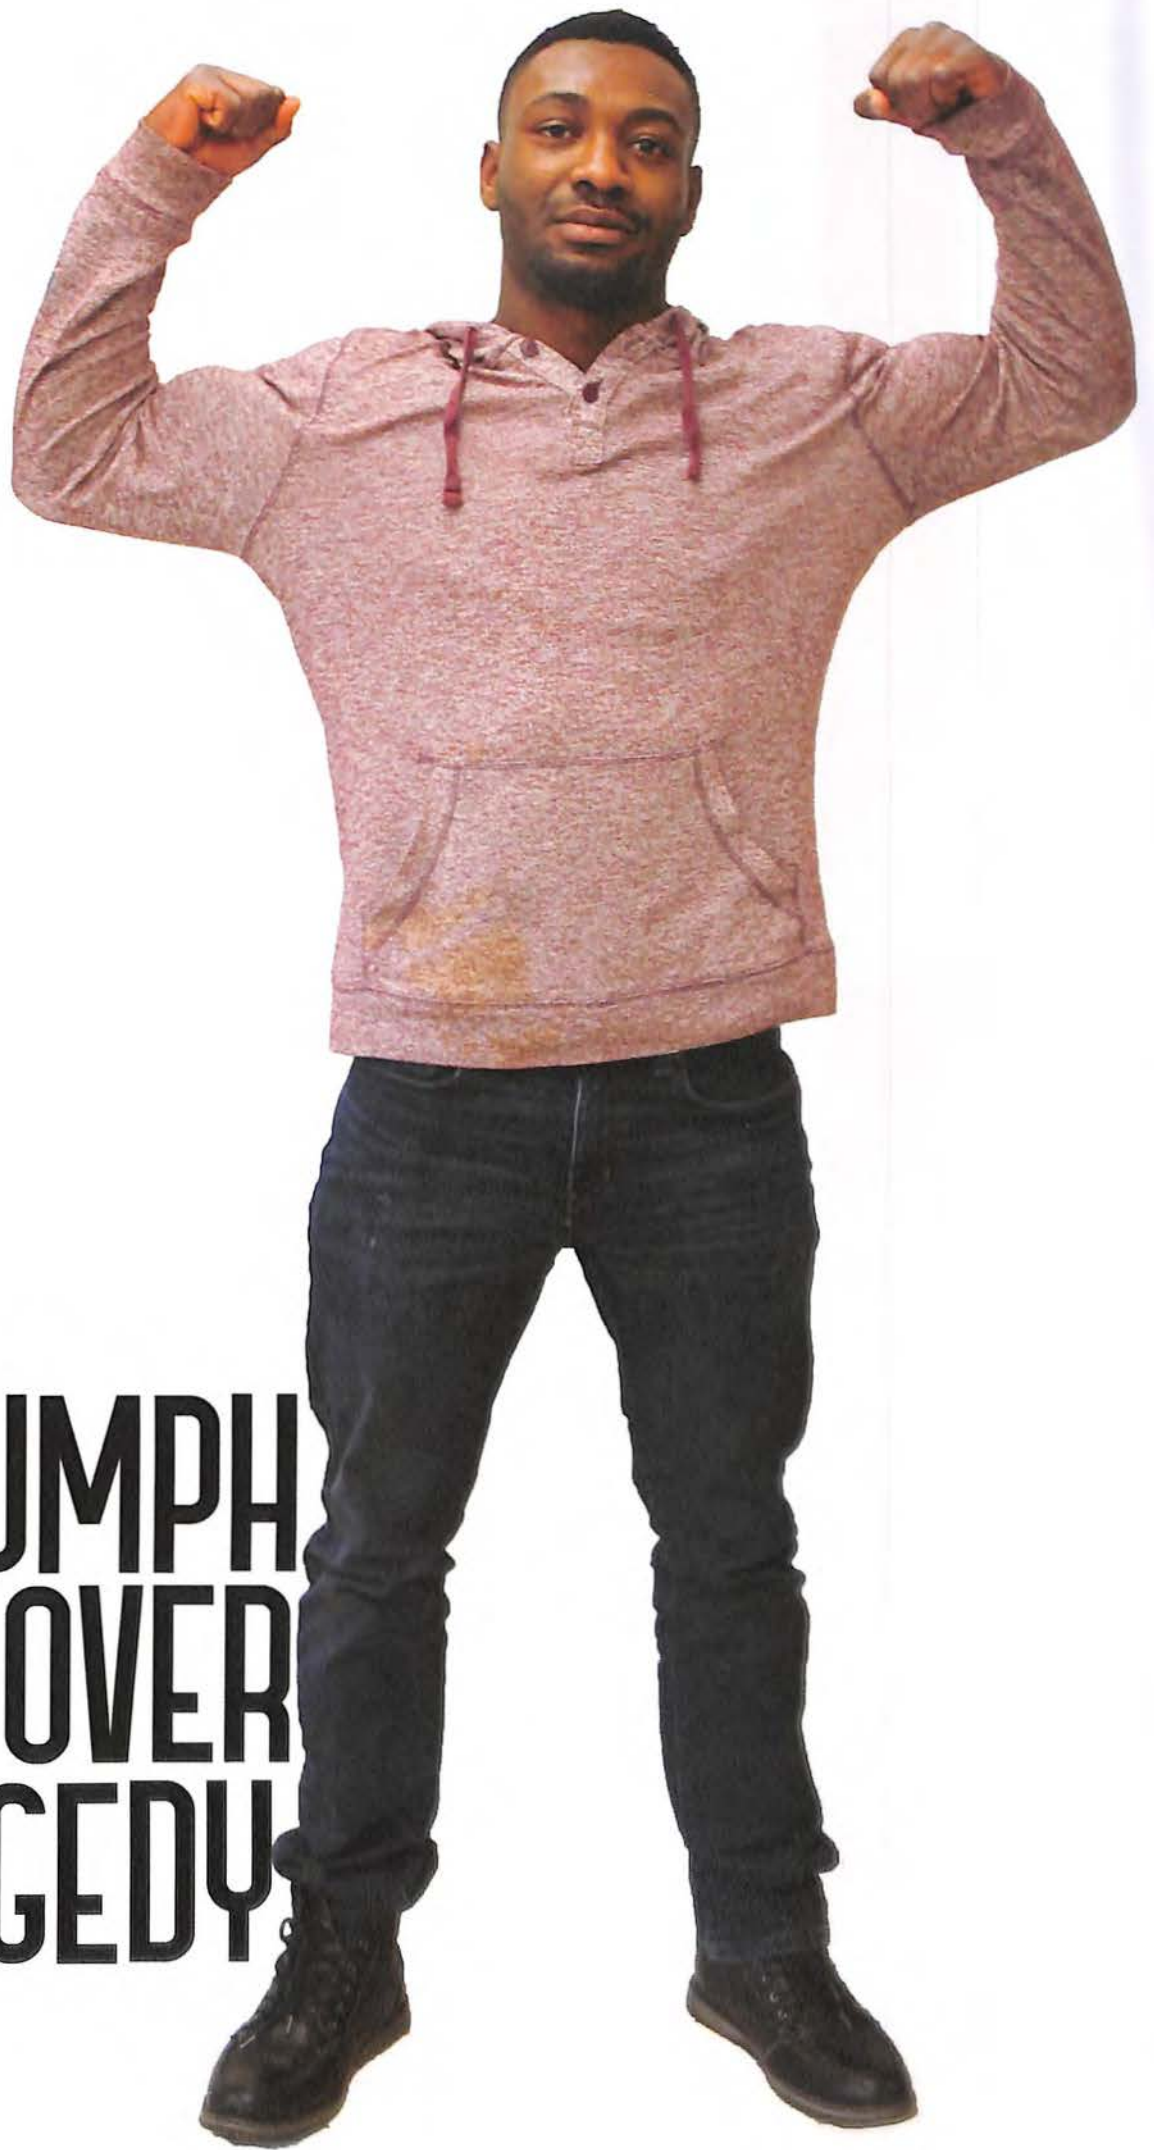

I stayed with my future parents while I was recovering from the surgery. When it was time to go home, they told me they wanted to adopt me and asked if I would stay. Both of my parents had died when I was very young in Haiti. My mother died in childbirth, and my dad died from lung cancer due to debris and pollution. I jumped at the chance to have parents.

It was very hard adjusting to the lifestyle here. It took me a year to learn how to speak English. I'm still struggling, but getting better all the time. Throughout my time here, though, my adoptive parents have been very supportive of me, and I'm so grateful for the chance they've given me. My parents got me into wrestling, which is a sport I've grown to love. I hope to wrestle in college and have had schools reach out to me already.

I'm always thinking about what's further down the road. I make a point to keep working on myself and always stay positive. Some advice I could give anyone after going through what I went through is to keep your head up and stay positive throughout anything.

TRIUMPH

"This past summer I went to Utah with my brother's girlfriend, Mary Beth, because she was moving out there to live with him. We drove, and it was probably one of the longest trips of my life.

We traveled through West Virginia, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and Utah. The total trip without stopping is around 26 hours, but we stopped and visited landmarks, so it ended up taking around three days. We saw the Arch in St. Louis, Missouri, and in Louisville, Kentucky, we saw the world's biggest slugger bat. We tried to go see the world's largest ball of twine in Kansas, but then Mary Beth's car overheated and broke down in the middle of literally nowhere. It was so scary because I was driving. The car just started to slow down, even though my foot was all the way on the gas pedal. It wouldn't go past 30 mph. We had to trudge along to the nearest gas station so we could cool down the car, but it was six miles away."

NEVER GIVE UP

The boys' soccer team finished their season with their first state championship. They were victorious against York High School, after senior Marc Sharrer kicked a second-half winning goal. The final score was 1-0. This was the first time a boys team in the Roanoke Valley has ever won a state title in soccer.

TAKING A CLOSER LOOK

Junior Austin Hayden and senior Marc Sharrer weigh in on the state title

CELEBRATING THEIR VICTORY OVER YORK, senior Matthew Taylor and alumnus CJ Poulsen throw their hands in the air. Both boys played all four years on the school team. "Everything else faded away. I was entirely in the moment and felt nothing but pure amazement," Taylor said. HANDS STRETCHED TO THE SKY, alumnus Alireza Esmaeili, lays on the ground overcome with relief from a never-before-seen win at the state championship game. Senior Marc Sharrer's goal in the second half secured the win. "I've always had the dream to win a championship game, and it finally came true," senior Nic Plybon said. JUMPING FOR A HEADER, senior Brian King defends the Knight's goal. King served as the team's center back. "The whole game was a blur, but I think we all felt unbeatable that day," he said. FACE FULL OF DETERMINATION, senior Baylor Boone kicks to return the ball. Boone and his team beat the York County Falcons for the state championship win. "It was like a dream come true. All of our hard work finally paid off. Hearing all of our fans yelling and pounding the bleachers as the clock expired sent chills down my spine. It's a feeling and memory I will never forget," he said.

AUSTIN HAYDEN (11): What helped us out the most on the way to states was our leadership across the field. They led us through the tough games where the scores were close. Then when we started playing region and state games at Roanoke College. We were lucky to have the home field advantage. It was insane to hear the fans cheering us on and it was just an incredible feeling. I remember during our championship game, I kept thinking, "Don't mess this up. Don't mess this up." I kept waiting for one more shot until the whistle blew. When it finally blew and we won, it didn't feel real. Competing at states again would be the ultimate goal, so we will see if we can do that. I think we have another shot at it this year. I expect every team will be gunning for us, especially since they're the ones who thought they could beat us.

MARC SHARRER (12): Playing soccer with a bunch of random people is fun, but playing with a bunch of best friends is life-changing. I think that close connection between all the team members and coaches is what enabled us to work together, communicate effectively and ultimately find success. I like any other state championship-winning team, the hope is definitely not to relax. Doing many hardworking seasons will have an impact on our team chemistry in the upcoming season, but I'm confident we can overcome. Throughout my soccer career, I had the honor of receiving recognitions such as "Best Player on the Field" and "The Team of the State." Scoring multiple state-winning goals was also a highlight. A year will be when they graduate, but we'll miss it. The last year representing Cave Spring in the field and putting it all in for us that comes with a season's state title.

The competition cheer team and the girls' tennis team both dominated their opponents and took home a third state championship title, while sophomore Ricardo Harrington snagged his first state wrestling title.

DISTRICT CHAMPION TROPHY IN HAND, senior Kayla Quinlan beams after a win on the mat. Quinlan was named Second All Region and Second All State. "Our coaches pushed us to our limits every single day and practices were exhausting. But, when we started to question why we put ourselves through it day after day, they reminded us how hard work pays off. And it did," she said. "I will never forget the feeling when they called our name for first place."

SWEPT UP BY HER TEAM AFTER HEARING THE FIRST-PLACE NEWS, freshman Burley Nichols embraces freshman Caroline Mills on the mat in Richmond. The competition cheer squad took home their third state win at the close of their 2018-2019 season. "When we won, it felt like the world stopped. Everything was in slow motion. It was the best feeling ever. I realized then that every hard, long practice was worth it," Nichols said.

SPINNING THROUGH THE AIR, sophomore Madison Wagner perfects her part of the state-championship winning routine. Wagner, who was born with a knee condition, didn't let any obstacle hold her back from competing. "I was born with patellar maltracking in both of my knees, which is where the bone that keeps your kneecap in line is angled to the side instead of straight down your leg. After winning states last year, I underwent surgery. The healing process takes a long time, and there were moments where I thought I couldn't keep going. I am currently healing from surgery number three and only have one more to go," Wagner said. "I think winning any competition is both a team and personal award. I know how hard I worked and how hard my surgery was on me. I'm proud to know I fought through the barriers in my way."

AFTER BEING AWARDED FIRST TEAM ALL DISTRICT AND ALL STATE, senior Mimi Clark raises her arm in triumph. Clark and the competition cheer squad took home their third state title win. "I received First Team All Region, First Team All State and VHSL 3A Cheerleader of the Year, all of which fulfilled the dream I've had since freshman year. This year's state title was the second of my career," Clark said. "I couldn't be more proud of my team."

FISTS CLENCHED, sophomore Ricardo Harrington celebrates his state victory on the mat. Harrington also dominated in the Knights of the Roundtable and Big Blue Invitational. "Winning states was one of the best feelings ever," Harrington said. "To get to this point, I always went hard in practice, did extra reps and never took breaks. I had a pretty decent relationship with my teammates, so that also pushed me to work harder."

TAKING A CLOSER LOOK

Junior Nandini Sriram, senior Grace Holderman and sophomores Josie Beheler and Payton Harman weigh in on their state championship.

GRACE HOLDERMAN (12): "Our small team loved practicing together and it was a really good collaborative experience. Winning the state championship was a great feeling. All of the hard work and the commitment from February to the beginning of summer was worth it. This was my second experience on the team as a state champion but the team has three total state titles. I was Second Team All Timesland and Second Team All District. I would like to win states again and personally would like to do well in singles and doubles. This season is my last and I will miss all of the people on the team but it will be nice to be a captain and leader. I committed in December to Randolph Macon and received an academic scholarship."

JOSIE BEHELER (10): "Winning states as a freshman made me feel like I didn't really know what was happening. The feeling was just too good to be true. I hope that we will make it as far this season. I feel like we are just as good so I think states are a possibility. I just wish everyone the best."

NANDINI SRIRAM (11): "I am able to get back up because of my teammates. I think we made it to states partially because of that. Last season, I was ranked number four on the team. I would love to improve my skills and jump to rank two or one. Winning the state championship was exciting because it was my first one. In the semifinals, we actually thought we were going to lose to Western Albemarle. We barely squeaked by with a score of 5-4 and went on to the state finals. Surprisingly, states was easier than semifinals. We went in confident, knowing we could win."

PAYTON HARMAN (10): "Winning states as a freshman was really exciting. Honestly, semifinals was a lot trickier than finals, so it was relieving knowing the score wouldn't be close the whole match. It went really well and I was so proud of my team. We lost a lot of great seniors from last year, but our current team is really good. We have some solid top picks. I'm looking forward to a great season!"

STARTED
GYMNASTICS
WHEN I WAS TWO YEARS OLD
BECAUSE I HAD BOUNDLESS

ENERGY, AND MY MOM WANTED ME IN A SPORT WHERE I COULD

CHANNEL THAT ENERGY. Fourteen years later, I am going into my ninth consecutive season of gymnastics at Roanoke Academy, where I am in Excel Diamond.

My family spends probably several thousands of dollars each year on travel, competition fees and other miscellaneous expenses, but the cost is worth it to us. I've competed at meets where I've had the opportunity to qualify for world teams. I've had amazing experiences competing both with and against collegiate athletes. I've been allowed the chance to work with former Olympians, who have become mentors and helped me understand things only people with their level of experience could. Both competing and training with athletes like these has taught me valuable skills that have more to do than just with gymnastics but performing in general. The mental aspects of gymnastics are the most difficult to me, because in order to be able to perform the skills, I must be completely focused on what I'm doing all the time. Otherwise, it won't end up well at all. The only time I've ever been disappointed in myself is when I've decided a skill is too much for me or when I didn't think I'd be able to complete something. I've always had coaches and teammates, however, who are there to support me and get me through those times, so, that in the end, I was able to accomplish what I was trying to achieve. I have won states the last three years in a row, on floor, beam and bars. The bars event is my favorite. It involves such a unique apparatus and not a lot of people are able to perform in such an event. I have a lot of fun while on the bars and love learning new skills to compete on them. This last season has been the most important to me. I was hurt while practicing and was forced to take off six months. I fell on my head and spent nine weeks in a neck brace with a severe concussion. I was released to come back in the middle of the season. My coaches didn't think I'd be able to compete or qualify in order to get to meets by May. However, I was able to get well by my first competition, and then I went to states. This competition wasn't about placing or the scores, it was just the fact that I was able to get back to doing what no one thought I would be able to do again. I'm often asked what winning feels like. To me, winning feels like missing out on social events, friends and parties, but also having the dedication needed to get to that moment. In the end, the sacrifice is all worth it.

UNDER THOSE FRIDAY-NIGHT LIGHTS, senior quarterback Jacob Knight looks to his teammates as they prepare for the remainder of the game. "A lot of people who used to go to Cave Spring come out, so it's always a good game with a great crowd," Knight said. The Knights fell to the Cougars, 0-34. M.C. HOUSTONATER, OTHERWISE KNOWN AS MS. ANNE HOUSTON, greets her fans at the pep rally. Teachers dressed up as celebrities who came to the school because of their curiosity over construction. "Haters gonna hate, players gonna play but I'm still going to be Gucci. Keeping it real 24-7," Houston said. AS HIS TEAM RACES AGAINST TIME, Mr. Ryan Poff slides into a hula hoop during a pep rally game. Teachers and students competed against one another. "Who says football coaches can't hoop! I am super competitive, so it was nice to get that 'W.'" Watching the students and adults all working together on the same team for a common goal demonstrates what we should be working toward in education," Poff said.

A postponed pep rally and earlier-than-ever start to spirit week didn't do anything to dampen the spirits of students (and faculty) celebrating Homecoming 2018.

CELEBRATE HULA HOOP

SEEMINGLY DEFYING GRAVITY, senior Ben Bryant, the 59th knight, jumps in the air after "defeating" two Pulaski County cougars, played by seniors Matthew Colozza and Andrew Ditmore. Each year, the knight battled an opposing team's mascot as part of a pep rally skit. "I was incredibly honored to serve as the last knight in the original castle. I felt the responsibility of stoking that fire that lies at the heart of our school's spirit," Bryant said. "In the middle of the excitement of the pep rally, I looked out at my peers and grew content in the realization that although I may be moving on to the next chapter of life, our school's spirit will never fail. I will carry that pride with me forever."

SENIOR HOMECOMING KING MARC SHARER, QUEEN INGRID DIAZ, PRINCE BAYLOR BOONE AND PRINCESS BLAKE SMITH pose together for the obligatory winners picture after being named court winners. Students vote on members of the senior class for this honor. "I'd never been nominated for homecoming court before, so it was a huge surprise. When they called my name for princess, I was shocked. I didn't expect it, but I am thankful nonetheless," Smith said. WAITING FOR THEIR TURN ON THE TURF, FRESHMAN JA'LONY BANKS AND SENIOR JACK PARKER watch momentarily from the sidelines. Parker played both offense and defense, both as left tackle and nose guard. "I was very excited and ready to play. I knew the student section was going to be crowded and loud. Three out of my four grandparents were going to be there, along with my parents and sister, so I wanted to play well," Parker said. "The game didn't go the way we wanted; it was a disappointing, hard loss. It was nice to have a full house and hear everyone cheering for us, though. Some of our parents had big cardboard pictures of our head made this year and looking in student section to see them being held up was an awesome feeling." WHILE IN FRONT OF THE HOMECOMING PEP RALLY CROWD, junior Livvie Bowling holds up her sign, encouraging the crowd to chant along with the cheerleaders. Bowling and her competition cheer teammates took home the state championship more than a month after homecoming. "I love cheering at that pep rally because it's the only time we perform that's not against another team. It's our first performance of the season, so it's really fun to show the student body our routine before any one else sees it," she said.

THE CHEERLEADERS' STRENGTH IS NO MATCH FOR ALUMNUS AND FORMER KNIGHT CHRIS WOODRUM as he breaks through the homecoming banner. Woodrum led the team onto the field before the game. Unfortunately, Pulaski County the Cougars dominated the Knights, 34-0. "Holding the banner is super exciting and is a fun way to start the game. I love looking around and seeing all the players and crowd getting so excited," senior Kayla Quinlan said.

TRESPASS OR NAH

Getting into the homecoming dance for free was usually a fun perk for the football team. But this year, tickets were required for the free dance. Four players, unfortunately, did not know this rule and missed their turn on the dance floor.

"I felt abused, I felt lonely I felt mistreated and misplaced. We had already lost our football game, so not letting us in was just wrong. The homecoming dance was for us. I think this issue needs to be fixed before it happens again next year and that's all I got to say."

Diontae Childress, 12

"I thought not letting us in was some bologna and very, very cruel. I played for this school and they wouldn't let me in. It wasn't fair at all, and sadly, on top of that, we did not win the game."

Nathan Chapman, 11

"The dance was free, so I don't know why they were making a big deal out of not letting us in. I was standing out front, basically begging, but they sent me out. I tried to sneak in the back, but some old man saw me and I guess he said something. Eventually Mrs. Deeds came out of nowhere and escorted me out. I was sad."

Jariel Rosario, 10

"Why would they ever give us tickets when the dance was free? They should have just not worried about handing out tickets and let the people who wanted to go to homecoming just go to homecoming."

Jahiem Tyler, 11

DRESSED IN THEIR SIGNATURE RED SHIRTS, HELP SAVE THE NEXT GIRL MEMBERS sophomore Autumn MacGregor, juniors Reeselynn Williams and Lia Lawson and seniors Olivia Coates, Lindsay Merritt and Sydney Hilovsky prepare to walk in the homecoming parade. The national, non-profit organization strives to keep girls safe. "Walking in the homecoming parade is always a fun time because we get to see excited kids and parents cheering for the entire school. I love being a part of Help Save the Next Girl because it teaches personal safety and how to keep our community safer," Coates said. HAND IN HAND, junior Hannah Ireland, Mrs. Susan Sine, Mr. Steve Spangler and seniors Tahyuan Childress and Aysia Garrett attempt to keep a hula hoop passing along down the line to their teammates. In addition to games at the pep rally, fall sports teams and homecoming court members were acknowledged. "I like that they include games in the pep rally. It gives the kids something to watch and laugh at," Garrett said.

EAGLE HEAD OBSCURING HIS FACE, junior Grady Brydges stands next to junior Kevin Sheng in the student section during the homecoming game. Students chose a section theme for each game, with the homecoming game theme being "America." "Although I did not go to the homecoming dance, the game was really fun," Brydges said. "[Junior] Alex Blanton bought the mask but said it was too hot, so I decided to wear it and had a great time goofing off with my friends." AS THEIR SEQUINED COSTUMES CATCH THE LIGHT, color guard members freshman Cayton Savinda, senior Kenley Jennings, sophomore Cailey McGlaughlin and junior Katie Durica perform in the stands of Bogle Field. Guard members performed alongside the marching band during football games and at competitions. "I loved spending my last homecoming game performing with my team. Being surrounded by the people I love was the best part," Jennings said.

A MIXTURE OF EMOTIONS COULD BE SEEN AS STUDENTS WALKED INTO THEIR NEW CAMPUS FOR THE FIRST TIME. After an unexpected week off of school, students started what was an expected one and one-half years at their new school. "I thought the trailers were nicer than the regular classrooms in the old high school, and that's not what I had expected. It's weird not having a roof over our heads all the time, but I like getting to walk around outside. Even when I get a little wet from the rain," junior Parker Huffman said.

ADMINISTRATION

ON GROUND LEVEL WITH A BENCH PRESS, junior Connor Jarczyński works on putting gym equipment back together. The students in strength and conditioning were tasked with putting together gym equipment taken apart for the move to the trailers. "I'm just glad we didn't have to put the entire thing together without instructions," Jarczyński said. WITH SAFETY GOGGLES IN PLACE, freshman Ashton Alli uses a lathe to turn a pen in Mr. Cubberly's Woods I class to sharpen wood. During the year, students made bird houses, Appalachian stick chairs, pens, tables, desks and coasters. "I really enjoy being able to make things in a class," Alli said. INSTRUMENT RAISED AND MUSIC IN PLACE, sophomore Jason Bradshaw prepares to play a piece on his trombone. Bradshaw took both stage and concert band. He always performed with the marching band. "It is very fun and rewarding to play the trombone in the school band," he said. CONCENTRATING ON THE PROJECT AT HAND, junior Zoey Hughes puts the finishing touches on her chameleon with geometric aspects. The project was made of clay, which Hughes covered with acrylic paint and then a protective coat of Gesso. "Admire the chaos of everyday life, I work on my art to calm down and move away from all the stress," Hughes said.

GLOVED UP AND PROTECTED, junior Mills Harris and sophomore Autumn MacGregor work on cutting up potatoes in Mrs. Terena Hale's Culinary Arts class. The move to the trailers impacted Hale's classes. When weather was warm, they were able to get outside and cook. When it was cold and rainy, though, the class was a bit more cramped than usual; however, that did not stop them from cooking up new recipes. "I learned a lot of good knife skills while cutting up a ton of potatoes. My favorite food I've made in culinary this year is Monkey Bread," MacGregor said.

HAIR STYLIN'

"Purple is one of my favorite colors. I've dyed it myself before, but this time I got it done professionally. It took them several times to get it close to what I wanted. I like it, but I wanted it to be more vibrant."
Bella Crouse, 11

"The last time I had a serious hair cut was in the fifth grade. It was a stereotypical 'sports dude' cut. My parents don't care. My dad has had even longer hair. I like that it doesn't look like every other hairstyle out there."
Sam Slate, 11

"I like to try out different styles and colors with my hair. I do all of the styling and coloring myself. I want to do hair or something dealing with hair when I'm out of school."
Jasmine Turner, 11

"This length took me from July after sophomore year to June after junior year. Since then I've been getting regular trims. I'll keep it long until it looks unprofessional. That's one of the reasons I keep up with trims."
Zach Martin, 12

"I've worn my hair long for as long as I remember, and I really don't have any plans in the future to cut it. My dad's hair is even longer than mine, so my parents don't mind it at all."
Jaquan Rivers, 12

words of WISDOM

"Stand firm in your beliefs and do not change simply for the public eye. Above all else, don't assume one's situation and know that a small act of generosity can go a long way."
Hunter Hartman, 12

"Surround yourself with people who make you love the person you are when you're around them. You are going to have bad days, and the world is going to feel like it's ending. It's not, I promise. Never forget you are loved and are valued, because high school can feel like a war zone and it's easy to forget you matter."
Liberty Fetzer, 12

"Enjoy this year as much as you can, because, as cliché as it sounds, school gets harder and harder every year. Do not slack off freshman year. Those grades do matter."
Odalys Hernandez, 12

"From the moment you walk through those doors on the first day of your freshman year, to the moment you walk across the stage to receive your diploma, your GPA will follow you. The work you put into in the classroom now will reflect that."
Danielle Brinkley, 12

PRECARIOUSLY CLOSE TO LOSING HIS BALANCE, senior Baylor Boone spins in his chair for a physics demonstration in Mr. Rusty Galbreath's class. A guest physics major from Virginia Tech led students in hands-on science demonstrations. "The lesson we were trying to learn was how to use hand weights to make the chair spin. My favorite part was that I didn't have to sit at a desk the entire class," Boone said. IN SEEMINGLY DEEP CONCENTRATION, juniors Maya Sawh and Gabe Currier practice their suturing techniques on bananas during anatomy with Ms. Anne Houston. The objective of this activity was for students to develop a deeper understanding of the layers of skin. "I enjoyed performing horribly ineffective surgery on a banana while attempting to properly sew skin back together," Sawh said. LOOKING ON AS HIS TEACHER IS ABOUT TO LOSE HER BASKETBALL, sophomore Chris O'Meara watches on as Mrs. Chrystal Shawn proves she does not know how to spin a ball on her finger. During this particular English class, students were tasked with teaching Mrs. Shawn a skill she did not know. "I enjoyed being able to go outside and watch her try to learn new skills," O'Meara said.

LAUGHING AT HER SON EMORY AS HE ENJOYS THE SPOTLIGHT, senior Holly Ellis prepares to change his diaper as seniors Laurel Ayers and Kira Chapman watch from behind. In Mrs. Elizabeth Mayer's senior English class, students participated in a "Teach the Teacher" project, where they given the chance to teach a chosen skill to Mrs. Mayer and their classmates. "My favorite part about this day was being able to bring my son to school with me," Ellis said.

GET HANDS ON

Students were grateful for the chance to get out of their seats.

POP QUIZ

"Oof"

"Well, I could say Mr. Parker just oofed. I don't know what oof means. Maybe if a ref makes a bad call at the game this week, I'll look at him and say 'oof'."

Mr. Jacob Gruse

"I'm Weak"

"That just means someone said something ridiculous or made you laugh. It's like saying 'I'm dead' or using a skull emoticon."

Mrs. Colleen Morrison

"Threw Me For a Curve"

"You threw me for a curve? Hmm. I think that means you confused me."

Mrs. Margaret Taylor

"Boujee"

"'Boujee' is an adjective used to describe someone who likes a fancy lifestyle and/or aims to appear high-class. One could say, 'My friend is so boujee. She always has the nicest things.'"

Mrs. Amy Belen

"Beef"

"If you have 'beef,' it means you have a problem or grudge with someone. In other words, you have had blood between the two of you."

Mr. Zane Hurst

GENERATIONS OF KNIGHTS

"My dad and his friends would hang out in the parking lot before school just like we do. I think it's fun to be able to talk with my dad about teachers who have been here since my dad was at Cave Spring."
Morgan Newbold, 12

"My dad graduated in 1989, and my mom graduated in 1991. My mom was on homecoming court and on the first girls' soccer team. It's special going to the same school as my parents because we can share the same experiences."
Parker Waters, 10

"My parents were friends in high school and after college they started dating. It's special to share memories and deal with the same problems within the building."
Reagan Edmunds, 11

"I think it's special going to the same school as my mom and grandmother. It's cool knowing I walked the same halls they did."
Emma Fields, 12

TIME TO PLAY

Who knew show and tell could still be a thing after leaving elementary school.

NOT A SIGHT SEEN EVERY DAY, senior Sydney Rubin holds Nugget the pug as he sings to her English classmates. Rubin shared both a PowerPoint presentation and demonstration with her class on how they could teach a dog to sing. "Giving presentations and expressing who we are is pretty normal for my English class. Nugget is a big part of my life. She's practically my baby, so getting to share her with my class was wonderful," Rubin said. "I'm new at Cave this year and finding new ways to connect to people I haven't really gotten to know well yet is exciting for me." CAUGHT IN A TUG OF WAR, seniors Tucker Patout and Abhinav Khanal test air pressure with suction cups in the library. Virginia Tech undergraduates helped students understand physics concepts. "We were doing an experiment where the air inside the suction cup was taken out, creating a pressure difference that would not allow the cups to come apart. My favorite part of this day was seeing the various experiments Virginia Tech students showed our class," Khanal said. EVERYONE LOVES A SLINKY, especially when they were allowed to play with them in class. Seniors Ola Dinakin and Garrett Breiner used the toys during a wave lab for AP Physics. "My favorite part about this particular day was everyone thought it was our last in the school. In fourth block, everyone was running around and leaving their stamp on the school. Somehow my name found its place all over the walls," Dinakin said.

SPINNING A BICYCLE WHEEL, senior Sara Lee demonstrates momentum as senior Avery Poulsen assists. In this physics class, students studied just how the process worked. "College students came to teach the class about momentum. This day we had very interactive class and it was fun to do all the different demonstrations," Lee said.

STARTED
LEARNING
AMERICAN SIGN
LANGUAGE (ASL)
BECAUSE OF MY SISTER. She

originally wanted to start learning ASL because my grandfather and my dad are both hearing impaired, and the impairment has gotten progressively worse as they have gotten older. Even with wearing hearing aids, my dad has trouble, so we've been trying to incorporate the language into our conversations with him.

I am also teaching myself Chinese and have discovered that learning to sign has been helpful with the process. For example, I can use basic phrases, what I call survival phrases, to learn the basics of Chinese. Because I am able to focus on more important phrases, rather than every single vocabulary word, I find that I am learning the language more effectively.

I knew some signs better than others, and when I was speaking Chinese and wanted to have a conversation, I knew the basic words I needed to say. ASL has helped me learn Chinese because it has taught me basic skills that make it easier to sort of piece together what I need to learn the language. The process is an easier way of learning a language that's completely different from English, like Chinese. ASL teaches you basic memorization of movements and how to work with different grammar structures. It's simple stuff, but in a language you already know, and serves as good bridge into a more complicated language. Chinese and ASL are similar in the ways that you have to learn certain vocabulary and grammar. Other than that, they are totally different. The methods I use to memorize Chinese characters are the same ways that I memorize signs. As I learn Chinese, I focus hard on the characters, because to native speakers, they are like letters. I'm not at the point where I can see that yet, so it takes tactics like movements and silly sketches to remember every single character. Along with drawing out the characters, another useful tool in learning Chinese is talking with my sister.

Like me, my sister is working hard to learn a language, but she's not quite there yet. A middle-school student, she really wants to learn French on her own. Since we both know ASL, we are able to communicate with each other. As I sign and carry on a conversation with her, I speak in Chinese. Obviously, my ASL vocabulary is better than my Chinese, but I am able to practice signing to her as I speak out loud. Obviously, the process is super slow and it takes me a while because I have to change grammar with my hands, but it does allow me to talk to her and she can actually respond, rather than me just speaking Chinese to myself in a mirror. It helps me to have a conversation and get better at speaking out loud, which I think is super useful, especially for someone who is learning a new language.

Ultimately, knowing ASL has allowed me to become comfortable with speaking and learning Chinese. Even though my Chinese is not perfect, I am able to use my sign language to further my language learning.

As told by junior Jordan Rearick

LEARNING THROUGH LANGUAGE

LINED UP IN FRONT OF THE CROWD, junior Lucas Holt prepares to perform during the half time performance. The band spent hours every week perfecting the show, which was performed at both halftimes and competitions. "When you are marching and playing at the same time, you have to make circles and curves. It is hard to make a perfect circle or curve," Holt said. SMILING AT THE CROWD, sophomore Lillian Hollins twirls with the color guard during the half time show. Hollins was a solo twirler. "It's kind of nice just being by myself because there's not really any rules to what I can do, but it also gets lonely so I hang out with the color guard," she said. WITH HER GAME FACE ON, senior Claire Lawson waits to march on the field with her flute. In addition to halftime shows and competitions, the band also performed at the local Veteran's Day parade. "At the Veteran's Day parade, there was so much wind, it was like a wind tunnel. There was no sound coming out of the flutes, and people's hats were flying off," Lawson said.

MARCHING TO THE BEAT OF HER INSTRUMENT, senior Emma Maxwell leads the marching band during the halftime show. This season was Maxwell's final one. "Once you get used to performing the show, you don't expect to get nervous on home games. The first two home games, however, I missed my entrance coming in on the first song. When we performed for the last time, I just got really sad. I'm never going to do this again," she said.

PUT YOUR HANDS IN THE AIR

"I was told to take pride in what you do, but I never felt like I did until last year, when I became a drum major. When I first stepped on the podium, I was thinking, 'Wow, this is really happening.' I had seen people up there before, but being the one to do it was something else. Being drum major for two years has taken a lot of dedication, but it has paid off," senior Gavin Wilkerson said.

"I think being a drum major is a lot of fun, because people look up to you for guidance. You also talk to more people each day and make more friends. The responsibility is a big one, too. Mr. Quakenbush normally comes to us first when there is a problem with a marching band member or something else. We also tell Mr. Quakenbush if we see a problem. Also, when Mr. Quakenbush isn't here, we run practice," senior Lena Scaer said.

FEEL THE RHYTHM

Football wasn't the only entertainment under those Friday-night lights.

those GUYS in the BACK

"My inspiration to start drumming came from my overall love of music. When I first got my drum set, it was weird because I didn't want to play at first. My dad was forcing me to play stuff I didn't want to play, but after I discovered music for what it really was, and how a drummer can influence a band, it really took off for me. I am a self-taught drummer. My dad showed me some basic skills when I got my first drum set for Christmas. I've been playing ever since. My proudest moment has been playing multiple jazz concerts," Slate said. "My inspiration to become a drummer came from having relatives who are drummers and going to a lot of concerts when I was younger. A drummer who inspires me is Neil Peart, who plays for the band Rush. People say he's the best in the world. I like playing rock a lot, but I feel like I'm best at jazz. I'm most proud of drumming in front of thousands of people with someone who asked me to drum for them. Having people in a crowd cheer for me was a great experience," Hartson said.

MOUTH ABOVE WATER TO TAKE A MUCH-NEEDED BREATH, senior Sydney Hilovsky swims freestyle in her lane in one of the last meets of the season. This was Hilovsky's fourth year with the swim team. "It's super exciting to have everyone supporting and cheering each other on during our final swims," Hilovsky said. AFTER RECOVERING FROM A DEFENSIVE STOP, junior Jahiem Tyler stands over a Blacksburg offensive lineman. During this game, Tyler protected the line as the Knights powered through, but unfortunately fell short with the Bruins beating the Knights 29-0. "The best moment during the season was senior night because it was a proud moment to see the seniors and all the work they had done," he said. FOCUSING ON THE BALL, senior Kylie Angel prepares to bump to the opponents. Angel served as libero for four years. "Playing my senior year of volleyball was something I really enjoyed and loved every second of, but it also was hard knowing that it could be the last team I could ever get to be on again. I have been a part of Cave Spring volleyball since the eighth grade, so it was definitely hard saying goodbye not only to the program, but my teammates as well," she said. IN THE OUTDOOR TERRAIN, junior Austin Hayden powers through his 5K at the Blue Demon Cross Country Meet. During this meet, Hayden came out on top, placing first. "I was feeling pretty good during the race, even though my facial expression didn't show it," he said.

AS HE BEGINS TO SURPASS HIS OPPONENT, senior Josh Fretwell grips his baton while running in the 4x800m relay. Fretwell and his team competed indoors at Roanoke College. "I was our starting leg for the 4x800m relay, so I knew I was going to have to get off the line fast," he said. "Our team was ranked third in the state, so there was a lot of pressure for me to start it off right. I got boxed out for the first lap, but managed to work my way up throughout the race to finish right with another runner in second place. I handed the baton to our next leg knowing I did everything that I could," he said.

DIG DEEPER

Athletes stepped up when the stakes were raised.

SPRING ATHLETES TO WATCH

"I think as a team, we want to make it decently far into the state tournament and make it further than we did last year. As a senior, I have a lot more senior roles. I'm doing a lot of the things the seniors last year did and I've had to step up as a leader. Personally, I hope to make it far in states and increase my scoring stats for the year."

Ethan Fox, 12

"My season last year was pretty good. I played forward and shared that position with a few people. I started off playing on the field when I was younger and then moved to goalie about two years ago, but when I made varsity that position was already taken. I really excited for this upcoming season, even though I have to get back in the swing of things. I am going to be working with trainers to help me do that. I think we are going to do really well."

Katie Harris, 12

"Last year I was in the number four spot on the team. I had worked to improve myself throughout the year and felt like all my hard work had paid off. The highlight of the season was our victory against Western Albemarle. It was the most stressful match, because it was our state semifinals and we were tied 4-4 with them. After a long and exhausting last game that determined who would go to state finals, our number three doubles match won. Because of that game, we made it to the state finals."

Nandini Sriram, 11

"I first started track in eighth grade, and have been committed to it ever since. Last track season was very memorable for me because I won my first state championship with my 4x200 relay team. So far this year, I have been a regional and a state champ and set a new school record, breaking the 300m dash record. This season will be my best one yet. When I feel that legs can't run anymore, I will run with my heart, and I don't plan on slowing down."

Timothy Iferika, 12

NOT ALLOWING A PULASKI OPPONENT TO CROSS HIM, senior Nick Mills overpowers two Cougar defenders. The Knights defeated the Cougars, 76-59. Mills had played varsity all four years. "Playing as a senior has been bittersweet because I've been working really hard for the past 12 years. My relationship with my teammates will definitely be missed, because we could always hit each other up and hang out," he said. PRACTICING HER PALMING SKILLS BEFORE A GAME, sophomore Zada Porter warms up her shooting arm. Porter broke the record for most amount of points scored in a single game, racking up 36 to beat the previous record of 35. "We only had one senior on the team, so I felt needed, which made me feel good. My best memory was when I broke the record, which was done off of a free throw. My mom and all of the fans just went wild," she said. Our toughest game was probably against Patrick Henry for the district championship. It was a game we could have won, but we fell five points short."

WIN THIS

A lot was riding on the line for many student athletes.

EYES FOCUSED AND SPEEDING PAST THE ONLOOKERS, senior Timothy Iferika seemingly glides through the air. During the state tournament at Roanoke College, Iferika's hard work paid off, as he secured multiple awards and a second state title. "Overall, this season was my best one yet. I ended with a new school record and was a regional and state champion. It felt surreal knowing that everything I've sacrificed for this sport paid off," he said.

ALMOST TO THE WATER'S SURFACE, junior Trieu Tran (right) jumps off his block to start a race that would leave to a new personal record in the 50-free. During the regional meet at Christiansburg, the boys' team qualified for a state final. "When I was feeling lazy, practice was very difficult, but I knew that it would be worth the effort. And it turned out being totally worth it, because I ended up a new record in the 50-free event," Tran said. HAND POISED AND READY TO SET UP A SPIKE, junior Taylor Robertson jumps in position to return a ball. Robertson verbally committed to the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She was also selected First Team All District, Region and State. "This team was a fun group to play with. We had a decently successful season overall, even though it didn't end the way we wanted. We shocked a lot of people in the district and really came back to old Cave Spring volleyball," she said.

SPRING ATHLETES TO WATCH

"Lacrosse is a sport that I started playing for fun eight years ago. I never would have guessed that it could open so many doors for me. I have been given the opportunity to play in college at either Saint Leo University or the University of Akron. Regardless of which school I commit to by June, I am excited about continuing to play lacrosse after graduation."
Makayla Dowdy, 11

"We went on a 10 game-winning streak at the end of last season. At the beginning of that season, I didn't think I would start as a freshman. After a few practices and scrimmages, though, I had worked hard enough to earn a starting position for every game, with the exception of two games due to my concussion. My biggest goal for this season is for our team to defend our spot as state champions. I would also like to be recognized at the district, region or state level."
Tyler Mitchem, 10

"The highlight of my season last year was making it to states. The hardest thing about last season was that I broke my foot in a car accident and couldn't play in the state finals game. That crushed my heart, but I cannot even explain how proud I am for my teammates because they worked so hard during that tournament. For this upcoming season, I expect for the new team members to work just as hard as the returning ones. I also expect lots of laugh and good memories between all of us as teammates."
Maliah Mizack, 11

MID-STROKE AND TAKING A BREATH, junior Mills Harris competes in the breast stroke during the regional event at Christiansburg. During this season, the team had a very successful record, qualifying second at regionals and fourth in the state. "Even though I had to miss school and it was difficult to make up assignments sometimes, the best thing about the season was when I won both of my events in regionals and the boys team won second overall, which allowed us to get a trophy," he said. WITH FOCUS IN HER EYES, senior Elizabeth Hertzberg completes a long jump event at the state tournament. As she was close to qualifying for the finals, she was in the top seed. "It was a pressure-filled moment because I was trying really hard to get top eight and I was currently sitting in ninth place," she said. Hertzberg finished ninth in the long jump, triple jump and high jump.

MAKE THE LEAP

Taking risks paid off for many athletes.

A MOMENT OF REST IS ESSENTIAL IN AN ACTION-PACKED GAME, and senior Diontae Childress takes advantage of one of these moments as he takes a knee during a hard-fought game against Blacksburg. Unfortunately, the Knights fell to the Bruins, 0-29. "I had to take a knee because I was gassed from the game. They tackled the quarterback behind the line of scrimmage four times," Childress said.

GOING UP FOR TWO, Senior Crawford Enyart fights his way to the basket against the rival team, Hidden Valley. During this season, Enyart was awarded District Player of the Year, a prestigious honor given by coaching staff around the district. "It feels great. I could not have received this award without the help of my teammates and coaches. Their work has allowed us to be successful this year. Also, it goes without saying that our coaches have done a great job. Their selflessness and work ethic are the biggest contributors to our team's success," he said. BANKING A SHOT OFF THE FAIRWAY, junior Alex Glick holds his swing and watches to see where his ball lands. This was Glick's second year on the team. "Golf is fun, but mentally challenging. It is great because each round is different, you can find yourself in different spots on the same course and it never is the same. The team works well with each other, supporting on another and giving advice when they can," he said.

SPRING ATHLETES TO WATCH

"Because this season is my last, I'm excited for practically everything, but most excited to be with my teammates and coach one last time. Last year, I was All-State in the 3200m and I hope to do that again. I also really want our 4x800m to make it to states. I'll be going to UVA next fall, and since their varsity team is really competitive, I will most likely join a running club."

Tori White, 12

"I've been playing baseball ever since I was four years old. I've played on rec, travel and school teams. Last season I pitched three complete games. It was such a good feeling to start and finish a game on the mound. I'm the starting pitcher for this season, so I hope I can feel it again. Last season we got to the regional semi-finals, but I hope we go all the way this season."

Connor Lewis, 12

"I've been playing tennis for five years and last year we finally went to states, which was awesome. This year we're planning on making it again, and hopefully this time we'll beat Hidden Valley and make regional champions as well. We may not win states but we want to at least get there."

Om Patel, 12

PLAYING DIRTY

Just because it's not VHSL sanctioned, doesn't mean it's not a sport.

NOT AFRAID OF A LITTLE MUD, senior Delaney Groves competes on her dirt bike. Racing since the age of seven, Groves recently competed in Rural Retreat, Virginia, at the Coyote Run. "I loved racing, but had a bad crash when I was younger. I started back up when I was fifteen, though, and have been riding ever since," she said. "My dad is the one who got me involved in riding dirt bikes, because I grew up watching him race. I started racing this year in the Virginia Championship Hare Scramble Series. They hold two races a month that are located all around Virginia. I practice around my house, but mainly at Pheps Farm in Franklin County or Kairos in West Virginia." ON THE SNOWY SLOPES OF AUSTRIA, senior Allison Henion pushes across the flat.

Austria is only one of many places she and her family have traveled to ski. "I've been skiing with my dad since I was three years old. We started skiing at Timberline in West Virginia, but now we take trips all over the world. We've been to multiple places in Europe, Canada and, most recently, Chile. One of our hardest treks was in Canada, when it was -28 degrees," Henion said. PROUD OF HIS KILL, senior Ethan Harris poses with the six-buck he shot on a hunting trip. Harris started hunting three years ago with alumnus Christian Howes. "We hunt for deer and ducks. I like to duck shoot more. You shoot more, kill more and are on the move constantly. You can get 12 ducks on a good day," he said.

TRAINING ON THE SPEED BAG, junior Dylan Rice works diligently while at Lancerlot Sports Complex. Rice started boxing four years ago, after watching his older brother, alumnus Dakota Rice, in the ring. "I train for around 20 hours a week for my matches. I've been in five, winning four of them. I love the rush I get from knocking someone down in a fight. The worst thing about the matches is the repercussions," Rice said. "Once in a sparring match, my opponent got in a dirty hit after the bell. I ended up with a brain bleed. Since then, I haven't been able to perform well in school among other things. Overall, though, boxing has had mostly positive effects on me, including instilling good discipline and teaching me to respect people."

a COVETED duty

"Before every game, we'd tailgate in the church parking lot across from the middle school. We had a grill and would make burgers and hot dogs for anyone who came. Once at the game and in the stands, we started every game by singing the beginning of the Spongebob theme song. We'd shout, 'Are you ready kids? Ooooooo,' and would then transition into the classic 'oooo' for the kickoff. During halftime every game, we'd run the Cave Spring flag up and down the middle of the student section. Then, we'd have someone do a speech. Finally, we'd do the classic roller coaster. The leadership role really just shifted to the two of us, because we showed up to almost every game, we started chants and we were some of the loudest people in the front. It also helps that Michael is a class officer and has access to the student section Twitter."

EVER SINCE I WAS YOUNG, MATH HAS JUST CLICKED FOR ME.

I remember my family had Friday night dinners with guests. I would sort of serve as the entertainment. My dad would ask me math questions and have me run multiplication tables because I could get through them so quickly. I sometimes felt embarrassed. The guests usually felt a mixture of surprise and shock. Yes, math is easy for me, but it's not necessarily what I like to learn about. Math is not really applicable to everyday life. It's not like I can use the applications I've been exposed to on a daily basis. I do love teaching math, though.

I have many friends come to me for help. I am also a paid tutor. I love when I'm working with a struggling student and, all of a sudden, they understand the concept. That moment is such a satisfying feeling.

Serving as a student tutor also develops better relationships with my peers. Everyone struggles with something. Once we acknowledge those struggles and get through them together, we're better for it. We're no longer afraid to try or fail.

While math comes easily to me, I struggle with comprehension in English class. There's no definite answers in English like there is with a math problem, which I'm more accustomed to. Math may hold problems that take a long time to work through and solve, but you can at least be confident there's only one solution. With English, however, there's hesitation. Everyone can bring in their personal bias to support their individual perspective.

When I'm not helping others, I like to be active and exercise a lot. I enjoy traveling and hiking. School can be a stressor. You need an avenue to clear your mind.

BREAKING DOWN PROBLEMS

"I started doing my makeup at the end of sophomore year. Over the summer I practiced almost every day. I would take bits and pieces from different YouTube videos and apply them to myself. Everyone has different skin types and face shapes, so not every 'makeup tutorial' I watch would work for me. It takes a lot of practice and self discovery to figure out what shades and brush strokes would contour my particular face shape and accentuate my natural features. Every single face is different and makeup is an amazing creative outlet to express yourself and your mood on a daily basis," senior Geneva Grochowski said.

CULTURAL appreciation

"My sweater is a remake of one worn by Christopher Wallace, aka The Notorious B.I.G. Coogi, a colorful knitwear brand that made its way into hip-hop culture in the 1990s.

Various rappers, boxers, influencers, etc. can be seen wearing Coogi. Throughout the past two decades, this brand has been referenced constantly in rap. For many in the black community, owning a Coogi sweater represents success, power, coming up from nothing and 'making it' in a harsh world. Most people who have access to Coogi sweaters consider them to be 'too loud.' Most people buy the sweaters and only wear them once or twice a year, and in some cases never. The art seen on Coogi items has its roots in Australian aboriginal culture. There's so much intricacy in the knit-work, that I've spent hours looking over the sweater. Each time I look, I always find some pattern or stitching I hadn't seen before. I am terrified for anything to happen to my Coogi. Despite that sentiment, however, I wear it a lot. I'll mainly wear to special events or nights on the town when I want to make a statement. For me personally, owning and wearing a Coogi lets me express my culture."

a CURATED collection

"I started collecting rubber duckies in the seventh grade, because my brother used to get them in his goodie bag from marching band. So, I took his rubber ducks and started collecting more on my own. My favorite duck is the one with a scarf because I got him in a bar of soap and I had to use the soap to get him out. If not stolen from my brother, the ducks have been given as gifts over the years. Anytime I buy one, I find them at Captain Party, and they're usually less than one-dollar."

ART OR NOT

Sometimes art could be found in the most unconventional of places.

"Art is a strange medium, but I can't think of anything better to express concepts words can't. Nine years of practice have led to a possible career path and skills that help me both understand the world around me and understand subconscious thought. Surrealism is my favorite kind of art, which the use of concrete objects juxtaposed in strange ways. It's fun, a test of skills and gives a lot of freedom in expression," junior Gabe Currier said.

"This piece, while unfinished, is a surrealistic impression of myself throughout my junior year. In the piece, I am unraveling myself, and while I (obviously) haven't physically done this, I feel like this year I have mentally begun untangling in a sense, what with the stress of homework, work and AP classes. I try to use my art to ease some of the pressure on life. Don't worry, not all of my work is this deep and depressive," junior Caitlin Phillips said.

"I love to edit and take photos because I like the emotion I can see in the final photo. My personal work tends to represent a dream or character in my life. The editing usually sets the tone, bringing the photo to life. In editing, you can make changes for the better. One click on a button can make a huge difference. The best part about photography and editing is creating your own work. Luckily, the worst of photography hasn't hit me yet. But, if I would have to guess, it would be the reaction you get from people who don't understand your work," senior Sara Stewart said.

"This piece is a scene of a swamp in an abstract background. It was inspired by the style of Romanticism. It was created with the use of different oil paint techniques," sophomore Nathan Tryal said.

"I started knitting two years ago. My aunt taught me and was the one who sparked my interest. I've knitted a 41.5-foot long scarf that is one foot wide. It's the one I'm wearing in this picture. I've also knitted a dress, an arm sleeve, two 20-foot long scarves and about six smaller scarves. I am currently working on a skirt. I like knitting because the activity turns into a calm, rhythmic pattern and gives me something to do. When I'm not knitting, I also paint, make clay sculptures and build wooden structures. I paint abstract things, sculpt small people and build boxes. I love the fact that I get to make things, and I feel satisfied when I have an image in my mind and can bring it to life."

I am most looking forward to meeting new people and doing extracurricular activities on campus."*

A LITERAL WEIGHT ON HER SHOULDERS, senior Grace Wetzel practices a fireman's carry as part of her Marine Corps preparedness training. Wetzel trained with the Delayed Entry Program. "I chose the Marine Corps because it is the toughest branch of the military. I figured if I was going out of my comfort zone, I might as well go all the way. I've already been challenged more than ever before. I know that becoming a Marine will push my mind and body past their limits," she said.

POSITIONED IN FRONT OF THE UMPIRE, senior Caleb Pritchard leans in to snag a ball. Pritchard signed to UVA-Wise for baseball. "I received both athletic and academic scholarships. Fretwell ran cross country and both indoor and outdoor track. "I will attend Roanoke College and run cross country and indoor and outdoor track. I decided to further my athletic career because I like to push my limits as a runner. College running will bring more competition. MY GRANDMOTHER
MOVED HERE FROM JAPAN AFTER SHE MET MY

GRANDFATHER. He was stationed there for the Air Force. I'm a quarter Japanese. I was named 'Kyoko,' which means 'Sacred Girl,' because my mom was told that she couldn't have kids. To her, I was considered sacred. I'm also sort of named after my grandmother whose name is 'Yasuko,' because Kyoko and Yasuko are written the same way in Kanji, which are Japanese characters. The two names are pronounced differently, but use the same characters when written.

I love immersing myself in my Japanese heritage. My grandmother still practices some Shinto, the Japanese religion, so she has a shrine in her house that's supposed to hold the spirits of our ancestors. Every day she brings them a bowl of rice and some green tea as an offering that's called a 'Hotokesama.' This tradition will get passed down to my mom and then to me. If at any point we're not going to perform the ritual every day, we'll box it up and mail it back to the temple in the village my grandmother is from.

Other than my learning about culture, I enjoy practicing Tae Kwon Do and writing. I've been involved in Tae Kwon Do for ten years, but this year I underwent dental surgeries that prevented me from participating. I performed with a demonstration team where we put on performances using Tae Kwon Do but also incorporated some comedy, entertainment and costume changes. I've also instructed. I was a second degree senior black belt for three years because I kept failing my testing, but I finally passed last year, earning my third degree belt. My passion for writing can be traced back to when my parents would read to me from a young age. I then started writing my own stories. I wrote a book in fourth grade by hand because I didn't have a computer, and it was mostly childish fantasy sort of stuff. In middle school I wrote two more books that I typed. I then went to some writer conferences and pitched to agents. I even received some manuscript requests. I began to pursue publishing, but then when I went to high school and didn't have time to write. At this point, it's embarrassing to look back on what I wrote back in middle school, so I would never consider publishing them now. I'm hoping that when I have more time I can get back into writing fiction. I always thought I would be an author, but it's an uncertain career path, so I'd like to look into other things as well. I plan to attend Brown in the fall and am excited to explore all of the opportunities ahead of me.

I WORKED ON A RESEARCH PROJECT THROUGHOUT THE SUMMER OF 2017 AND INTO JANUARY 2018 WITH A MENTOR AT THE FRALIN BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH INSTITUTE ON GLIOBLASTOMA, THE MOST COMMON AND DEADLY BRAIN

CANCER. Glioblastoma patients present a median survival length of 12-15 months, and only 3-5% of patients will live longer than five years after diagnosis.

Currently, in cancer therapeutics, precision and personalized medicine are emerging as medical models that may drastically increase patient survival. The model is based upon the use of specialized treatment plans for each patient based upon the classification of their risk for tumor events, such as progression or treatment resistance, that may hinder their chances for longer overall survival. To try and implement this model for glioblastoma treatment, I utilized big data analytics to identify a gene, RAN, whose expression was correlated with patient resistance to temozolomide, the main chemotherapeutic drug for glioblastoma patients. When importazole, a recently developed small molecule inhibitor that could inhibit RAN-mediated nuclear import, was tested against glioblastoma cell lines and primary cells in vitro, the drug was found to decrease cell viability and induce apoptosis, or cell death. In addition, the drug did not affect normal human brain cells when treated with the same concentrations as those against glioblastoma cells, and efficacy levels towards glioblastoma cells directly correlated with cell expression levels of RAN. These results showed that RAN could act as a viable therapeutic target for the development of drugs for glioblastoma patients resistant to temozolomide, thereby implementing a precision medicine approach for glioblastoma therapeutics.

I was presented with the opportunity to work with my mentor, Dr. Lamouille, after contacting him for a potential internship for my research elective at Governor's School, which allows for one research elective course each year. These courses are dedicated to the development of projects for Project Forum, the Governor's School science fair, and I wanted to conduct research in a professional laboratory setting, hence my inquiry of an internship under Dr. Lamouille. I met with him frequently prior to beginning my experimentation to discuss my idea and how we could translate it into a scientific study.

I do not currently have a plan to continue that particular study, as I have since published my findings in a scientific journal and begun a separate project for this year's science fair under a new mentor. This new project was inspired by the results collected from the past study, and I drew heavily from the approach I had implemented in the past study to develop this year's project, which focuses on developing a discovery pipeline for the identification of novel gene signatures to predict tumor progression in cancer patients. The results collected so far have been extremely successful, and my mentor, Dr. Robin Varghese at the Edward Via College of Osteopathic Medicine, and I are currently preparing a manuscript for review.

I DECIDED TO START GOING ON MISSION TRIPS BECAUSE I THOUGHT IT WOULD BE A FUN ACTIVITY TO DO OVER THE SUMMER. MY YOUTH GROUP GOES ON ONE EVERY YEAR, AND MY FIRST TRIP WAS TO YELLOW SPRINGS, WEST VIRGINIA.

There, I realized how much I loved serving. I have been to Richmond, Virginia; Yellow Springs, West Virginia; and Concord, North Carolina.

The first trip I went on was in the middle of the summer in West Virginia, and my job was to repair and stain a deck. It was so hot and muggy, and we had to wear thick clothes for safety. I remember thinking about how hard it was, and I was really struggling. Even though the work was difficult, seeing the homeowner's reaction made it all worth it.

On another trip to Richmond, Virginia, I worked on many different projects. In downtown Richmond, there is a park that many homeless men and women hang out in during the day. My group made lunches and handed them out. We also made bags that had sanitary items and handed them out as well. We spent the day with them, prayed with them and learned more about each other. An important detail of mission work is not only getting work done, but learning more about the people we are serving. They want to feel heard and share stories. I have learned so much from the people I have served.

My favorite mission trip was this past summer in July of 2018, to Arecibo, Puerto Rico. We were helping with hurricane relief and recovery. I don't speak much Spanish, but I knew a few phrases. I picked up a lot of the language on the trip. I worked on home repairs, cleaned up a church, sorted donations and worked on a farm. Puerto Rico had some of the most beautiful scenery. My favorite day was when we got to go to the beach, and it was on my birthday, which was the best birthday ever. I met the most amazing woman, Miriam, who lost everything she had in Hurricane Maria, but had the most amazing faith and outlook on her situation. I remember her saying, "No matter what happens in life, you just have to look to God. God will always take care of you." I absolutely plan on going on more mission trips. I am happiest when I am traveling and helping people, and ever since I went to Puerto Rico I have discovered my love of experiencing new cultures. Mission trips are an incredibly humbling and fulfilling experience and have played such a huge role in my life. I have learned that oftentimes the people I serve help me more than I help them. Every time I go on a mission trip I learn more about myself and realize how blessed I am, even though sometimes life can be hard.

EVERY YEAR, SENIOR ENGINEERS AT BURTON MUST COMPLETE A SENIOR PROJECT. THE PROJECTS ATTEMPT TO MAKE AN INNOVATION OF IMPACT OF THE USE OF THEIR PRODUCT OR SERVICE.

Each student has his own project, but this year we did things a little differently, as Dr. Shanta, the Director of Engineering for Burton Center for Arts and Technology, came to us with the idea of our entire class collaborating with Go Baby Go (GBG) to make cars for local children with disabilities. From the moment we heard about what GBG does, we couldn't contain our excitement and could hardly wait to get involved. Among our senior class, there were three groups of two who each had a different child. Needless to say, with ranging disabilities, all of our cars were vastly different. For my team's car, we performed a plethora of modifications, most of which made it easier to get in and out of and to be more comfortable while driving it. The process, while detailed and meticulous, was simple at the same time: plan, modify, test, re-plan, remodify, retest. In the end, we had performed about a dozen physical modifications to the car, ranging from increasing the turn radius, to moving the seat, to lowering the door well. This was by far the absolute best part of our project and is the sole reason this never felt like a project. Getting to see that adorable little girl light up the moment she saw her car and getting to watch her drive around with a big smile on her face was worth doing the project ten times over. Without a doubt, my favorite part of the project was getting hugs from our little girl and hearing her scream with excitement while doing donuts in our hand-crafted masterpiece. If every reaction was like this, I would complete a project like this 100 times without hesitation. It was absolutely the most accomplished I have ever felt.

TAIWAN'S GOVERNMENT SPONSORS PEOPLE OF EITHER MAINLAND CHINA OR TAIWANESE ORIGIN TO TEACH ENGLISH FOR ONE MONTH. I APPLIED TO THIS COMPETITIVE PROGRAM AND WAS SELECTED.

I was one of around five hundred students from around the world to teach in Taiwan. I met people from Australia, South Africa, Canada and the United Kingdom during my weeks in Taiwan. The volunteers were split into groups assigned a school. My group taught in the blistering slums of Taipei, at Fuan Elementary. As the program was mainly centered around English, naturally, we taught them a plethora of English grammatical constructs and vocabulary, while simultaneously exposing them to the nuances and differences between their cultures as well as ours. Since we were there for only three weeks, we focused on big-picture concepts that would be a stepping stone for increased learning activity. My classroom centered on third and fourth graders, and I was paired with two other teachers. Our differences in learning style and technique definitely contributed to a cohesive lesson plan, and over the three weeks, we were able to cover around twenty vocabulary lists, weaving in examples of American culture and sentence structure and grammatical constructs within overarching themes. Since we were trying to teach the kids English, and nothing else, we weren't actually allowed to converse in Mandarin or Taiwanese at all. This led to a laundry list of misunderstandings and led to us resorting to pointing and selective lowering and raising of voices as needed. Daily routines such as asking to leave the classroom would be met with a blank stare. The kids in all their infinite wisdom provided endless sources of entertainment. One kid was fluent in English already, another kid forgot school supplies daily, and a third kid didn't know anything despite us giving him personalized attention. Of course, these are problems with any classroom, but seeing them from a different point of view was enlightening. One day, the principal of our school had the great idea of a water balloon fight. Chasing down third graders with a giant bucket of water will forever be ingrained in my memory. The post certainly wasn't easy, but the lure of volunteering insofar as the kids needed help contributed to my decision. Staying home is boring. Staying home gets nothing done. Staying home meant days passing by with no end in sight. In Taiwan, I contributed to positive change and the thought that education wasn't frivolous, but necessary. A second language is one of the most powerful tools, and in the current global climate, having a working knowledge of English as well as Chinese is critical. I hoped to impress this upon the kids the best I could. The temptation of a month in Taiwan also was a key factor. Without control, in the weekends and weeknights, we were free to go out and explore a beautiful country and culture at our fingertips. We weaved in and out of tea shops and tourist attractions. From markets to beaches, there was always something new to experience. Exploring Taiwan and the stunning scenery paired with the ethnically homogeneous culture led to a fantastic month in Taiwan.

I TOOK PART IN THE AMERICAN LEGION'S ORATORICAL SCHOLARSHIP CONTEST. IT REQUIRED WRITING AN EIGHT TO TEN MINUTE SPEECH, MEMORIZING IT AND THEN RECITING IT IN FRONT OF AN AUDIENCE. We had to choose a subject concerning our constitution, emphasizing a citizen's duties and obligations to government. For my prepared oration, I chose to write about how we as United States citizens have the duty to uphold our constitutional right to free speech. Additionally, there were four assigned topics, the 1st amendment, 4th amendment, 13th amendment and 21st amendment. For the assigned topic portion of the contest, we had to research each topic. On the day of the competition, one topic was drawn at random and each contestant was notified of the topic with five minutes to prepare a three to five minute speech on that subject. Each contestant then had to come up with an extemporaneous oration in those five minutes using their research, and then present it to the audience, coming up with the speech while on stage. In the district level competition, I won first place and progressed to the regional level. While there were only novices competing at the district level, at the regional level the other contestants were all older than me, and two had already competed in this competition in previous years. Considering how I was the youngest person competing at this level, and how the decision between first and second was very close, I did rather well, and I am happy because now I know my strengths and weaknesses and can be better prepared if I participate in the future. Taking part in this competition was challenging and required an immense amount of effort and preparation, but I know that it will greatly aid me in any future public speaking. I enjoyed researching and learning about our constitution, and I learned a lot of important information pertaining to the rights, duties and responsibilities of citizenship.

MY BROTHER IS ON THE AUTISM SPECTRUM, BECAUSE HE WAS BORN WITHOUT SOME OF HIS GENETIC MATERIAL.

Nate lacks a tiny segment in the 'q' tail of his 11th chromosome, which is called an interstitial (meaning 'within') deletion. In fact, his is the first recorded case of this deletion ever. This missing genetic information has affected him in other ways, too. He has a platelet (clotting) disorder, a coloboma (key-hole iris), sensory and motor challenges and ADHD, which are all in addition to the behavioral challenges and developmental delays associated with Autism. Despite all that, Nate is active, enthusiastic, articulate, and, in many ways, a typical, annoying little brother. He reads constantly; loves everything Nintendo; knows an amazing number of sports statistics, jerseys and mascots; and can identify country flags from around the world with one glance. He can be funny and sarcastic and he plays a mean game of Trivial Pursuit.

Nate attends a private school called the Blue Ridge Autism and Achievement Center. While there, he catches up on academic skills and learn techniques to help him manage his behaviors. He has small classes with other kids who are also on the Autism spectrum. It's pretty awesome to see how far he's come in just the two years he's been there.

were little. Together, we have been through nine moves, a divorce and constant movement between different sides of the family. These changes have strengthened our relationship. However, we are still normal brothers, and no brothers go without fighting. Nate gets on my nerves, as I get on his. Occasionally, or sometimes not so occasionally, fights happen. As boys, we find the only logical way to solve a fight is through wrestling. But these small misunderstandings are always quick, and we are back to being buddies after 15 minutes. My favorite memories with Nate always involve his interesting way of phrasing things. For example, one time when my mom was reprimanding Nate, somewhere in the scuffle, my mom said, "Nate! I am at the end of my rope!" Nate promptly responded with, "Mom! I'm going to take my sword and cut your rope!" Additionally, Nate is known for his cheesy, yet charming sense of humor. For example, one of his most famous jokes begins with, "Josh, what is the national shape?" Originally caught off guard, I could not come up with an answer. Nate hastily delivered the punch line as, "IT'S THE PENTAGON, JOSH," which was followed by a cheesy grin and uncontrollable chuckling. Nate's goofy character and vocabulary not only make him unique, but they definitely make him my brother.

FLAG IN HAND, ALUMNUS CHRIS WOODRUM LEADS THE PLAYERS AS THEY PREPARE TO TAKE ON THE BLACKSBURG BRUINS. The running of the flag was one of many traditions Cave Spring students could expect to experience. "My best memories at Cave Spring involved the Friday night lights, when everyone united for that one day. I always had fun dressing up and cheering on the team. I love how the student body united when any of our Knights were sick. I'll miss the teachers the most and being able to talk with them about anything," senior Julia Booker said.

EVERYONE'S HERO

"WHEN I LEARNED I WAS THE KNIGHT, I WAS HONORED BUT SURPRISED, TOO. I'm a mountain biker and was out riding when my dad called and said he had something to tell me. Having had an older sibling in high school, growing up in the Cave Spring community and understanding what the honor truly meant, made me even more honored to accept the role. The only reason I can figure that I am the knight is that I'm not a typical high school senior. I stand out a little bit because I do activities that are different. I'm a competitive downhill racer, which is kind of out of the norm for high school. I'm also an avid snowboarder. I also really try to keep kindness at the front of everything I do because my friends, teachers, coaches and role models have been so kind to me. The only thing that makes sense is to turn that around and pay that forward. My advice to anyone who might want to be the Knight one day is to always be looking for that opportunity to reach out and help others and be friendly. Ultimately, I'm so happy to have been chosen. The honor is something special that will always hold a place in my heart."

NAME IN LIGHTS

Want our autographs, sweetie?

AS PART OF THE BURTON CENTER FOR PERFORMING ARTS PROGRAM, junior Jake Dellinger and senior Peyton Conner held starring roles in "The Wizard of Oz," acting as the Tin Man and Dorothy.

"Trying out for this play was hard because I was so nervous, but now plays have a special place in my heart. After acting for over two years, my favorite things have been meeting people from other schools and learning songs. My favorite part of 'Oz' was when I rusted up as the Tin Man, but I did hate having to put on the makeup," Dellinger said.

"I have always been passionate about plays because I love singing, dancing and acting. That passion first sparked in sixth grade when I played Ariel in 'The Little Mermaid,' and now it continues to burn as I play Dorothy. Plays are great because they give you the ability to meet people from all over and learn more about the craft. I hope to be able to direct shows like this one later in life," Peyton said.

IN THE KNOW

It's totally fine to be a follower.

"I THINK PEOPLE LAUGH AT MY TWEETS because I don't care what people think and just have fun with it. I'm usually tweeting something funny or retweeting memes that make me laugh. My favorite ones lately have been about trying to get Roanoke County to close school whenever it snows. I also like to tweet my reactions to celebrity drama. My favorite type of this twitter moment was when Rhianna started a twitter war with Teyana Taylor, which ended with Rhianna throwing her net worth in Teyana Taylor's face. I also love the Kardashians. They have a lot of money and can buy and pay for whatever they want. That's the lifestyle I would like to obtain. I like their cars, houses, businesses and how they can sell anything just by marketing themselves and being quotable and 'meme-able.' My favorite drama they've had was when Khloe's baby daddy cheated on her. Or when Kim exposed Taylor Swift on Twitter about the whole Kanye thing."

CALIFORNIA DREAMIN'

Sit back and enjoy the view.

"OVER THE SUMMER, I WENT TO CALIFORNIA and visited Huntington Beach, Laguna Beach, Santa Monica, Los Angeles and Palm Springs, which was my favorite because it was in the desert and we stayed in a resort while there. Even though that area is always super hot, I'm glad I was able to experience it. While there, I was able to go ATVing in the desert. Two other favorite areas of mine were Huntington Beach, where I loved walking the boardwalk and watching the surfers in the water, and Rodeo Drive, where there are a bunch of very nice malls and stores. My least favorite area was Los Angeles, where we landed after a very long flight. The city is very industrialized. California's landscape is crazy, due to how it can rapidly can change from flat to mountainous land. Taking in the vibes from the different cities allowed me to gain different perspectives on how people live. I wish I could live there because everyone has a really happy attitude and were living easy.

ALWAYS A WILDCAT

in the game*

"THE FIRST TIME I WATCHED 'HIGH SCHOOL MUSICAL' WAS IN THE SECOND GRADE. I loved all the movies throughout elementary school. I loved all the characters, especially Troy Bolton, played by Zach Efron. I also loved all the musical numbers, like 'What Time is It,' 'Breaking Free,' 'Bop to the Top' and 'All For One.' The first movie was definitely my favorite, but all of the other movies in the series are classics. My favorite parts of the first movie were definitely the 'We're All in This Together' performance and anytime Troy was on the screen. I had a ton of 'High School Musical' merchandise, like blankets, sheets, pillow cases, pajamas, shirts, stuffed animals and even Crocs. Pretty much anything with the words 'High School Musical' on it, I had. Unfortunately, my mom has tossed some of my collection, but I still have the special pieces."

"I'VE ALWAYS KNOWN I WANTED TO ATTEND MEDICAL SCHOOL and become a doctor. When I made the initial decision to graduate early, I thought skipping one year would help offset all those years of education later. I want to go into pediatrics and was inspired to do so because of childhood experiences. When I was nine years old, I was playing a game of soccer. One minute I was running, and the next minute I was not. Pain rushed up and down my leg. I was not able to walk. My family and I went from doctor to doctor, from state to state, looking for an answer that never came. For five years I was handicapped, confined to both crutches and a wheelchair. No one could tell me what was wrong; some said my pain was fake, some said it was caused by a severe injury. Many treatments, procedures and medicines were ineffective. I slipped into a depression. Finally, however, after five years spent traveling to several different states, a doctor in Pennsylvania found a solution to the problem. The treatment to my never-ending pain was a gruesome, intense physical and occupational therapy program for eight hours every day. Nevertheless, this somewhat traumatic and intensely painful therapy helped me to gain my ability to walk again. From this long, extensive journey, I learned there is no amount of pain that could keep me from achieving my goals. When all of those physicians told me that I was imagining my pain, I was hurt and shocked, but the experience inspired me never to give up on anything."

NOT AGAIN

Stop hurting yourself, would ya?

"I WAS GOING FOR A HEADER DURING THE FIRST FIVE MINUTES OF the district semi-final against Patrick Henry (PH). Number nine on the PH side decided to kick the ball. I remember getting hit hard in the head. I bent over and held the spot but had no idea I had a huge cut in my head until I brought my hand down and saw it was covered in blood. My first thought was just a sarcastic, "great." Someone gave me a penny, which I used to apply pressure. One of the PH coaches ran over and walked me outside the stadium, where he put two band-aids on the cut and finished with some gauze. My dad rushed me to the hospital, where I had to get stitches. The worst part was when they numbed the area. The doctor stuck the needle with the numbing stuff into the cut multiple times. Then, I closed my eyes got 21 stitches put into my forehead. On Halloween day, my family finally decided to carve our pumpkins. My dad made a joke to not cut myself, sarcastically. Oh, the irony. My left hand was holding the pumpkin while my right hand operated the knife. I stupidly cut toward my left hand. The pumpkin resisted, so I pushed harder. The knife sliced through eight inches of pumpkin right into the crevice of my hand between my thumb and index finger. My dad and I took a drive to the hospital for the second time in six months. Again, the numbing was the worst part. In total, I got three stitches. It hurt to move my hand at all for the first few days, which makes you realize just how much you use it. Luckily, I still have full use of my thumb because I cut no nerves or muscles, just skin. Now I have stories to tell wherever I go."

UNFORGETTABLE

You know who I am.

"MOST PEOPLE THINK I'M EITHER SASSY OR INTIMIDATING, WHICH MAKES ME SAD because because I try not to be either one of those things. I'm super over the top, clearly. I'm known mostly for my acting and performing and my big mouth. The mouth gets me in trouble all the time, because I usually just say what comes to my mind without really thinking about it. I like theater, surprise, because it gives me a place to escape everything for a little bit. It also allows me to help other people escape find an escape, too, because times aren't that great right now. I feel good knowing I can help them with something that I love."

"I bought a 100-dollar 2K video game last year. Although my parents said I was crazy, I still really wanted to purchase it. Even though I spent a lot of money on it, I barely play the game now."
Daniel Wynn, 9

"One day I was chillin' at my crib and saw PewDiePie's on YouTube. I noticed the T-Series channel was getting close to overtaking him, so I spray painted 'Subscribe to PewDiePie' on a building and signed my name. Turns out it was on a police station. Epic fail."

"One day I was walking into a convenience store and saw a giant rack full of Redbulls. I didn't have any money in my pocket so I did the only solution possible: I stole one. I forgot I wasn't a very fast runner and about 10 minutes later I was arrested."

Kelsey Moore, 11

"One day I was volunteering at the SPCA, for Ms. Houston and the Key Club. All the kitties and puppies were so snuggly and looked so cute. I couldn't resist taking them. I smuggled all the fur out to my car. Yikes."

Kayla Quinlan, 12

"On my way to Penn Forest Park, I saw a money truck being robbed in a dark alley. I stopped to see what was happening, and the robbers saw me and ran. Next thing I know, the police show up and arrest me. I was just trying to stop people from getting their bread."

Nick Borchevsky, 9

"I was driving on the highway, and a car was coming up pretty fast in the other lane. I thought he wanted to race, so I hit the gas and pulled way ahead. Next thing I know, he turned on his lights and sirens. If you ask me, the cop was just mad because I was winning the race."

Lauren Champ 12th

"I went to the local 7-11 and saw a cart full of Hershey Kisses. I didn't have any cash, so I tucked them in my shirt and took off running. A cop was right outside and arrested me. I told him I had to take them because I don't get kisses from anyone else."

"My favorite high school memory was the day before winter break my freshman year. It was my birthday and we had a food day in class, and everyone was just really happy and there was no stressing about school work."

Rachel Boch, 12

"My favorite memory was when I went to nationals in FPLA for Burton. We won 1st in regionals and 3rd in states, so we were able to go to nationals. It stands out to me because it is something I was able to do with my friends."

Michael Nichols, 12

"My favorite memory is my prom night my junior year. It was really fun. I got to hang out with my friends and my girlfriend, all while enjoying a very memorable night."

Ryan Svec, 12

"My favorite high school memory was definitely beating the juniors at powderpuff. It was an epic win, and a lot of people were talking smack. It was really good to win it instead of it being rigged."

BELIEVE IN MAGIC

Butterbeer for days.

"I FELL IN LOVE WITH HARRY POTTER 19 YEARS AGO. My fourth grade teacher, Mrs. Baker, started reading 'Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone' at the end of each day, and, after two days, I was hooked. I forced my dad to buy me the first two books. I then became obsessed and wanted to know everything about this magical world. I attended every midnight release party at Barnes and Noble and bought tickets for the movie premieres months in advance. I was in awe of the way the books allowed me to transport myself to another world, where everything seemed to always feel familiar and safe. As I got older, Harry Potter continued to hold a place in my heart. Over the past two years I was able to travel to Universal Studios, where I immersed myself in Harry Potter World, drinking all the Butterbeer I could, having Ollivander choose my wand (10.5-inch willow with a phoenix feather) and riding the Hogwarts Express. It was a dream trip. I was so excited to see the flames shoot out of the mouth of the dragon on top of Gringotts, that I actually cried. I was in Oxford, England over Spring Break last year. I stood in the Great Hall where Harry stood before he was sorted, as well as on the grand staircase where he met Dumbledore for the first time. Needless to say, my love for Harry Potter started early and still is in full force, even after all this time. And it always will be."

WHY THE EARS?

"BEFORE TEACHING, I WORKED FOR THE COMMONWEALTH OF Virginia and the Social Security Administration. Before Christmas, we would have a big potluck luncheon at our office and various consulting physicians played Santa as part of our gift-giving segment of the celebration. I helped to recruit the doctors, and one year I told one of the doctors that if he would play Santa then I would be his elf. He agreed, so I rented the elf costume I still use today. At the same time, my mom, Zora, was an instructional assistant at Back Creek Elementary School, and she suggested the preschool class might like having a visit from the elf. I started visiting them, and, since then, I've visited other schools and local businesses in December (often with Santa and Mrs. Claus). I'm also the elf at the 'Breakfast with Santa' for CHIP, the Children's Health Investment Partnership, at the Hotel Roanoke. I love CHIP's mission, which is to help provide medical care for children in need. One of the biggest challenges I've faced over the years is making my ears believable. I learned early on that little kids are brutally honest, so I've had to make my pointy ears as lifelike as possible. I've used a variety of makeup techniques and think I now have my ears at the point that they look very real, even up close."

THEME:

"WHERE" seemed fitting as a theme this year. We have been through the ringer this year: awaiting reconstruction, not knowing when we were going to move, looking out of our windows onto a seemingly sea of trailers that looked daunting at best. But, in the end, this is where we are. In a classroom or a "mobile learning cottage," we're still Cave Spring.

ASSEMBLY:

COVER: We dig this cover and really hope you do, too! Our staffs usually love a traditional Cave red & black book, and this modern take on a traditional vibe looks really good in our opinion. Our base material is a vista executive litho wrapped around a 145-point cover board. We also used an anti-scruff mat and black foil.

PRINTING: Vegetable-based inks on 100-pound premium matte paper applied in the Herff Jones Kansas City printing facility. Mark Plyler served as customer service adviser. And, as a side note, they better hope he never retires!!! Mark is THA MAN.

PORTRAITS & GROUPS: Lifetouch

RECOGNITION: Accolade has appeared on both the CSPA Crown and NSPA Pacemaker lists and won numerous state championships. "NOW IS THE TIME," the 2018 book, won a state championship.

SPECIAL THANKS:

Jess St. John: Year two down and you did a wonderful job! Thanks for talking the off the ledge and helping with those "hot messes."

Mark Plyler: Seriously. Thank you. I think I email you more than my husband sometimes. Love you!

Amy Hayden: Thank you for being so generous with your photos (and salsa recipe). You rock!

Connie Alonso-Mosher: Thanks for keeping us straight on the business side of things. You are the best!

Mr. Spangler, Mr. Parker, Mrs. Deeds and Mr. Hall: You are always so supportive and trusting of us, and we appreciate you so much.

Mr. Steve Kent: Second year without you, second year I'm putting you in this book. Without your big vision and amazingly beautiful talent, I wouldn't be able to put this yearbook thang together. I try to remember everything you taught me and make you proud.

THE REMNANTS OF ROOM 104
ARE SEEN AFTER AVIS
CONSTRUCTION DEMOLISHED PARTS OF THE ENGLISH WING.

The room had been home to many students, teachers and courses throughout the years. Most recently, Mrs. Chrystal Shawn taught English and Photojournalism in the room. "Seeing the building fall was hard to watch," senior Alyssa Godfrey said. "Watching it be destroyed and not having a school is difficult because of all the memories that were torn down with it, but at the same time it's like closing this chapter of my life, which is nice in a way."

HOPEFULLY IN WHAT WILL BE THE LAST TIME IN CUFFS, members of the senior class who dressed up for their homecoming class theme of "Shackled Seniors" pose for a fun picture. The graduating class of 2019 was the last group of seniors to go through the building. "Next year I will be attending Virginia Tech, where I plan to major in multimedia journalism with plans to pursue my passion for film editing," senior Clay Williams said.
