A scenic view of the Roanoke Valley from a high vantage point. The foreground is dominated by dense green trees and shrubs. In the middle ground, a vast valley stretches out, filled with rolling hills and patches of green fields. In the distance, more mountain ranges are visible under a clear blue sky with a few wispy clouds. A wooden sign is positioned in the lower right foreground, providing information about the view and elevation.

Roanoke, Virginia

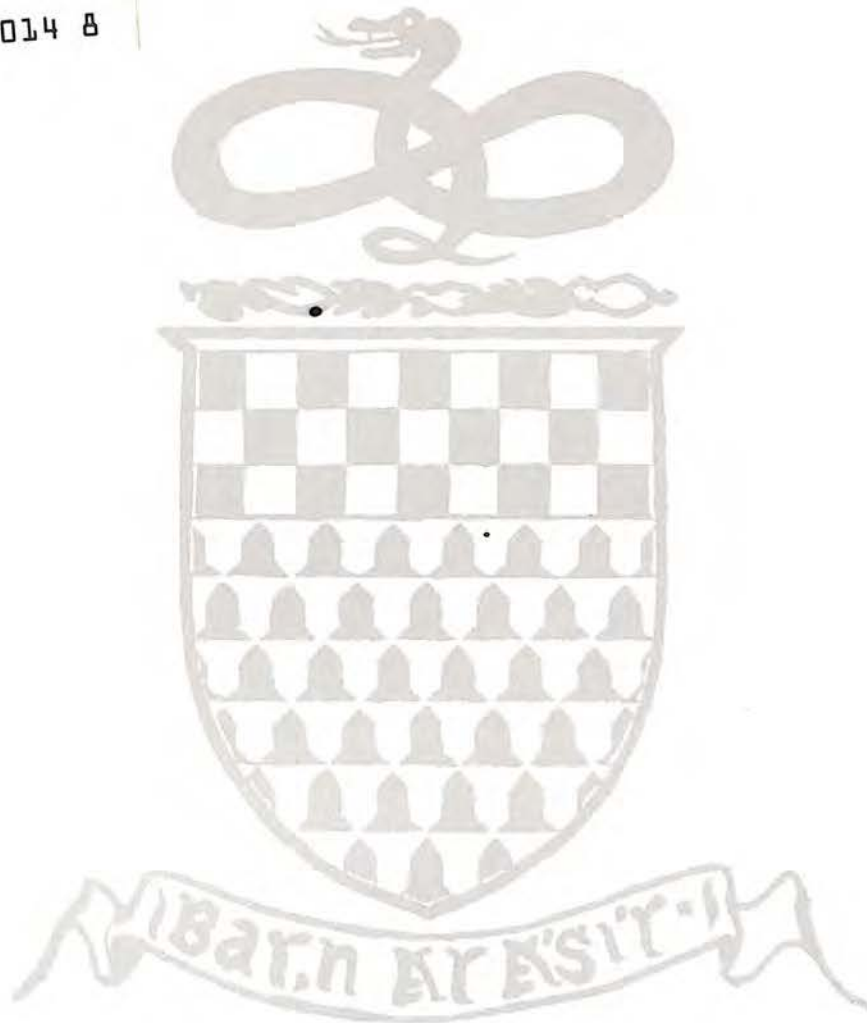

A faint, light-colored illustration in the background of the page. It features a large, five-pointed star with a grid-like pattern inside it. The star is surrounded by stylized trees and foliage, including a tall, thin evergreen on the right side and a cluster of bushes or smaller trees on the left. The overall style is that of a simple line drawing or a light-colored print.

William Fleming Senior High School . . .

Colonel William Fleming's coat of arms, which the school proudly displays in honor of him is proof of his noble lineage. The scepter surmounted by a coiled serpent indicates a family of royal birth. The checkerboard is the symbol of great huntsmen; the figures beneath, referred to as greyhounds, are the mark of brave and daring fighters. The translation of the motto is "May the king live forever."

a landmark of learning in a magical atmosphere

With community achievement

"In the heart of nature's wonders" lies our valley, creating a lasting impression of beauty in our minds as we gaze across the blue and purple mountains. Challenged by these surroundings, we are striving, as future adults of the valley and of the world, to increase our knowledge.

We are responsible now and in the future for the progress of the valley. If we are to make a contribution to this progress, we must be guided by the generations before us. We cannot, however, be complacent with what others have done. Nor can we think of our school lives as ending with the ringing of the bell at the end of the day, for we carry our school into our domestic and community lives.

We are fortunate to live in this valley with its natural beauty and man-made progress. Each of us has an obligation to uphold the fine traditions of our school and community and to preserve for those who follow "The Magic of the Valley."

We honor . . .

Wisdom and witticism characterize one who has made her subjects come alive for her students since she first became a part of Fleming life. Her students find her flair for the dramatic a memorable part of her teaching, as Chaucer, Shakespeare, Browning, Wordsworth become living entities.

There are many, too, who recall her sympathetic understanding and her willingness to give of herself, both for the welfare of the individual and of the school. The drama department and the SCA have been among the activities which have felt the influence of her magnetic leadership and unstinting aid.

During her seventeen years on the faculty, her pungent humor has coined many Fleming by-words, while her "Wailing Wall" and "No Gum" signs and her references to the Foreign Legion (which she sometimes jestingly threatened to join) are an integral part of the school tradition.

One of her former students once aptly described her as his "most unforgettable character" and there are numerous students, present and former, who would fervently agree. Of her it can truly be said,

"Beyond the book her teaching sped
She left on them she taught the trace
Of kinship with the deathless dead".

With deep respect and devotion, we dedicate this 1963 edition of the Colonel to Mrs. Catherine Guthrie Loomis.

Mrs. Loomis reads "Mother Goose" to her grandsons, Jamie and Edmond McDowell.

She lectures to a senior group on the Elizabethan Age.

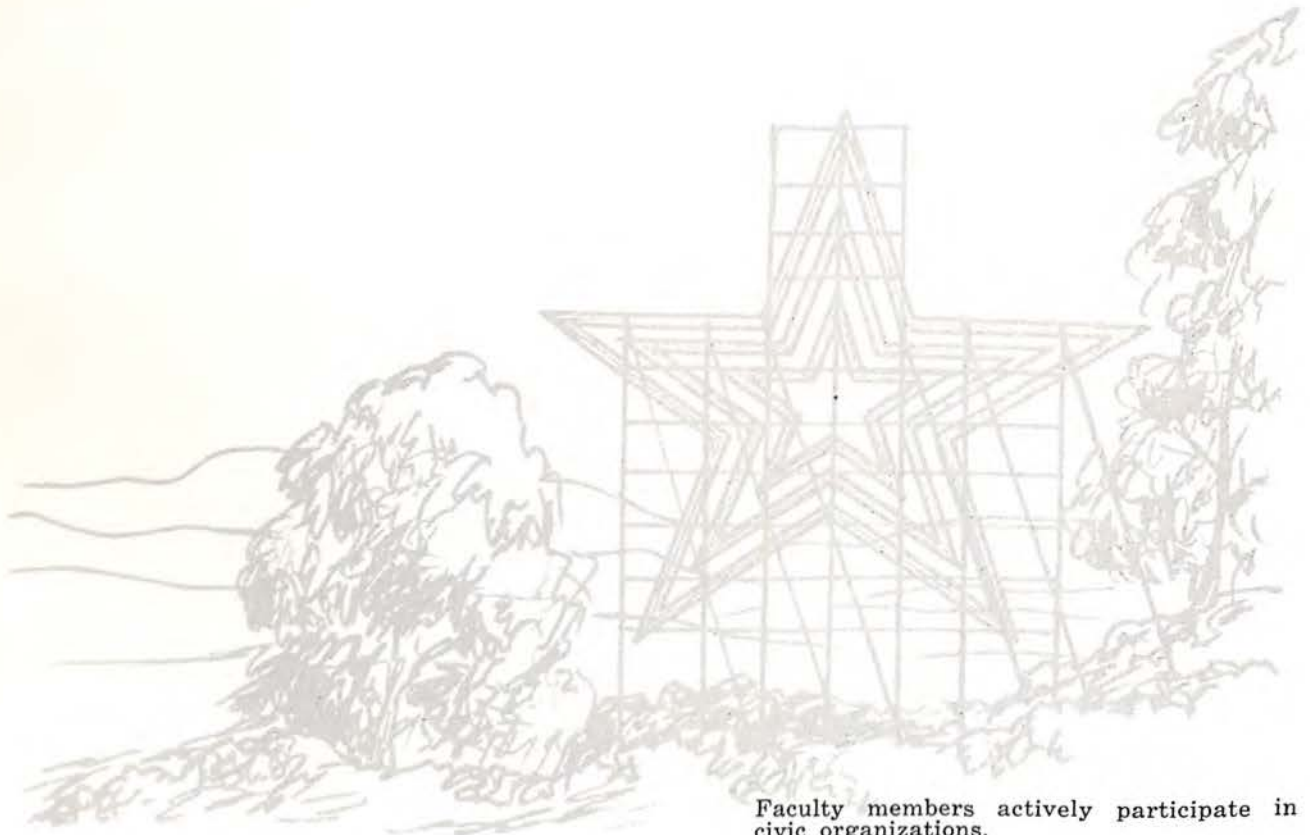

Faculty

With the addition of nine teachers new to Fleming's staff, the faculty began to function for another school year. Grading papers, attending faculty meetings and parent conferences, and participating in departmental workshops occupied many hours of would-be free time for the faculty. Not only did they guide students through classroom instruction, but also worked with them as sponsors and in other extra-curricular activities.

These men and women consistently influenced the Fleming students through their example and by their word. They attempted to make the acquisition of knowledge meaningful and to relate it to the tasks ahead. They supported student leadership as a basic necessity for the development of future responsibility in valley life. Their efforts enabled the students to draw nearer to the realities of accepting their roles as mature citizens and endeavored to mold the future leaders, business administrators and politicians of the valley.

Faculty members actively participate in civic organizations.

Curriculum

As they approached a new realm of life in the valley, new demands of progress and knowledge became apparent to all of the students as the builders of tomorrow. An expanding range of subjects was offered to ready students for their subsequent careers and further education. Through this varied curriculum, students not only gained knowledge to be used in their life and work in the future, but also knowledge of practical value for the present.

Significant endeavors to make progress in educational practice brought frequent visitors to the school from all parts of the country. Since the school-within-a-school concept was still relatively new, Fleming students and teachers had ample opportunity to exhibit the magic of educational advances and to tell those who came what is evolving in the curriculum which strives to fit students for life in this space age of which our valley has become a part.

Team teaching

English

Miss Ferguson, Mrs. Loomis, and Miss Stone, team teachers, utilize the school book store as they assign Sinclair Lewis novels to their junior English classes.

With the introduction of team teaching, the English Department felt that it took a forward step in instruction in the fundamentals of writing and speaking and the appreciation of literature. Under the leadership of teams composed of three teachers on each grade level, many students came together at various times in the general education rooms to hear lectures or see films, and then returned to their classrooms for more individualized attention.

Dr. Frank Slaughter, noted author, explains the problems of writers to English students.

Duties and importance of citizenship

New teaching methods, audio-visual aids, maps, charts, and field trips supplemented social studies classes. Government classes stressed the importance of active citizenship and sponsored the annual Municipal Day for Seniors, allowing them to become city government officials for one day. World history students enjoyed an extensive study of Egypt while American history students studied the growth of the United States. The Advanced history class students profited by a three day trip to Washington in May.

Dorothy Burton explains her ancient history notebook to Wayne Chocklett and Peggy Hill.

Social Studies

Lynn Brubaker and Stephen McCarty discuss our nation's Constitution in American History class.

Modern language program expanded

Demand for languages has increased with the realization that the world is no longer small. Spanish and French have expanded their offerings to three years. Latin continued to be popular and new classes were added. German, in its second year as a programmed course, brought the knowledge that there was more to the language than "Geizundheit".

Mr. Coulter stands ready to assist students in his programmed German class.

Mr. Hudson and his third year students, Lynne Belcher, Sue Jennings, Ann Kepner, and Mary Kessler review fine points of French grammar.

Languages

Linda Williams and Harry Colman display a poster depicting the Roman chariot races.

Spanish classes capture Castilian atmosphere as Glenn Reedy, Wayne Wimmer, Wanda Robison, Mike Dodd, and Virginia Thomas demonstrate a folk dance.

Fine Arts

The second year speech class works on building a set with Mrs. Dickinson.

Individual talents

Fifth period choir class begins practice on Christmas music under Mrs. Webb's direction.

The creative student finds a place for his individual ability in the fine arts department. This year the music department curriculum was enlarged to include music theory, as well as band and choir. Increased interest in art led to the separation of third and fourth year courses, which plotted their own courses of study. The play production classes took advantage of their modern facilities to do such laboratory work as a scene from A Midsummer's Night's Dream in assembly.

The fine program performed at half time at the football games can be attributed to the hours of precision practice by the band.

recognized and developed

Art students, Johnny Owen, Judy Fuqua, Richard Updike, Sandra Nichols, and Ronnie Tyree express originality through cartooning.

Paul Porterfield, Linda Haga, and Mike Hagan display talents in preparing a display for their second year algebra class.

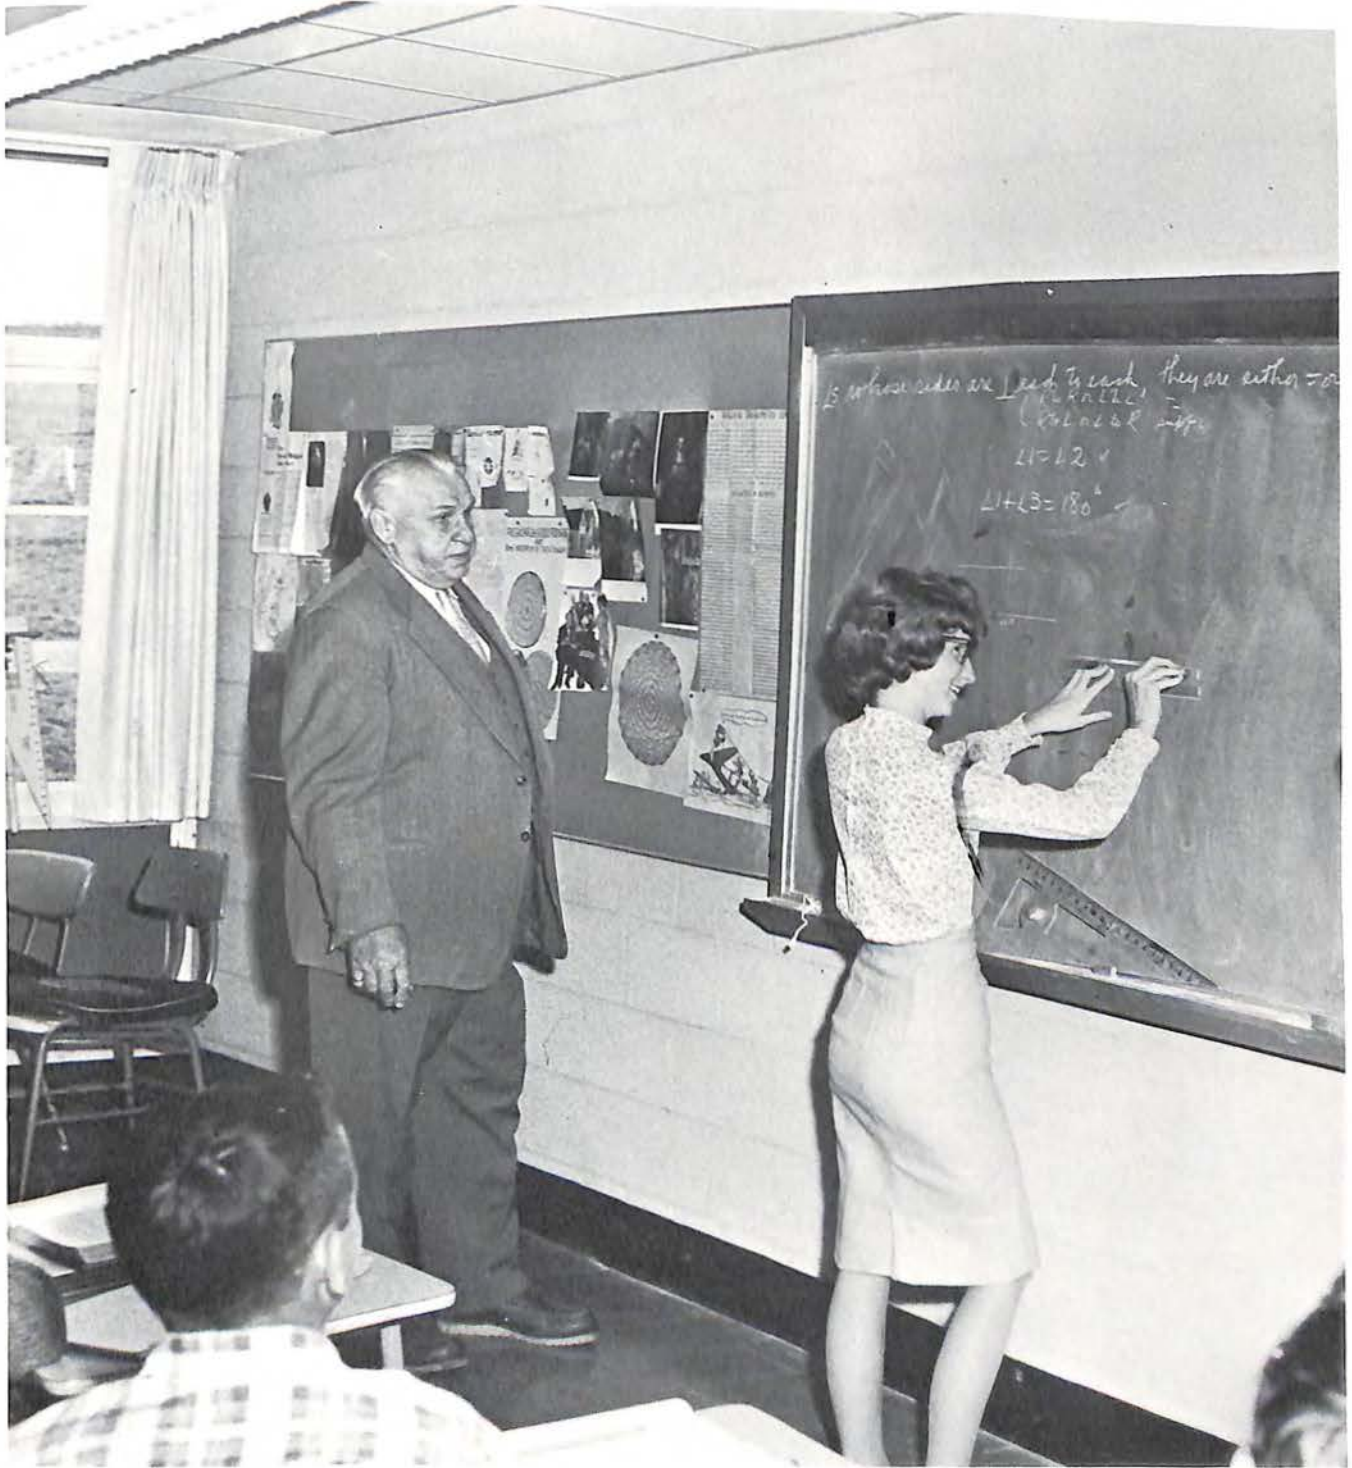

Fleming's math department, together with the math department of other Roanoke schools, gained nationwide interest through two recent articles in national magazines. Because of this publicity and the general interest in programmed learning, frequent visitors from other localities come to observe the various math classes. A new course in calculus was added to the regular classes in algebra, geometry, trigonometry and solid geometry. Two classes in contract math were made up of tenth grade students who had formerly been grouped together in junior high schools.

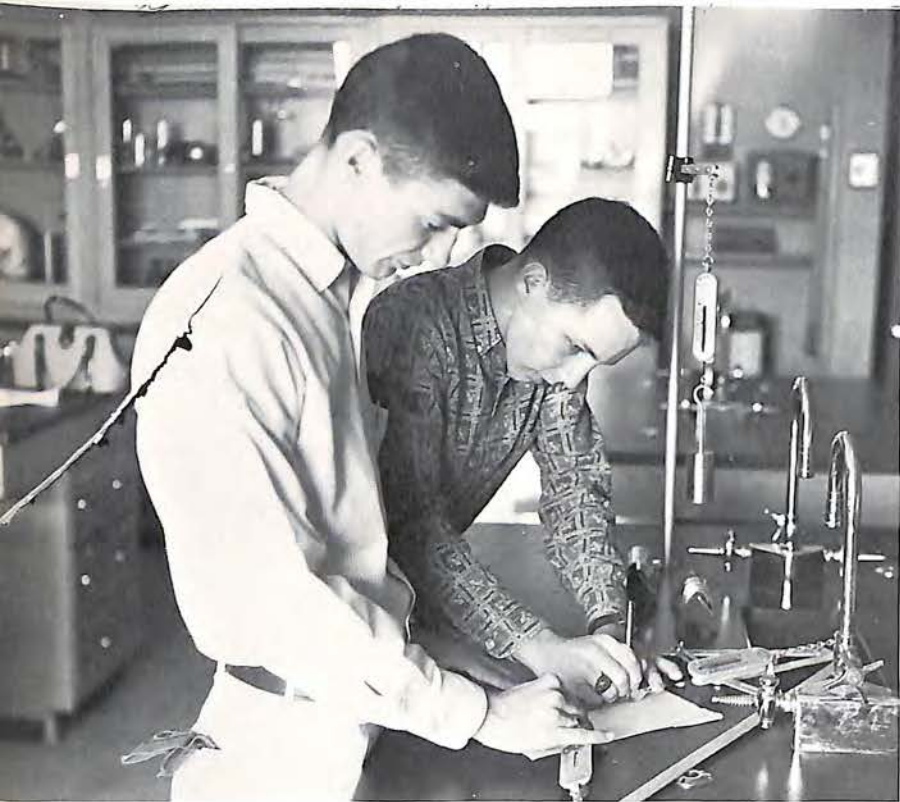

Mr. Goodman and Mr. Turner discuss conic sections, as described in programmed math books.

Mr. Freitag supervises Celia Leftwich as she solves problem in plane geometry.

Jimmy Phlegar and Eddie Allen plot forces in a physics experiment.

Science

Knowledge acquired

Through laboratory analysis, students made practical application of the knowledge acquired in biology, chemistry, and physics class lectures. Team teaching and emphasis on green house activities offered a wider range of challenges for first year biology students while advanced biology underwent a new experience with an experimental course in programmed learning.

Mr. Spessard's "green house boys", Steve Cochran, Ray Richardson, Russell King, and Bill Hollandsworth, make last check before closing for the day.

Buck Garland, June Jones, Barry Via, and Donna Lovell experiment with acids and bases in Mr. Hill's chemistry class.

Business

Margaret Bowles and Donna Hensley practice techniques to be used on the job.

Betty Edwards practices typing a telegram in second year typing class.

Practical skills acquired by students participating in the business classes prepared them for their future careers. Classes in typing were filled to capacity and the department added another teacher because of larger demands in the fields of shorthand, bookkeeping, and general business. The Vocational Office Training program expanded to two sections, sending students to on-the-job training, and the Distributive Education course taught its members the techniques of merchandising while giving its members experience in sales work.

Darlene Hamilton perfects her shorthand.

V. O. T. students Madora Light and Pat White practice operating office machines.

Varied commercial training program offered

Domestic and manual experience provided

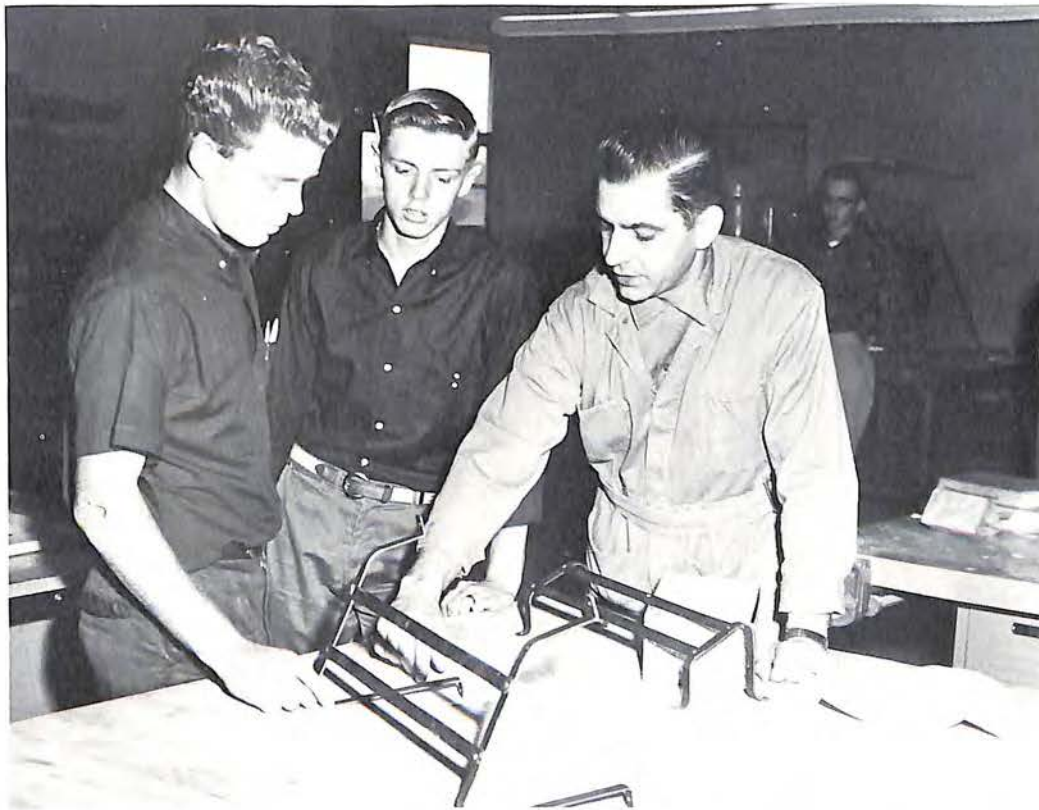

Girls in home economics class work on their sewing projects.

Elective courses of practical value are a vital part of the school curriculum. Home economics courses offered budgeting, interior decorating, and child care as well as cooking and sewing. The industrial arts curriculum was enlarged to include ceramics in addition to woodworking and metalcraft. Mechanical drawing classes learned the skills of drafting.

Dickie Byrd and Barry Beamer practice engineering skills in mechanical drawing class.

Mr. Hollenbach explains to Johnny Long and Darrel Barr the measurements of a shoe rack in relation to its cost.

Practical Arts

Instruction supplemented by counseling

Mr. Ferguson points out college possibilities to Sheila Moses.

Opportunities of the future were explored by students with the aid of the Guidance Department, functioning under Mr. Joe Ferguson, the new Coordinator. In October, the area high schools sponsored a college night in cooperation with state colleges. Later in the year the department held a career night, inviting area business and industry leaders to talk with the students.

Juniors planning to attend college take the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Tests.

Mr. Elliot, Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. Odom, and Miss Stone, counselors, leave for an in-service training meeting.

Guidance

With the training of the mind comes the physical training of the body. Beginning in 1962-63 physical education was required for three years at Fleming, offering advancement of athletic skills, coordination, and sportsmanship. The importance of healthful habits and personal hygiene was stressed in the health classes. Supplementary instruction in driver training was available through the physical education department.

David Muddiman and Joe Drumheller wait patiently as Mr. Wooldridge adjusts Wayne Carter's safety belt for a practice drive.

Physical fitness program emphasized

Sophomore girls improve physical fitness by taking daily callisthenics.

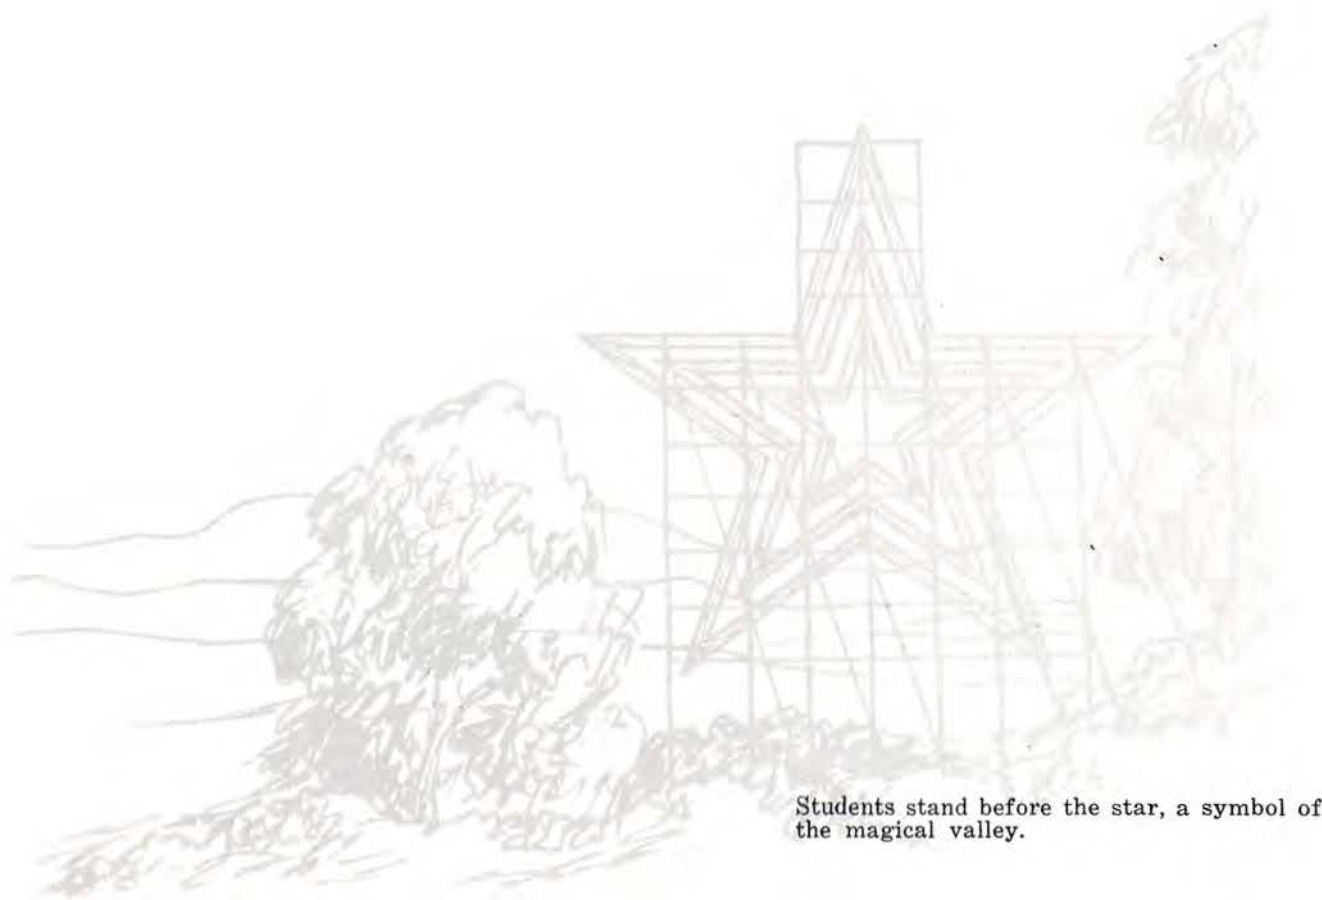

Physical Education

Students

The number of students at Fleming increased this year, and with this increase came the chance for greater and more meaningful contact with each other. Profiting from Fleming's school-within-a-school plan, students learned from others in unit assemblies, clubs, and projects, and in activities with the entire student body.

Our modern educational facilities at Fleming played an important part in molding futures, but Fleming students, through this daily contact enlarged their educational opportunities and grew in leadership and congeniality. Members of the student body at Fleming, through their contacts with others developed the qualities which will make them better citizens of the magical Valley.

Students stand before the star, a symbol of the magical valley.

Class of '63 recognizes leadership and scholarship

The spirit of the class of '63 began to be felt as the group who had entered the new school together for the first time in the fall of '61 settled into a feeling of belonging. Mrs. Brown was made head sponsor for the class, and with the assistance of Mrs. Boyd from Camper, Mrs. Odom from Hart and Mr. Hill from Smith, the class elected officers and began plans for the year.

For the first time the Ring Dance was combined with the Christmas Dance and senior rings were presented at intermission. The senior assembly made an unequaled "astronautical" journey. The ordering of caps and gowns, cards and announcements brought the usual buzz of excitement; and the dedication of the annual in May cleared up the year's mystery as to who the dedicatee would be. Senior banquet, Senior Day, the junior-senior prom, and, at last, graduation, brought the class to the end of school life and the beginning of life as citizens of the valley and the world.

Seniors graduating with a 4.8 or better average are Margaret Payne, Roger Coffey, Dorothy Boyd, Susan Saunders, Eddie Allen, Joanna Harris, and Mary Bowman.

The Junior Class

Achievement was the aim of the junior class activities this year. In their efforts which included hops for the student body, money-raising projects, and the Junior-Senior Prom, juniors had a year of accomplishment. Guided by their respective unit sponsors, Mr. Melone in Hart Hall, Mr. Foti in Smith Hall, Miss Williams in Camper Hall, and Mr. Spessard as head-chairman, they were encouraged to develop leadership.

Taking advantage of new and advanced courses, juniors readied themselves for their future. College-bound students took P.S.A.T. and National Merit Scholarship Tests and began looking toward a new dimension of learning. As they approached their final year, the juniors accepted a more serious outlook toward school and community life, while endeavoring to maintain the traditions set by previous classes at Fleming.

Activities

With the ambition of youth comes a need for organized activities, for with the growth of intellect must come the growth of character. In attaining this goal, Fleming continued to offer opportunities unlimited, opportunities for students to share interests, to carry out projects, to socialize, and to practice the virtue of good citizenship. Besides providing a source of relaxation and enjoyment to those who participated, these clubs benefited the school by gaining community recognition for projects and achievement. Today's students were trained to be tomorrow's leaders and co-curricular activities cultivated the qualities of leadership and cooperation in school life. Inspired by the cultural surroundings students worked toward the future in the magical valley.

Earl Muntzing, Chairman of Hart Hall, Bill Deyerle, President, and Jimmy Phlegar, Chairman of Smith Hall listen as Secretary Gale Arrington reads minutes of S.C.A. general council meeting.

Only the S.C.A. could boast a membership of 1082. Every student in the school was a member and received representation to the general council of the S.C.A. Activities for the year included the introduction of the Honor Code to new students and a drive to gain more support for the Code from upperclassmen. The student directory was published by the S.C.A. Christmas activities included decoration of the school and the collection of baskets of food for needy families. Sponsorship of the spring formal was a project during the spring semester. Long-range plans for an exchange student were begun by the 1962-63 organization.

Led by Kenny Spiers and guided by Mrs. Sifford and Mr. Hill, the Beta Club contributed to higher scholastic standards. Activities included a tutoring service for tenth grade students, selling programs at football games, and the Beta Assembly program. At Christmas, a living tree was presented by Beta members for the school campus and planted beside Smith Hall. After mid-term, a banquet and induction service was held which honored new members.

Thespians vary productive moods

Taking advantage of their new facilities, the Thespians ended their '62 season with You Can't Take It With You. Changing mood, the group chose as their fall production The Diary of Ann Frank. According to tradition, Benet's "A Child Is Born" was presented during the Christmas season. Thespian activities were not limited to school entertainment however, for they also performed for such community groups as the Lions Club.

Meeting deadlines was by far the biggest project of the Colonel Staff. However, the staff did find time to decorate a float for the Homecoming Parade and send delegates to the S.P.I.A. conference at Washington and Lee University. The year, of course, was highlighted by the delivery of The Colonel in the spring with its ensuing excitement of revealing the year's dedicatee.

Cheryl Peters, Activities Editor, and Ruby Scott consult with Dorothy Boyd, Layout Editor, Anne Kepner, and Lynne Brubaker concerning the activities section.

Betty Farmer, Larry Bower, Susan Saunders, Mary Clingingpeel, Ann Foutz, Doug Gibson, and Mary Hale check ads and proof read copy.

Accurate coverage of all school news and other news concerning the school was the function of the 1962-63 Sabre staff. To assure this coverage, the staff kept a frequency chart. With each of the sixteen issues published during the year, they strove to improve their work. Attendance at S.I.P.A. convention at Lexington in April rewarded their efforts.

Bible Club leads in spiritual growth

Officers, Dreama Dudley, President; Kay Windley, Vice-President; and Linda Booe, Secretary confer with sponsor, Miss Walton to plan a meeting for the Bible Club.

Lending inspiration to all its members, the Bible Club offered spiritual growth. Seeking to understand and interpret the Bible correctly, the group had serious discussions, and saw slides of Biblical lands. Members of the Bible Club used these opportunities for study and fellowship to broaden their Christian ideals.

Tommy Brown, George Arnold, Lynn Dent, Paul Porterfield, members of the Hi-Y, prepare to deliver the Christmas Baskets.

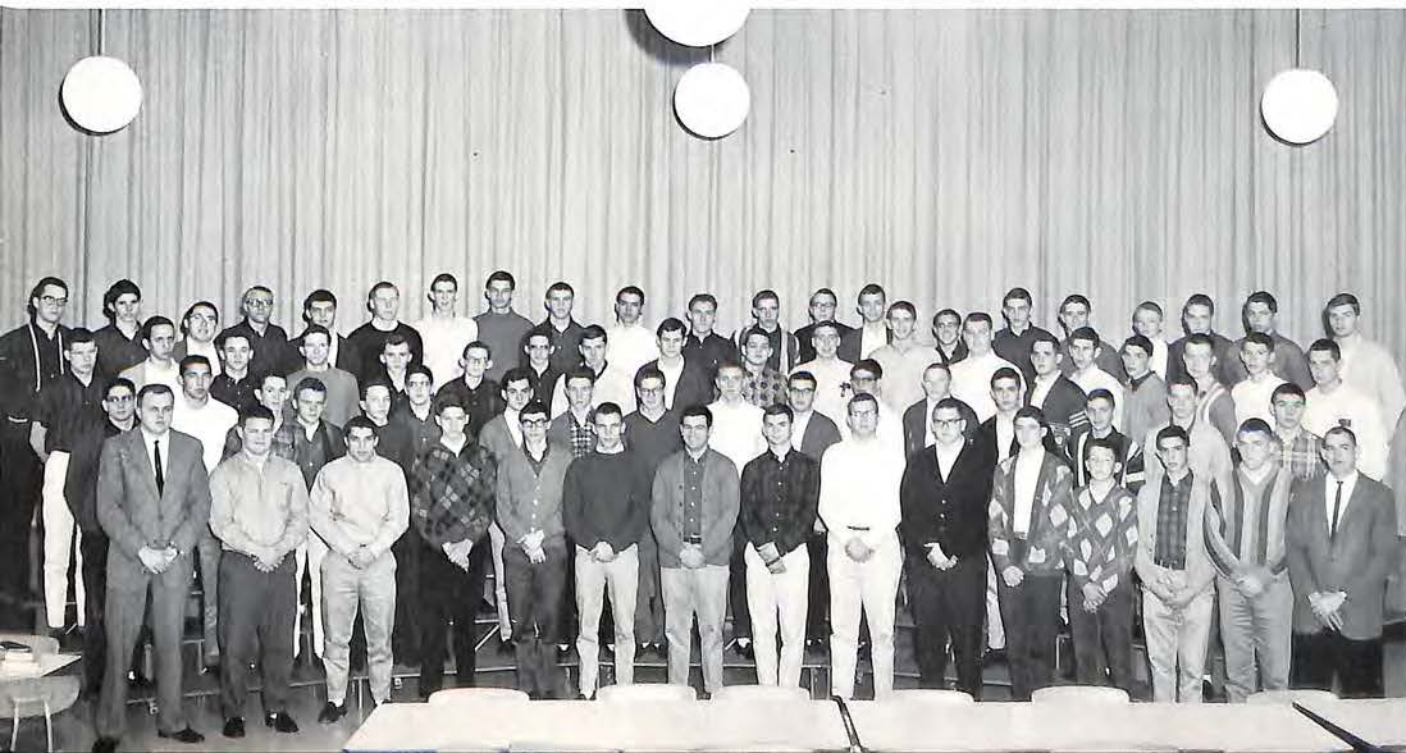

Hi-Y members worked enthusiastically to make the 1962-63 term a worthwhile one. The club sponsored a clean-up campaign to make the school campus more attractive, and brightened the holiday season for community families by delivering Christmas baskets. In October, the club played host to fourteen schools participating in the district conference at Fleming.

Working diligently on decorations for the Christmas Dance are Pete Pendleton, Carolyn Deyerle, Ina Crouch, Janice Davidson, Freddie Sprenger, Frankie Catron, and Gabrielle Campbell.

Giving a happy Christmas to a boy at the Boy's Home was one of the major service projects of the William Fleming Y-Teens. Endeavoring to develop the spiritual and economic interests of its members, the Y-Teens had a very active year. The year started with an installation assembly of new officers and ended with an Easter assembly. The big event of the year was the Christmas Dance co-sponsored by the Y-Teens and Hi-Y.

Carolyn Haley, Susan Peters, Sue Slater, and Gabrielle Campbell make plans for an American Education Week program.

Beginning its year's activities, the F.T.A. sent representatives to the District P convention at Andrew Lewis in Salem in September, and held its first regular monthly meeting. During American Education Week, F.T.A. members entertained the faculty with a tea. Representatives participated in discussions at the state convention at Hotel Roanoke in December. Members observed teaching in city schools. The chapter ended the year with a tea for the honor graduates.

Frankie Catron and Ann Kepner packed hose stuffings to be taken to Catawba Sanitorium.

Fleming's Junior Red Cross played an integral part in the city-wide Junior Red Cross Council. Representatives from Fleming attended monthly council meetings. Art Club presents mural and coat of arms

Beginning with an all-day sketching trip to Carvin's Cove, the Art Club had one of its most active years in Fleming's history. One of the most outstanding accomplishments was a twenty-foot mural depicting the various aspects of the life of Colonel William Fleming and a copy of his coat of arms for the administration building. Paintings for the deans' offices and the teacher's lounges were completed and hung. Entries of several members at the February Heironimus Art Show made a notable showing.

Dr. David Redfield explains Science Fair rules to the Science Club.

In September the Virginia Junior Academy of Science presented the William Fleming Science Club with a charter. Later the club took a field trip to the Amhurst County Club High School to view the Nike Zeus rocket display. In March the members participated in the science fair which was held in Roanoke. Several field trips were made to professional laboratories in and around the Roanoke area. Prominent speakers spoke to the group concerning vocational opportunities and personal advancement through the field of science.

Miss June Carter, a Mexican missionary, shows slides of her work to the Spanish Club.

Toys and clothes mailed to children in the Shrine Hospital in Mexico City, and a Christmas party in the school cafetorium were the major functions of the Spanish club. Students from Fleming, Patrick Henry, and Jefferson attended the party. At the party a pinnata was broken and refreshments were served. A banquet in the late spring ended the year's activities for the club.

French Club arouses interest and initiative

Lynne Brubaker and Judy Lewis trace a map of Paris for a club project.

During the club's second year of organization, the chief aim was that of promoting interest in the language and history of France, her customs and traditions. The club practiced conversational French, visited the language lab at Hollins, entertained guest speakers from France and enjoyed a cultural program of French art presented by the Cultural Exchange Society.

Adopting a welfare child two and a half years old was a major project of the FHA. The Christmas tea for the faculty and tea for SCA officers and sponsors was prepared by the club. It also furnished refreshments for basketball teams and cheerleaders. A fashion show was held in the spring to exhibit achievements and originality in clothing. The annual spring outing was held. Spring federation meetings were included in the spring schedule.

The annual Employer-Employee Banquet was held jointly with Patrick Henry and Jefferson on May 8.

Choir entertains community organizations

Sounds of music and hard work emerged from the choir room every morning during the 4th and 5th periods. The concert choir under the leadership of Mrs. Webb gave concerts throughout the year, including the annual Christmas and spring concerts, and a Christmas program for the Roanoke Jaycees. The All-State Chorus was held in Roanoke and Mrs. Webb was selected to head the group. Fleming was represented with nine members. The choir completed the year singing at baccalaureate and graduation.

Under the able direction of Mr. Kitchen, the Fleming band has proved itself to be one of the best high school bands in the state. Participating in all home football game programs, marching in city parades, and playing benefit concerts kept the band working through the year. Fleming was well represented in All-State Band by sixteen members. The year was highlighted by an invitation to the 1962 Macy's Christmas Parade, which was nationally televised. Band members worked hard selling candy and soliciting funds to finance the New York trip.

Athletics

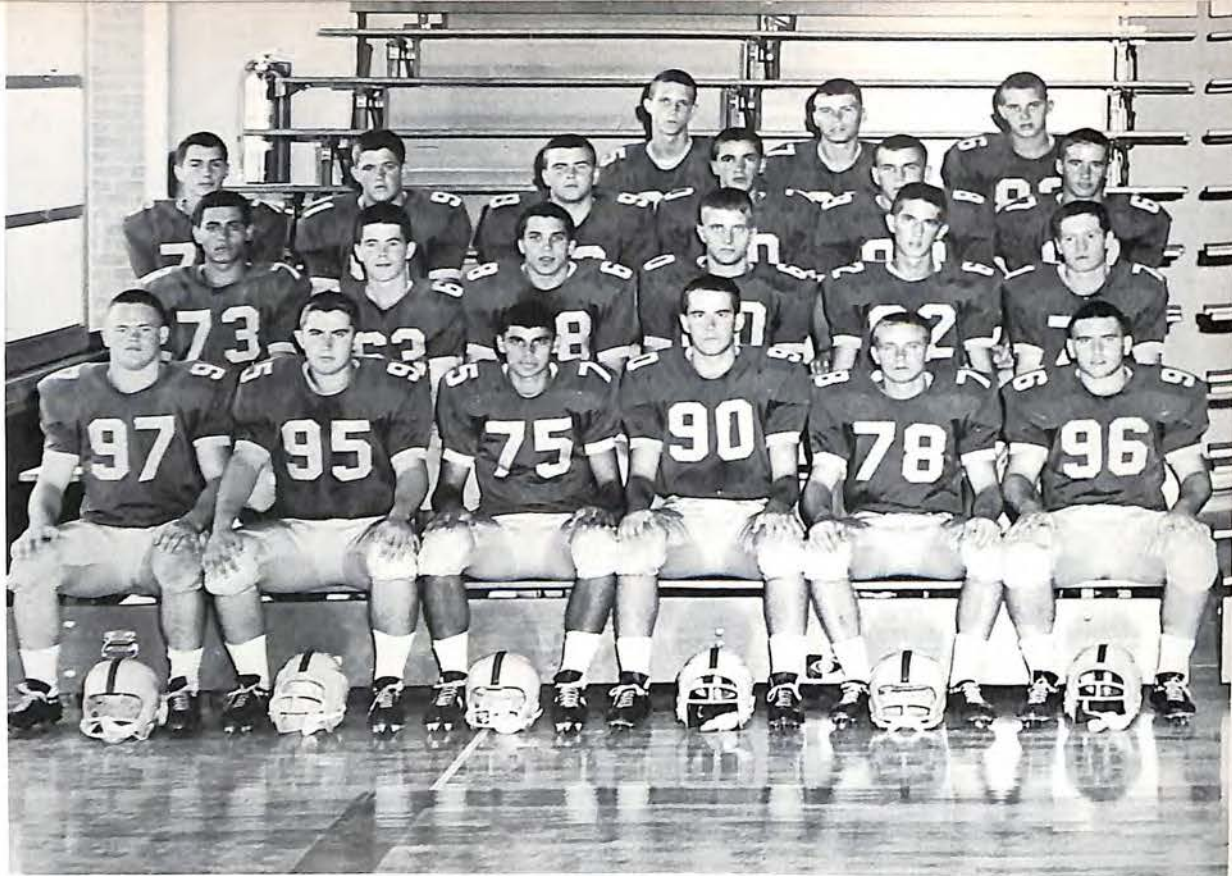

As an integral part of Fleming's extra-curricular opportunities, athletics continued to be one of the chief promoters of school spirit and enthusiasm. Every student had an opportunity to participate, either as an active team member, a cheerleader, or an essential spectator. Whether the teams won or lost, whether they were green or experienced, there was always a crowd of rooters cheering and lending support. Both boys and girls were able to gain recognition in physical achievement, as competition prevailed in intramural and interscholastic sports. Through these programs, character building was stressed and students learned to work together in team spirit. Spectators, players, and coaches united in making the year a thrilling one in the field of athletic advancement while making the athletic program a part of the Magic of the Valley.

Fleming entered the first game with visiting Richlands expecting an easy win. Home fans were disappointed, however, as the Blue Tornadoes, although strongly outplayed on the ground, passed their way to an 18-13 win over the Colonels. In the picture to the left, Steve McCarty (67) scored Fleming's second touchdown.

a jarring tackle on MacClung (00), as Sottile closes in to assist. At the bottom right, McCarty (67) scores one of Fleming's two touchdowns.

Although by general opinion, Fleming was destined to lose to highly-rated E. C. Glass of Lynchburg, a strong desire to win, coupled with an excellent defensive effort, paid off for the Colonels as the Hill-toppers were tied 6-6. At the right, Unrue (7), Carter (20), Wooldridge (34), and Wright (6) finally move in to stop Fleming's Updike (75).

The Colonels next traveled to Charlottesville, for a group IA clash with Lane High School. Not playing at its best, the Fleming squad was unexpectedly beaten by a score of 19-0 by the big and powerful Black Knights. At the left, Fleming's Deyerle is stopped by a Lane player after a five-yard gain.

A homecoming crowd of some 12,000 persons watched the Colonels battle a powerful Andrew Lewis team. The Wolverines of Salem went on to cut and slash their way to a well-deserved 14-0 victory over Fleming, which itself played good ball. In the picture on the left, Harris (78) grabs a ten-yard pass as an unidentified Lewis player (85) moves in for the tackle.

After a week's layoff, the Colonels hosted the Cougars of Covington, a team considered to be the best ever produced by that school. In a terrific defensive battle, Fleming pushed across a touchdown and extra point to slip past the visitors 7-6. At the left, McCarty turns the corner for the game-winning point.

In its annual game with Danville, Fleming dominated the first half, with the half-time score being 20-0 in the Colonel's favor. The fired-up Danville team, however, refused to quit, and with two touchdowns in each of the last quarters, stunned the home team by winning 26-20. Pictured to the right is McCarty, being stopped by number 40 of Danville.

In the last game of the season, the Colonels met improving Jefferson High School in an always tough cross town rivalry. Constant rain and slippery mud

Homecoming

Excitement reigned high as plans began to materialize for the 1962 Homecoming activities. The theme, "As Time Goes By", was portrayed through the parade, half-time events, and the hop following the game. Even the taste of defeat from Andrew Lewis did not dampen spirits and the celebration will long be remembered.

Fleming's band, dressed in blue and gold, displayed the color of the annual Homecoming Parade through Downtown Roanoke.

The queen of Fleming's twenty-fourth Homecoming weekend was lovely Cheryl Peters. The queen, smiling radiantly despite the chilly weather, was crowned during half-time by Mr. W. A. Coulter, principal, assisted by Bill Deyerle, S.C. A. president, and Mary Hale, senior cheerleader.

Sportsmanship and school spirit among the students were the major goals the William Fleming Varsity Club aimed for. Cheerleaders encourage spirit and form examples

Of vital importance to the school were the Cheerleaders who set the pace for the spirit shown at games. Bake sales and doughnut sales were among the money raising projects undertaken to finance the purchase of new uniforms. Following the tradition of former years, the girls planned, backed, and participated in the Homecoming celebration, with Cheryl Peters, elected by the student body, reigning as Queen. The parade was held in downtown Roanoke on the afternoon of October 12, followed by a banquet for cheerleaders, court, and majorettes. Another highlight of the year was the fact that four cheerleaders, Kelly Littreal, Mary Hale, Cheryl Peters, and Betty Patterson, were chosen to cheer for an insurance convention at Hotel Roanoke.

Sue Dean, Wanda Beggs, Carolyn Roberts, and Sylvia Rock examine the awards that can be won for G.A.A. points.

G.A.A. members initiate new sports

Sponsoring varsity and junior varsity volleyball and basketball and individual and intramural sports was the primary activity of the G.A.A. A physical fitness assembly was the club's major fund-raising project which enabled it to sponsor the Sadie Hawkins Dance in October and a hop closing basketball season in February. Other club projects were a weiner roast for new members, a spaghetti supper, and a final outing in June at Douthat State Park.

G.A.A. offers Brenda Walker, Point Keeper; Rita Nott, Secretary-Treasurer; Sandra Long, President; and Rosie Lunsford, Vice-President.

G.A.A. members Connie Dillon, Sandra Harris, Elaine Akers, Brenda Walker, Rosie Lunsford, Wanda Harris, and Donna Webb look on as student teacher, Miss Snyder, demonstrates the new archery equipment.

Sharon Hensley gets ready to tee off as Jean Kelley, and Donna Webb watch.

Volleyball team posts victories

Displaying skill and enthusiasm, the 1962 Girls' Volleyball Team, guided by Miss Betty Minton and Mrs. Linda Berry, took third place in the city volleyball league. At the conclusion of the season, Miss Bentley, Superintendent of Health and Physical Education for Roanoke City Schools, presented a trophy for the championship to Patrick Henry.

Three varsity members, Sharon Hensley, Sandra Long, and Rita Nott "warm up" before practice.

Varsity and Junior Varsity consolidate

Although winning luck was not with them during the season, the Lady Colonels made a good showing and represented Fleming well in all their basketball games. Since there was not a junior varsity team, the varsity team was under the joint leadership of Miss Betty Minton and Mrs. Linda Berry.

Home

All this is a part of

This is the story of our valley as it is related to one year of our school life. We depict on these pages the institutions that play a major role in our daily lives — our homes, school, churches. These prepare us for the time ahead when we shall step into our places in the business, industry, and education of the community.

Later, we shall establish our own homes, see our children off to school, become leaders in our churches, contribute in whatever way we are best fitted to do so to the expansion, the prosperity, the progress, and, we trust, the beauty of "The Magic of the Valley".

A wide-angle photograph of a mountainous landscape. In the foreground, a dark wooden sign is mounted on two posts. The sign has white text that reads "VIEW ROANOKE VALLEY" in large letters, and "1100 FT. BELOW ELEV. HERE 2125" in smaller letters below it. The background shows a vast valley filled with green trees and rolling hills, with distant mountain ranges visible under a blue sky with light clouds.
