Quotron to Computer . . . 1971: A year to remember.
Bleep.

A year made up of such items of business as

- Gyms to decorate;
- Cheers to chant;
- Goal posts to cross;
- Blackboards to erase;
- Equations to solve;
- Love to share.

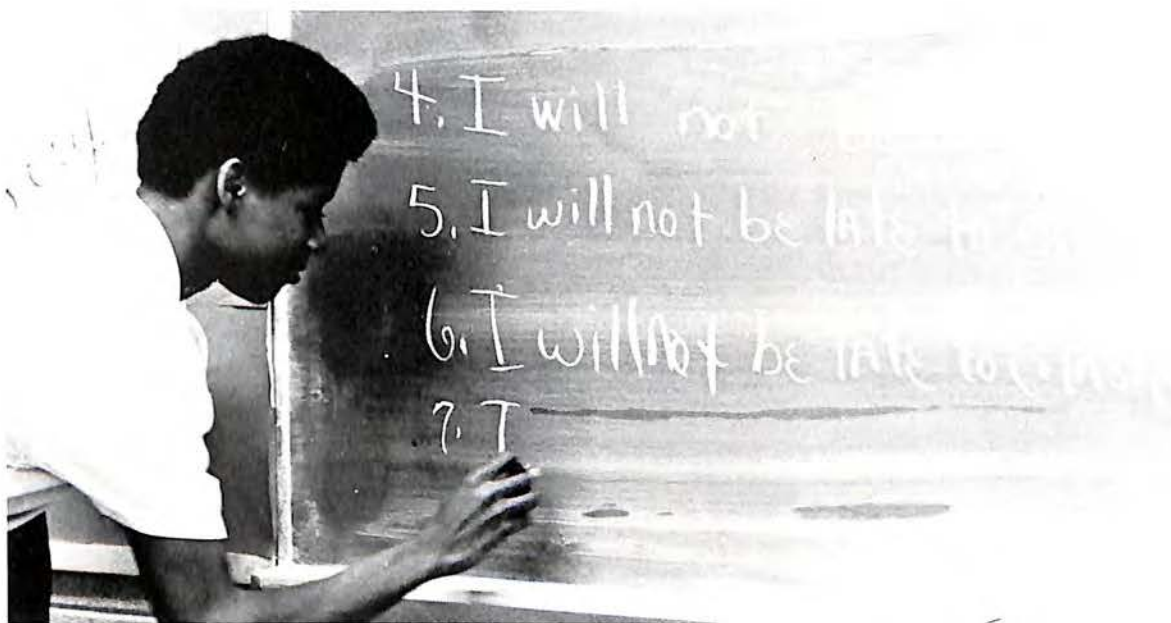

The joy of little things

The scorch of hot chocolate
after a cold game;
The hum of the intercom
that heralds another day;
The smell of baking bread, gym clothes, and chalk;
The sight of new faces,
most friendly, some not;
The feel of a pat on the back from someone who cares.

Sometimes we complained

Of rain on football nights;
Of phones that did not ring;
Of cookies and pies that added
pounds;
Of a teacher that did not understand;
Of chili beans and turnip greens
and countless other things.

But we made beginnings

To feed a few of the hungry;
To pick up a little of the litter;
To visit one or two of the aged;
To give a pint of our blood;
To soothe a friend's disappointment;
To celebrate man's uniqueness and worth.

He Manages Our Many Items Of Business

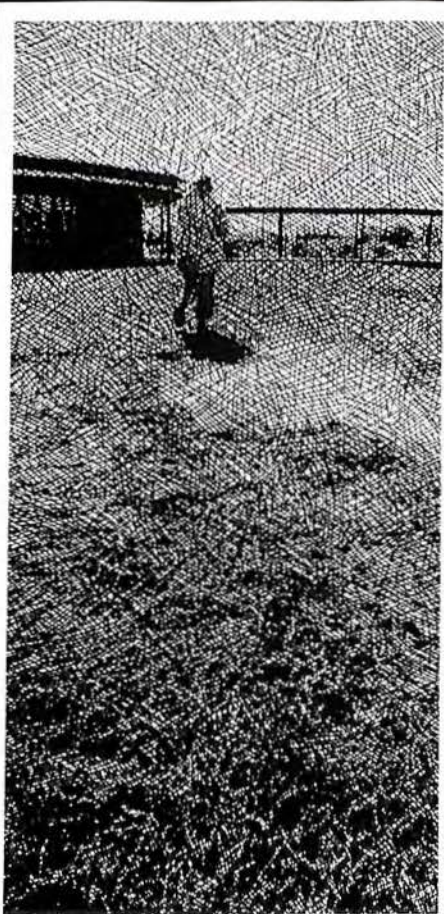

Many items of business clutter a glass-topped desk stacked high with papers and animated by a jingling telephone. The man behind the desk methodically answers letters, writes recommendations, signs checks, and tends to the intricate business of running William Fleming High School. Yet, this man known to us is not someone secluded in one small corner of the roundhouse. He is presenting bouquets to homecoming royalty; strolling through the halls, his twinkling eyes and deep infectious smile vaguely suggesting a relative of Santa Claus. He is sitting on the bleachers of Victory Stadium with his wife and two children, trying hard to act dignified as the Fleming quarterback crosses the goal line.

We respect him for many reasons. We feel he is building a school curriculum relevant to the needs of all students; he strives relentlessly to mold the Fleming family into a united one; he takes time from his many responsibilities to be a community leader, a well-respected educator, and a concerned friend. Because he has many items of business to complete each day but always takes the time to put us first, we dedicate the 1971 Colonel to . . .

Frank W. Beahm, Jr.

Campus Life

1971: A big year made up of many little changes in campus life. Girls wore pants; guys wore long hair; almost everyone wore tennis shoes. Health classes camped in Smith Hall G.E. room; the Roanoke Civic Center housed the Prom; padlocks secured the cafeteria. The frame of the new Field House rose; students complained of a rise in lunch prices to forty cents; noisy clackers saw their birth and sudden death. New curtains brightened the stage; hot-dogs and hamburgers rated a lunch line by themselves; somehow the old blue bus managed to run every once in a while. Some people liked the new face-lifting on campus; others deplored it. All at least agreed that things around the campus just weren't the same anymore.

Fall Brings Registration Lines And Homework

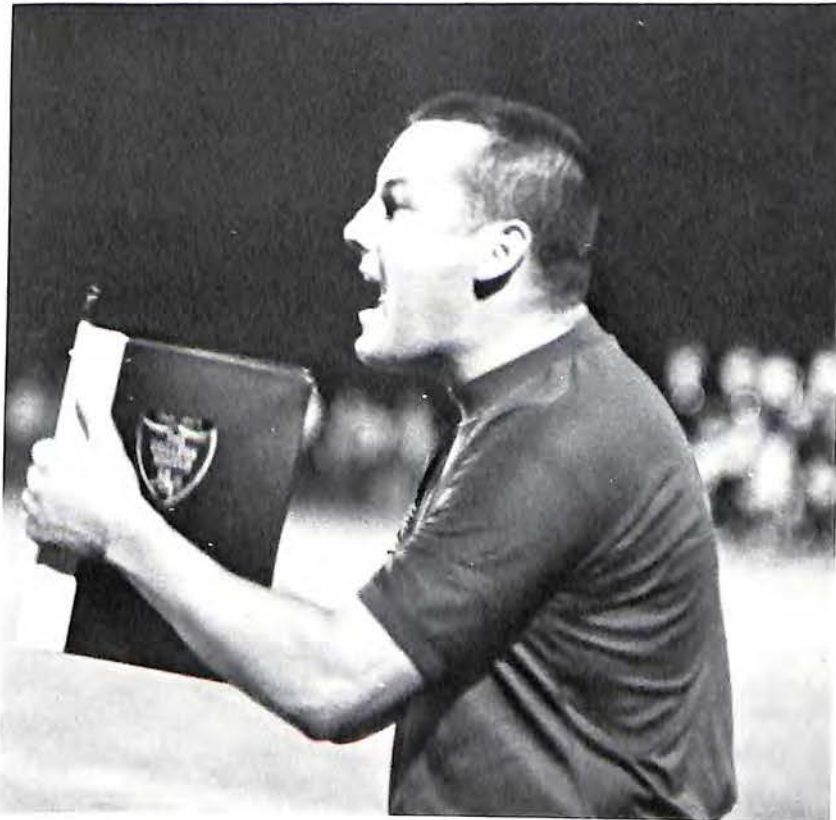

Smiles in triplicate greet the fans at Victory Stadium as sophomore attendants Francine Mitchell, Linda Kelley, and Linda Shockley pass in revue.

The weather was warm and dry when students spent their first few hours at William Fleming this year. For some, those first few hours were uneasy, alone hours, but the alone feeling departed quickly as registration lines began to form and the bleachers bulged at the first pep assembly. Most students praised the freedom and the challenges their school offered. Some, of course, griped about their schedules and their homework and the lack of school spirit. The first football game was won. It didn't seem to rain at all until the day of the game with Danville. Then it really poured.

Loud and clear, the instructions ring through the air as Coach Lenoir bellows encouragement to a floundering tackle.

Exams And Flu Cut Attendance

The days grew shorter and the hours went faster. Basketball season started and bouts with Jefferson brought a run on Bufferin. Deep snow hindered shopping for just the right suit or for that special gown for the Christmas Dance. Christmas meant a reprieve from school work — fifteen whole days of leisure. Flu messed up the holidays for a lot of us. Exams were coming; we could feel it in the air. Flu struck again. The absentee lists grew longer and longer. Even flu had its advantages, for it meant a delay in exams for those who were sick. For many, winter was not much fun; but complaints faded and dispositions grew sunny as the snow slowly melted.

Warm Spring Weather Brings Campus To Life

The weather eventually got warmer. For some, attention to classes gave way to having a good time. Students turned up for banquets, dances, and spring outings. The old blue bus kept turning its axles as it whined its way to New York and Washington D.C. Clubs stayed up nights thinking of ways to make budgets balance. Teachers remembered the books they had forgotten to assign. Students caught up on sleep in class. As the months drifted by, underclassmen joyfully anticipated the completion of another year, and seniors waited for graduation.

"Expectations '70" Surpasses All Expectations

Posters plastered the walls. Coins jostled the sides of cans marked "Vote for Mr. Touchdown." Students rushed to Arlan's and Rose's to buy reams of crepe paper for car decorations. Girls bought pants suits for the dance; their dates saved for corsages. September 26-27; Homecoming, 1970, burst into being.

Cheerleaders awarded a gold football to Mr. Touchdown, Larry Otey, then urged the pep assembly to decorate their cars for the motorcade. "We've got spirit," the crowd yelled. "We're Number One."

The motorcade inched down Interstate 81 to Victory Stadium, where the Colonels whipped Patrick Henry 12-0. Cheerleaders spent the night in the gym decorating with streamers, tin foil, and cut-out figures and hanging parachutes for the Saturday night dance. Sounds of Bob Collins and the Fabulous Five ricocheted from the rafters as "Expectations '70" came to a close.

Traditions Pass With 1971 Prom

An innovation this year was the Prom away from Fleming. A great debate had preceded the final decision to exchange the heat of the gymnasium for the air-conditioned atmosphere of the new Civic Center. The couples were all elegantly attired, crisply cool and a bit more than formal as the evening began.

A prom is a prom is a prom . . . music and flowers, punch and cake, crepe paper and archways, long dresses and ruffled shirts; however, "All Things Must Pass" saw the passing of some traditions. In some cases, gowns gave way to formal hot-pants outfits and tuxedos to sparkly jumpsuits. There was a dirth of soft music, but none of quiet moments.

"All Things Must Pass", theme for 1971's Prom, has special meaning to seniors such as Barbie Breene as she enjoys her last prom with escort Gary Overfelt.

As the "Seven Seas" ask "May I?", Juniors Debbie Sowers and Jimmy Unruh couples between dances. Cokes, cakes, and mints re-fresh them while the band takes a break.

Grown-ups complain a lot about the younger generation saying it's going to the dogs. Several William Fleming seniors gave them little reason for such pessimism. Chuck Gladu, Dickie Ruddick, and Cynthia Hale were named Outstanding Teenagers. Cynthia also was honored by the D.A.R. for good citizenship and received the "I Dare You Award".

Cited for even more recognition were this year's co-valedictorians, Ann Berman and Larry Hall. Ann was chosen for a Johnson scholarship at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Larry was a National Merit Scholarship finalist and N.C.T.E. achievement winner. Others at the top of their class also received scholarships to outstanding colleges and universities.

Good scholarship was only one of the long list of requirements needed for delegates to Boys and Girls State. Top scholars also represented William Fleming on the panels of "Klassroom Kwiz" and "Who Knows."

Awards Spotlight Outstanding Qualities

Sportsmanship, scholarship, love and friendly concern, proficiency in homemaking, beauty, poise, and talent were the traits spotlighted by the various awards.

Mike Williams was the recipient of both the B'nai Brith and the Grand TOPS Award. The Brotherhood award went to warm-hearted Diane Apostolou. Mary Tate Webb won the Betty Crocker Award. Snow Queen Yvonne Bayse graced the Christmas float in the Downtown Parade; Karen Layman and Teresa Dales brought all the Junior Miss honors home to Fleming. Karen was Roanoke Valley's Junior Miss for 1971 and Teresa was first runner-up.

Athletics

Some people in Colonel Country like to name-drop a lot. They speak as if the Doves and the Garretts and the Dickeys and the Gladus made up the nucleus of the Fleming athletic program. They remember the big things: the sting of defeat as the Colonels of James Wood High School gave our Colonels an undeserved licking; the near-won basketball games with the Magicians; the thorough trouncing our trackmen handed Patrick Henry and Jefferson; the second-place trophy brought home by the girls in district basketball play.

But William Fleming also makes room for the vast number of athletes in the good-but-not-great category. Its love of competition lures the lanky sophomore on the J.V. squad, the almost-forgotten bench warmer in the slightly worn jersey, the uncoordinated kid running around the end in intramural play.

The stars and the also-rans, the little things and the great moments, the roar of the crowds and the silence of a deserted locker room, combine to capture the real spirit of Fleming sports.

July sun warmed the backs of seventeen varsity and nine junior varsity cheerleaders as they used their leisure hours of summer to perfect new cheers and plan spirit drives for the football season. By selling Civic Pride Cleaner, washing cars for $1 apiece, and reaping the profits of a rummage sale, the squad purchased new blue and yellow pom-poms used for pep assemblies, ball games, and wrestling matches. Before games they decorated the Colonel's locker rooms and buses with posters. The squad not only brought spirit to the school, but also contributed to the cheer of the community. Each cheerleader served as assistant for the WBRA auction and collected money for the Easter Seal Society.

Colonels Claim 3-A District Title

November 13, 1970: The roar of the fans filled Victory Stadium as the 1970 Colonels rolled over G.W. of Danville for the 3-A Western District Title. This win climaxed an exciting season of football that had seen the team race to eight victories, including shutouts of all city opposition and arch-rival Andrew Lewis. Although later defeated by state champion James Wood in the Northwest Regional playoff, the Colonels unquestionably played some of the finest high school football that this area has seen. Guided by coaches Don Lee, Bob Lenoir, Bob Odenwelder, and Bob Sandy, the squad displayed the teamwork and determination of a truly outstanding football team in its successful bids for the divisional and district titles.

28-0 Victory Over Lewis Highlights Season

Opening the season with an easy shutout of city rival Jefferson, the Colonels seemed destined for another championship from the start. Although the team dropped its second contest to a tough Cave Spring squad, an encouraging rebound win over E. C. Glass soon showed that the Colonels had no intention of losing their bid for the district title.

The Glass victory preceded wins over Patrick Henry, Northside, Franklin County, and Andrew Lewis. The Lewis whitewash marked the end of nine long years of defeat for Fleming teams at the hands of the Wolverines. While the defense paralyzed the Lewis offense, the Colonels marched to four touchdowns, one by the reserves.

Only three games now separated the Colonels from their goal. A loss to Halifax gave the team its second setback, but a victory over Staunton the following week enabled the Colonels once more to preserve their title hopes — hopes that soon became a reality as the team toppled previously undefeated Danville for the trophy. With the excellent play that characterized them throughout the season, the '70 Colonels had become the first Fleming team to capture an unshared district championship in seven years.

A great deal of individual effort on the part of both players and coaches is required to produce a championship team such as the 1970 Colonels. In recognition of some of the more outstanding players on this year's squad, the following awards were presented at the team's post-season banquet: Larry Otey, Most Valuable Player; Mike Curry, Best Spirit; Cornell Walker, Best Defensive Player; Mike Powell, Best Blocker; Mike Dowe, Best Back; and Chuck Gladu and Mike Williams, Fred H. Smith Dedication Award.

Tackling Mike Dowe and the powerful Fleming running attack proves to be a problem to Andrew Lewis defenders as the Colonels whip the Wolverines 28-0.

Another costly fumble foreshadows defeat for the Colonels as they bow to the Halifax Comets for their last loss of regular season play.

Safetyman Mike Williams and middleguard Richard Fowler crush a Glass back in a defensive effort.

Cut off by linemen Don Thomas and Richard Fowler, a Viking back takes a loss as the Colonels rally in the second half to defeat Northside 34-14.

Quarterback Chuck Gladu leads a march to the goal line as the Colonels upset previously undefeated G.W. of Danville. This victory gave the Colonels the Western District Crown and the right to play James Wood in the Northwest Regional Playoff.

Outstanding Colonels Accumulate Honors

In addition to recognition from within the school, outstanding players and coaches also receive outside acclaim. For the second consecutive year, two Colonels received the Player of the Year and Coach of the Year honors as a result of voting by their fellow Roanoke Valley players and coaches. This year's recipients were Mike Dowe and, for his second year, Coach Don Lee. The following players received the honors listed for their outstanding individual contributions in making the 1970 Fleming football team a champion.

Junior Varsity Shuts Out Three Opponents

Every junior varsity football team seeks to broaden the scope of interscholastic competition while providing a training ground for future varsity football players. Coaches Chuck Poss, Jimmy Moore and Ron Shockley and the 1970 Baby Colonels met this challenge well.

Ending the season with a total of five victories and two losses, the team actually played better than its record reflected. Final statistics revealed that the J.V.'s outscored their opponents 125 to 39 while shutting out three teams. In addition, the squad met each of its two defeats by only one point.

Boasting an excellent defensive team plus the talents of such offensive standouts as top scorers Chester Waller and Roger Hurt, the squad showed that it had the ability required to produce an outstanding team. Considering these factors, the 1970 Junior Varsity should yield some excellent prospects for future Colonel Varsity squads.

Stiff Competition Challenges Team

Few athletic events can match the speed and excitement provided by a close, hard-fought game of basketball. When two skilled cage teams meet on the court, action is the name of the game from the opening tap to the final buzzer. With coaches Jim Moore and Jim Ingram calling the shots, the 1971 Colonels provided the skillful play that makes such contests possible. Compiling a record of nine wins and nine losses in regular season play, the team displayed a competitive spirit that enabled it to meet the challenge provided by many tough opponents.

With five seconds left on the clock, Fleming appears ready to pull the upset of the season in their first meeting with Jefferson. Fate worked against the Colonels, however, as a last-second Jefferson basket destroyed all hopes for a Fleming victory.

Falling to a tough Martinsville squad in their opening game, the Colonels struggled through the first half of regular season play with four victories and five defeats. Wins over Glass, Northside, Cave Spring, and Lewis provided the team with its first four victims.

Moving into the second half of the season, the Colonels played the first of two cliff-hangers with defending state champion Jefferson. Although Fleming controlled most of the game in this initial meeting with the Magicians, a Jefferson basket in the last five seconds of play took the contest away from the Colonels.

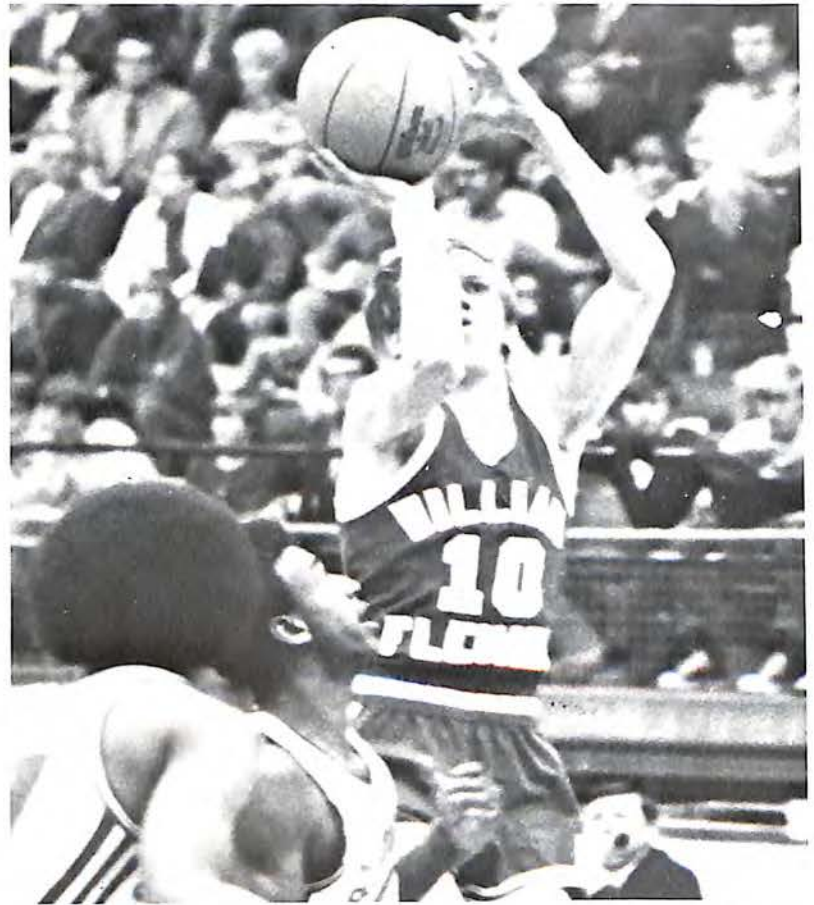

Following this first loss to Jefferson, the team fell to both Patrick Henry and Robert E. Lee for the second time. The next game brought a change in fortune for the Colonels, however, as the team opened a six-game winning streak punctuated only by another one point loss to the Magicians. In addition to meeting and once again defeating its first four victims, the team upset a tough Franklin County squad on the Eagles' home court.

Finishing the season with their second win over Glass, the Colonels appeared ready to provide a definite threat in district tournament competition. Although the team once more crushed the Glass Hilltoppers in the opening round of tournament play, a narrow two-point defeat at the hands of regional champion Staunton in the second round smothered the Fleming threat. Thus, the Colonels closed the season with a record evenly divided between success and frustration.

Garrett, Moore Receive Honors

Every good basketball team has its outstanding players and the '71 Colonels were no exception. In addition to praise from within the school, two Colonels, Melvin Garrett and Johnny Moore, received outside acclaim.

As a result of his first season of varsity basketball, senior Moore received a spot on the Western District third team. Garrett, who figures as perhaps the greatest basketball player that Fleming has yet produced, took positions on both the district and regional first teams and on the state second team. He also received an honorable mention on the All-Southern squad.

Recipient of the "Unsung Hero Award", Johnny Moore fires the ball as the Colonels fall to Staunton in the District Tournament.

During the opening ceremonies of the Andrew Lewis game, principal Mr. Frank W. Beahm awards Melvin Garrett with a basketball in honor of the one thousand points he scored during his high school career.

Nine Wins, Ten Defeats Mark J.V. Season

Firing a short jump shot, Alvin Oliver attempts to add two points to the Baby

Colonels' score as they meet defeat in their first encounter with Patrick Henry.

Guided by the basketball knowledge of Coach Charles Van Lear, the 1971 Baby Colonel Basketball Squad finished the season with a record of nine wins and ten defeats. In addition to a determined offensive effort spearheaded by leading scorer Sanford Morgan, the team displayed skillful defensive play that held their opponents to less than forty points in each of eight games. With a little work, the members of the 1971 J.V. Squad should give a definite boost to next year's Varsity team.

Wrestlers Rebuild Team

Trying to live up to the 1-A Regional Championship brought home by the 1970 team, the 1971 wrestlers saw their reign come down around their heads. Plagued by the loss of many top lettermen last season, this year was one of rebuilding and molding for the Colonel grapplers who fought to a record of two wins, nine losses, and one tie. Although Melvin Franklin survived the district meet, a sprained ankle kept him from the regional tournament. Coached by Ron Childress and Don Nichols, several players including Melvin Franklin (unlimited), Siegfried Hofmann (138), and Rod Meador (155) distinguished themselves in matches.

Indoor, Outdoor Teams Claim Winning Season

Track — a sport that requires stamina, determination, and a desire to be the best. During the 1970-1971 school term, Fleming fielded winning teams in both indoor and outdoor track. Coaches Bob Sandy and Rick Harvey guided the indoor team and Coach Henry Fulford aided them in leading the outdoor team.

The indoor track team finished first in one tri-meet and second in two others. The squad also finished first in one ten team meet and second in another. As a result of its performance, the Colonel Indoor Squad ended the season as the Western District's second place team. Sophomore Charles Robinson was the only member of the squad to place in the state meet.

Ending the season with a record of six wins and five losses, the outdoor track team finished fourth of ten teams in the Cosmopolitan Track Meet, third of eight teams in the Franklin County Relays, and second of fourteen teams in the Western District Meet. Senior Walter Hayes set school, city-county, and district records in the high jump with a jump of six feet six inches. Sophomore Charles Robinson also set school, city-county and district records with a triple jump of forty-five feet seven inches. The team's leading scorer was Mike Washington.

In addition to Hayes, Robinson and Washington, senior co-captain Dennis Lynch and many upper-classmen also had excellent seasons even though they didn't set any records. Those who will return to next year's squad show outstanding potential in future track competition.

Displaying his winning form in the high jump, senior recordsetter Walter Hayes clears the bar to help attain the Colonel victory over Franklin County's Eagles.

Team Suffers Losing Season

Fighting to overcome inexperience and just plain bad luck, the 1971 Fleming Baseball Team finished the season with a record of three wins and eight losses. Although the team, led by Coaches Don Lee and Dan Wooldridge, did not finish as one of the district's better teams, it did have one of the valley's leading hitters in the person of Larry Otey. Since a great part of the '71 team consisted of underclassmen, their experience should contribute greatly to future Fleming squads.

Beginning this year's play with a seven match winning streak, the 1971 Fleming Golf Team figured as a dangerous contender in Western District competition throughout much of the season. Meeting with a bad slump in the latter part of April, the team still managed to finish with a very good record of nine wins and five defeats. Although the Colonel golfers, guided by Coach Bob Lenoir, did not survive tournament competition, they displayed a competitive spirit that brought victories over rival Patrick Henry and many other tough opponents.

Tennis Team Sets Record

Finishing the season with a total of twelve victories and two defeats, the 1971 Fleming Tennis Team compiled the best record for a group of Colonel netters in the school's history. Directed by Coach Wallace Kern, the team earned two of its wins by shutting out its opponents while meeting both of its defeats at the hands of perennial tennis power Patrick Henry.

Advancing to the number two position in city-county play and the number three spot in district competition, the team sent top player Wray Cannaday to the District Tournament. An upset victory for Cannaday in the team's second match with the Patriots gave him the right to participate in the tournament. Although the Colonels did not send a representative into regional or state competition, a little hard practice should give the returning players on next year's squad a chance to place in championship play.

Squad Finishes Tenth In District Meet

Improving on last year's record, the 1970 Colonel cross country squad struggled to a record of two victories, eight losses, and one tie. Freshman standout Calvin Stanley led the team's scoring with co-captains Pete Hofmann and David Wright close behind. In addition, Hofmann earned the team's first annual "Outstanding Runner" award for his performance.

The '70 squad finished tenth of twelve teams in the district meet. With a little more experience and the addition of several more strong runners, first year coach Rick Harvey believes the team will greatly improve its performance in coming years.

Volleyball Sees Changes

Volleyball has progressed from a slow ball-tapping game to a fast, highly competitive sport. The Varsity Volleyball Team, coached by Mrs. Betty Smith, practiced long hours to master the skills and learn the new techniques of "power volleyball." Getting off to a slow start, the team came back strong to finish the season in third place with a 6-2 record. Led by top scorers Freida Sluder and Debbie Weaver, the girls only suffered two losses to Jefferson and Patrick Henry.

The Junior Varsity Team also saw a season of adjustment. Not only did they adapt to a new kind of volleyball, but also to the stiffer competition of a new league. Coached by Miss Bertha White and led by high scorers Jackie Cline and Wanda Jones, the team proved to be tough competition. A strong team effort of the girls enabled the team to finish the season with a 3-2 record.

Cheers of excitement echoed through the gym as the William Fleming Colonelettes, led by high scorers Charlene Curtis, Jan Waldron, and Angelina Watson scored again. The Varsity Team ended the season in third place with a 7-3 record. Exceptional team effort and skill during the play-offs advanced them to runner-up in the City-County League. Trophies rewarded the efforts of top players. Experienced coaching, determination, and desire led them to some hard fought victories.

Aching Muscles Plague Gymnasts

Hard work and aching muscles marked many winter afternoons for the 1970-'71 Fleming Gymnastics Team as the girls practiced with the Breckinridge squad. Directed by Miss Louise Thompson, the team took part in several interscholastic meets including the state meet. In addition, senior Lynn Smith took second place in city-wide competition. The experience gained by the underclassmen on this year's squad should help greatly on future teams.

Girls' Tennis Team Shows Outstanding Potential

Starting the season with a five match winning streak, Fleming's 1971 Girls' Tennis Team ended play with a record of eight victories and three defeats. Figuring as a strong contender throughout the beginning of the season, the team shut out a total of five opponents before reaching its final match. The squad's coach, Mrs. Betty Smith, feels that many of the players on this year's team showed great potential and could go very far in future tennis competition.

Girls' Track Stages Comeback

For the first time in four years, Fleming fielded a girls' track team during the 1971 spring track season. Eighteen girls participated on the team which finished second in one tri-meet and then went to the regional meet at Roanoke College. There, the 440 relay team qualified for the state meet in Lynchburg. Although the squad did not see much action this year, its coach Miss White, expects the team to compete in more meets next year.

Banquets Honor Athletes

Following the close of each competitive season, the athletes who represented Fleming on the school's various teams were honored at banquets. Individual athletes received recognition for their accomplishments in the form of letters, trophies, and praise from their coaches and teammates. At the Spring Sports Banquet, artist Bill Leach, who is well-known for his work with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, figured as the special guest speaker.

Charles Robinson the letter he earned for his participation in Spring Track.

Intramurals Involve Many

Thanks to the efforts of intramural coordinator Mr. Wallace Kern, many students participated once again this year in intramural basketball competition. With players representing each hall and many clubs in the school, the gym echoed with the sounds of friendly competition as teams met on Sunday afternoons and Wednesday nights throughout the 1970-'71 basketball season. As a result of this program, many would-be athletes who were unable to take part in varsity athletics had the opportunity to experience the fun and excitement provided by participation in organized sports.

Activities

The people pictured on the pages that follow are smiling. They are smiling because they are involved in organizations that make school life more meaningful. Involvement is not always fun. It can mean long hours of practice to make "Cranberry Corners" come alive; restless moments thinking up projects to finance field trips and new uniforms and more music.

But involvement can also mean such items of business as standing ovations from a full house on opening night; a first place award at a journalism convention; the sense of pride on hearing Fleming voices fill the National Cathedral in Washington.

There are many more people who could not be photographed: a floundering student coached by a Beta Club member; a hungry family fed by the F.C.A. Christmas baskets; a lonely old lady cheered by the visit of the French Club carolers; a weary patient gladdened by the laughter of Red Cross volunteers. Because of the involvement of Fleming students, they are also smiling.

S.C.A. Bridges Fleming's "Generation Gap"

For one week in March, sixteen candidates vie for the privilege of being S.C.A. officers. For thirty-six weeks the following year, the winners pay dearly for that privilege. The fifth period each day found S.C.A. officers leading the S.C.A. study hall in a list of time-consuming activities. The various committees compiled a student handbook and published a student telephone directory. They again sponsored the Individual Responsibility Program, allowing a number of students selected by the faculty to audit classes, cut a limited number of classes, and use the library without a pass. Bi-monthly meetings of the general council allowed homeroom and club representatives to choose the recipient of the "Tops Award" and discuss solutions to inevitable school problems.

Simon Legree Demands Long Hours

The annual editor hasn't heard that child labor is illegal. With the tactics of a Simon Legree, he coerced staffers into spending the long hours needed to create the 1971 Colonel. To supplement allotted funds, staffers spent the last half of their summer selling advertisements to local merchants and learning new trends in layout and copy at the yearbook clinic at the University of Tennessee. A trip to the Columbia Scholastic Press Convention in New York City highlighted the school year. Ratings of second place from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association and first place from the Virginia High School League rewarded the efforts of last year's staff. The 1971 workers dreamed of creating a trophy winner in years to come.

Sabre Adopts New Paper, Size, and Format

David Parks

Connie Lassiter

The Sabre shrank a little in size on September 1, 1970. It also shed its slick paper for a rougher variety and expanded its pages to six. Editorially, it also saw innovations. New features such as "College Corner" and "Colonel Corner" lined up with the old favorites — "Sabre Salutes" and "Tops Award." More cartoons, expanded sports coverage, and controversial editorials kept the presses rolling to make the thirteen issues, highly praised by professional journalists, just a little bit better.

"Us" Features Student, Teacher Talents

Creative students need a place to be published. "Us," the William Fleming literary magazine, proved to be a melting pot of both student and faculty ideas and talents. The two issues featured photography and artwork to illustrate the poetry and prose selections. Meeting daily during school hours for the first time, the staff not only created the contents of the magazine, but also had to do the typing and layout for the first time. A second place award for excellence presented by the Virginia High School League compensated for the time-consuming task to which the staff of the literary magazine fell heir.

A.F.S. Sends Simpson Abroad

For Mike Simpson, membership in the American Field Service meant filling out endless forms, sitting under photographer's lights for a passport photo, and nursing an arm sore from a variety of shots in preparation for his trip abroad. Other club members who had worked hard on the year's money-making projects felt a special pride as Mike's "dream trip" became a reality. The group hosted pizza parties, sold pennants at basketball games, and peddled doughnuts to supplement the $243 earned at their annual Slave Day Sale.

Oil paintings of the Old Masters and modernistic collages by still-unknown art students at Virginia Commonwealth University's Art Department captured the attention of Art Club members who toured Richmond's art centers on their annual fall trip. Speakers and films at monthly meetings also gave members glimpses into art appreciation. In February, members left their brushes soaking in turpentine to sample spicy slices of pizza at their Village Inn Pizza Party. The group also decorated the hallways with original artwork and painted the cafeteria windows with festive Christmas designs.

Beta Club Stresses Leadership

Gold cords contrasted sharply with bright blue robes as Beta Club members marched in line to receive their diplomas. The senior members of the Beta Club, all with 4.3 academic averages or better, earned their cords of distinction by serving the school in many ways. With money earned from selling football programs, the club prepared to plant trees on the campus and established a tutorial program for elementary children. They also helped sponsor a clean-up day on campus. Countless hours of hard work and practice pay off in the shining brass and perfectly straight lines of the William Fleming High School Marching Band. Drum Majors Tim St. Clair and Mike Wirt led the band to honors and acclaim throughout Virginia.

Choosing the theme, "Enjoy Yourself", the William Fleming Marching Band accompanied the introduction of the 1970 Homecoming Court. The remainder of the year gave band members more than enough opportunity to display their skill. December brought the Christmas parade and an invitation to play for the dedication of the new Municipal Building in the presence of Governor Linwood Holton. At the district festival in Franklin County, the entire band received an excellent rating. After giving their winter and spring concerts, the band began to prepare for the Harrisonburg "Friends of a Feather" Convention at which they were the honor band.

The Stage Band also had a busy year. After many weekly practices, members attended a festival in Arlington. Other activities included concerts at the Veterans Hospital, Bridgewater alumni meeting, awards assembly, and French Club banquet.

1971 brought changes for the band. Meeting in three divisions, percussion, brass, and woodwinds, each group found it easier to perfect its section. The three divisions each exhibited new skill as the band closed its performing year with a concert for the student body.

Majorettes Display New Uniforms, Talents

Batons glided through the air in synchronized motion. Fire flickered around the heads of seven majorettes dressed in new sequined uniforms and strutting in the half-time formation in white knee-high boots. The squad performed at football games, the Shrine Bowl and Christmas parades, and a convention at Harrisonburg, Virginia, seldom missing a step. To create better school sirit, the majorettes and the three sophomore flag twirlers wore plaid culottes and yellow turtle-neck shirts as uniforms on the day of games. They also helped the Boosters Club sell stickers to support the Band activities.

Pep Band Sports New Uniforms

Two-thirty to four on Wednesday afternoons found all Pep Band members at practice. Responding to the downbeat of student director, Ann Berman, the thirty-six members rehearsed popular songs and added soul music to their repertoire. Their favorite tunes of "Peter Gunn," "Pink Panther," "Aquarius," and "That Soul" echoed at pep assemblies, ball games, and concerts. For the first time, the Pep Band played at football games and home baseball games. Wearing new uniforms consisting of gold shirts, blue pants or skirts, and royal blue vests, the group also serenaded the "Dating Game" couple on their trip to Roanoke.

Adding to the spirit of the James Wood Pep Assembly, Pep Band members proclaim "We're Number One" as the crowd chants.

Business Club Sells Calendars

The sale of bright orange calendars financed a busy year of Business Club field trips, picnics and pizza parties. A field trip to All-state Insurance Company gave club members an insight into the operations of the business world. Another trip to Community College showed the membership the opportunities for business education offered there. The Business Club also bought file cabinets for the business rooms.

Complete silence, black and white figures moving slowly across a chessboard, and brows knitted in concentration were the sights and sounds of the Chess Club meetings. Having purchased chess sets last year, the club was equipped to hold meetings and serve as host for chess tournaments. The Chess Club sent representatives to one chess tournament which was held at Virginia Western Community College, and intends to begin an intra-club elimination tournament at the beginning of the next school year.

Choir Travels To Washington

The big church on Mount Saint Albans was not just another church; it was the country's only Gothic cathedral, Washington Cathedral. The high school choir robed in blue, waiting quietly to sing there was not just another high school choir; it was the William Fleming High School Concert Choir, one of the few selected for this honor.

The voices that blended in a much-acclaimed program of religious music had practiced long hours for this special concert, but many other performances had also claimed much of their time. At Christmas, members heralded the season with a concert at Huntington Court Methodist Church and by singing at Crossroads Mall. In March, the Choir donned turn-of-the-century costumes to make "Cranberry Corners" come alive with a variety of musical numbers. Singing at capping, bacculaureate, and graduation provided members a last chance to respond to the downbeat of Mrs. June C. Webb, the director who had led them through another outstanding year.

Girls' Chorus Assists Choir

Unselfishness is a rare quality, but it was well exhibited this year by the Girls' Chorus as they sold candy to help send the Concert Choir to Washington, D.C. They also were active during Christmas, giving a concert for the residents of Friendship Manor and for shoppers in Crossroads Mall. Again aiding the Concert Choir, Girls' Chorus members painted scenery, made flowers, and created costumes for the spring variety show in which they also performed.

Club Members Share Beliefs

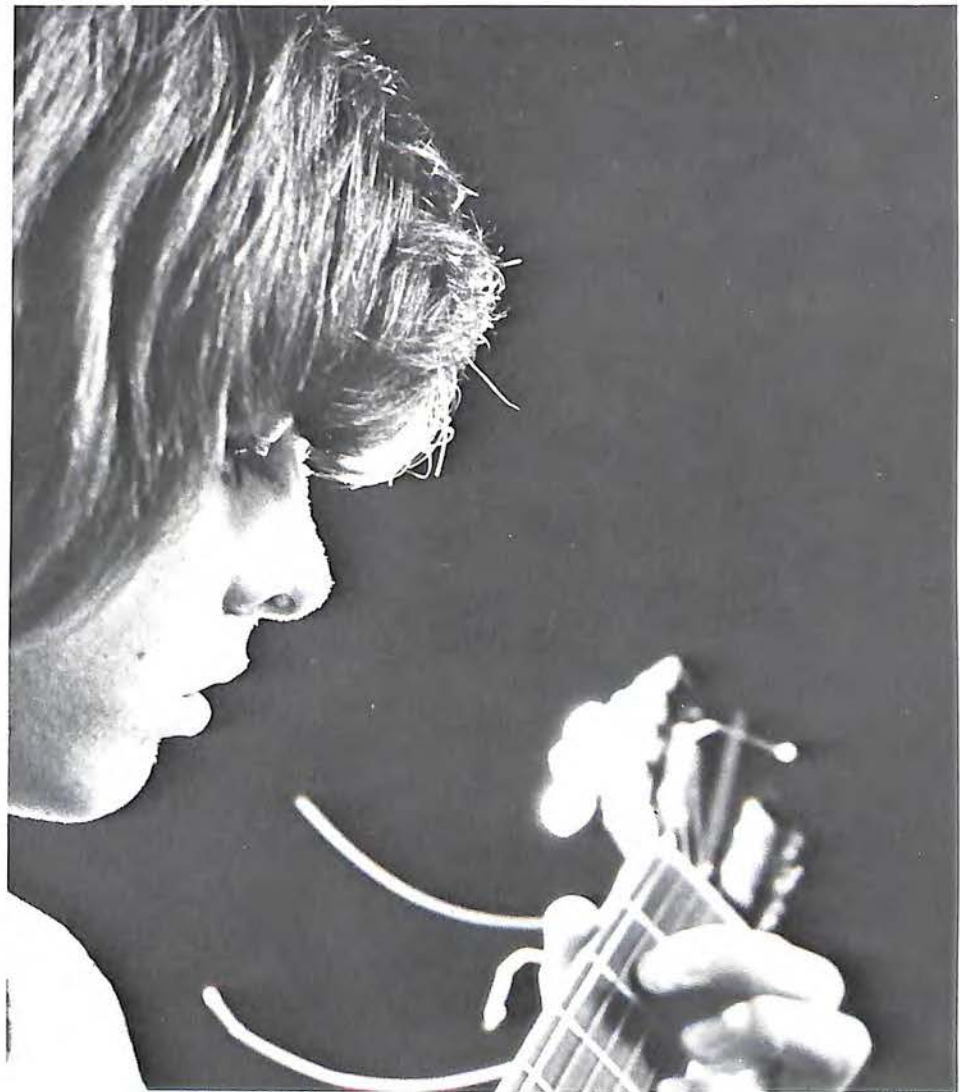

Prayer meetings every morning at 7:30 provided Campus Life Club members with strength for the tension-building day to come. Joined by a bond of common faith, members took time for quiet thoughts, prayers, and discussions. After searching the Bible for the answers to their questions, they found a way to convey them to others through witnessing. The club's variety show "The Fish" and the Easter Assembly gave the group the opportunity to share their beliefs with others.

Debaters Research, Argue Pro And Con

Ink-stained fingers thumbed through stacks of note cards labeled pro and con. Debaters sorted out notes scribbled from hours of research. Confident from many practice sessions coached by Mr. William Parker, affirmative debaters Lonnie Wade and Olympia Dallas and negative debaters Ann Berman and Martha Bowe used their strategy against Lord Botetourt and Northside debaters in practice sessions. They placed third in the April 16 quarter finals and fourth in the semi-finals for the district. The novice debaters also visited junior high schools to show them the techniques of debating.

D.E. Banquet Highlights Year

Long hours spent in retail selling jobs may have left Distributive Education students tired, but not too tired to enjoy a year full of extra-curricular club functions. Members attended D.E. Day at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, hosted the District VII D.E. Fall Rally, and feasted at the Roanoke Valley Employer Appreciation Banquet. The club's monthly business meetings allowed them time to organize a fund raising project selling stationery and to plan a spring outing to Loch Haven. A football game with the I.C.T. Club allowed members a chance to exercise muscles not used in their daily tasks of punching cash registers and pricing products.

F.C.A. Sponsors Donkey Basketball Game

Donkeys clopped the gym floor. Fleming faculty members who were riding the animals in the donkey basketball game sponsored by the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, defeated the faculty of Breckinridge, Monroe, and Ruffner Junior High Schools 14-8. Sponsoring donkey basketball was not the only project of the F.C.A. Club members also held devotional periods and delivered Christmas baskets to needy families. With money raised by selling cushions, they sent members to the F.C.A. convention. Tony Anderson, Bruce Bias, Wray Canaday, Mike Dowe, Kemper Johnson, Jerry McLawhorn, Mike Peterson, and Davidson Robertson also attended F.C.A. camp.

F.H.A. Aids Saint Andrew's Boy's Home

Senior Martha Bowe persuades David Nail to buy candy sticks and cookies at the F.H.A. Bake Sale.

This year the Future Homemakers of America spent their time and energy a little differently. In contrast to past years, they spent less time trying to develop domestic skills; they chose instead to serve not only the school but also to help those away from the campus. By holding a car wash and bake sales, the club was able to finance projects to aid the Saint Andrew's Boys Home. They held several parties at the home and sent Christmas and birthday cards to each boy. When they assessed the value of the year's activities during their final dinner in May, they felt they had made a real step forward.

Galloping Gourmet Visits The Cabaret

"Come to the Cabaret," French Club members said, and what they produced came to be known as one of the most talked-about happenings on campus. Complete with a French feast, dance band, and Parisienne setting, the Cabaret dinner-dance gave sponsor Linwood Ricks a chance to be the "galloping gourmet" and members the opportunity to soak up a little of the atmosphere of France. Most members agreed that this meal was second only to the one eaten by group members who toured New York City together and ate at a famous French Restaurant there. A bake sale helped the French Club support its jaunt to New York.

F.T.A. Members Host Honor Tea

"An apple for the teacher will always do the trick!" Real apples and symbolic apples in the form of teas and the celebration of National Education Week exhibited to everyone at Fleming a real concern for the teaching profession. Delegates to the state F.T.A. convention were pleased by Debbie Howell's election as state secretary. They returned from the convention fortified with new ideas and climaxed the years' activities with the Honor Tea for Seniors.

Mrs. Sallye Coleman was recognized as Teacher of the Year. The group also honored Mrs. Ruth Painter with an appreciation award on the year of her retirement.

Seniors Sherry Corvin, Elaine Cronise, and Nancy Helms enjoy the F.T.A. Honor Graduate Tea.

At the close of her thirty years at Fleming, Mrs. Ruth Painter is presented a plaque in appreciation by Diane Wright from a grateful F.T.A.

G.A.A.'s Enjoy Annual Cook-out

Figuring up bowling scores and pulling fellow club members up off hard, cold ice developed skill and provided entertainment for the Girls Athletic Association. The girls also used their activities period to practice basketball techniques. Holding a slumber party in the gym gave members a chance to talk over past activities and plan for the annual cook-out and Girls Sports Banquet.

During May first-Wednesday Activities Period, G.A.A. members Carole Poff and Francine Coles practice up on their softball to keep in shape.

"Jhuse" Rounds Out Active Year

When German Club sponsor Claudia Geiger returned from her year in Austria as a Fulbright exchange teacher, she brought home many ideas for an active, extra-curricular German program. The club sang German Christmas carols on Panorama to announce a German service at Emanuel Lutheran Church and later sang at the service itself. A Christmas party and a social to honor the birthdays of famous Germans helped fill their calendar. Serving the community, the group made Valentine favors for the Snyder Nursing Home and held an Easter egg hunt for T.A.P. children. A trip to Washington, D.C., to visit the German and Austrian Embassies and a spring party, "Jhuse", rounded out an active year.

Girls' Club Sees Successful First Year

escort, Mike Cooke, enjoy the holiday setting of "Mistletoe Memories".

A newly organized group of girls called, appropriately enough, the "New Girls' Club" provided "the weaker sex" with a year of entertaining and service-rendering projects. Dressed in jeans and sweatshirts, the girls pushed brooms and picked up paper for the school's clean-up project. They also rolled up their sleeves to wash cars in a money-making effort and collected articles for Coyner Spring Detention Home. The same girls donned new formals as they danced to the music of the Royal Kings at the Christmas dance. The club also sponsored the Thanksgiving assembly and entertained its members at a pot-luck supper and pizza party.

Key Club Sells Fleming Mugs

The sight of senior boys carrying toy dolls and gyroscopes down the hall brought second glances from students. Key Club members, who sold the dolls to help finance their service projects, took the stares in stride. In addition to selling toys, Key Club members also sold Fleming mugs. With proceeds from these projects, the Key Clubbers purchased flag holders for classrooms. In April, Bill Anderson, Ted Phillips, and Sammy Bias represented the group at the district convention in Washington. Key Club members also attended the monthly meetings of Kiwanis Club, their parent organization.

Literary Club Meets Success

Preparing members for competition in forensics took much time and energy, but with the help of Mr. William Parker and Mrs. Genevieve Dickinson, the Literary Club saw their efforts pay off. At Longwood College, out of seven members competing, six placed, and Susan Bower took first place in Poetry Reading. Susan later won in the district, and placed third in state competition. Through individual efforts, Fleming placed fifth in competition with twenty-eight other high schools at the Longwood meet. A spring picnic concluded Literary Club activities for 1971.

Math Club Plays "Wff-n-Proof"

"Wff-n-Proof" may sound strange to most people, but activities periods spent playing this mathematical game sharpened thinking and provided entertainment for members of the Math Club. Looking for something different, the club decided to research gambling by figuring up the probability of hitting the jackpot of a slot machine. They also enjoyed a speech by Dr. William Freitag of Hollins College and were able to compare her wits with the electronic computer in Hart Hall.

P.T.S.A. Sponsors "Tacky Day", Buys Stretchers

and Sam Bias look the part on P.T.S.A. spring Tacky Day.

Barefeet, straw hats, shorts, and bib overalls decked the campus on "Tacky Day" sponsored twice this year by the Parents Teacher and Student Association. In its second year of existence at Fleming, the organization raised enough money to purchase first aid equipment and a stretcher for each hall. They also awarded scholarship pins and numerals to juniors and seniors with high scholastic averages. At the spring awards assembly, student representative Benny Bryant, received a special award for his efforts to strengthen the relations between William Fleming parents, teachers, and students.

Blood Donors Aid Red Cross

Lines of timorous, potential donors encircled the gymnasium, waiting their turns to be tested for eligibility as blood donors. Sixty-six pints of blood, almost twice as much as given in 1970, trickled into small plastic bags. The donors, made up of students, parents, and teachers, proudly wore iodine and band-aids as symbols of their part in the Red Cross Blood Donor Day. Earlier, the Red Cross sponsored a "Buffalo Round-up." They collected nickels from each homeroom to donate to the Roanoke chapter downtown.

Members Study Pollution Control

It often seems that teen-agers just don't care, but members of the Science Club showed their concern by dedicating the year's work to pollution control. By attending meetings of the Virginia Junior Academy of Science and listening to guest speakers from Hollins College, the members learned how they could best fight this serious problem. After much research and hard work, the club developed a pollution tester. Other projects by individual members won honors in both the City and Regional Science Fairs.

R.O.T.C. Drills Through Busy Year

Right face; forward, march. The company commander marched his platoons through an active year and toward a future in the United State Air Force. The good, the bad, the hard, and the easy were all experienced by the Air Force Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps with activities ranging from marching in the Shrine parade to directing traffic at graduation.

The cadets also sold refreshments during home basketball games and the start of all home football games was signaled by the color guard presentation. Other activities included two field trips. Sophomores visited the radar base at the Peaks of Otter and upperclassmen enjoyed a trip to Langley Air Force Base in Hampton, Virginia. In spite of a busy year, the unit found time to practice up on basketball to tie for first place in intra-mural competition.

Kaleidoscope '71 Features Giants

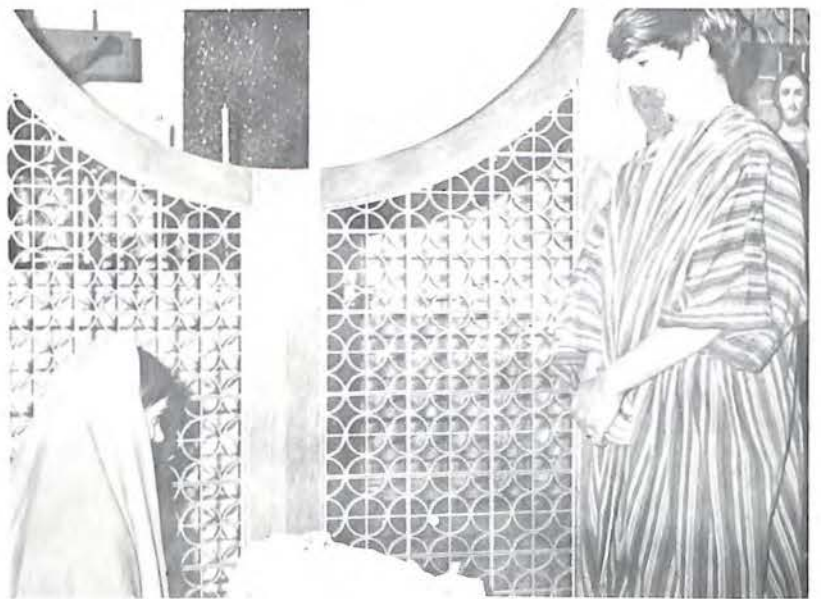

Spanish Club members ended the year in a big way when the University of Virginia basketball team, averaging 6'3" starred in Kaleidoscope '71, a night of fun and games. Their production to raise money for college scholarships was a fitting climax to a busy year. Cold tacos at the Christmas fiesta, a broken projector at Candid Camera, and many bales of hay to sweep up after the Sadie Hawkins Dance did little to dampen spirits. In April, Spanish Club members ventured to New York City for four days of sightseeing. Members also won thirteen awards in the National Spanish Examination, District Level.

Troupe 570 Pleases Crowds

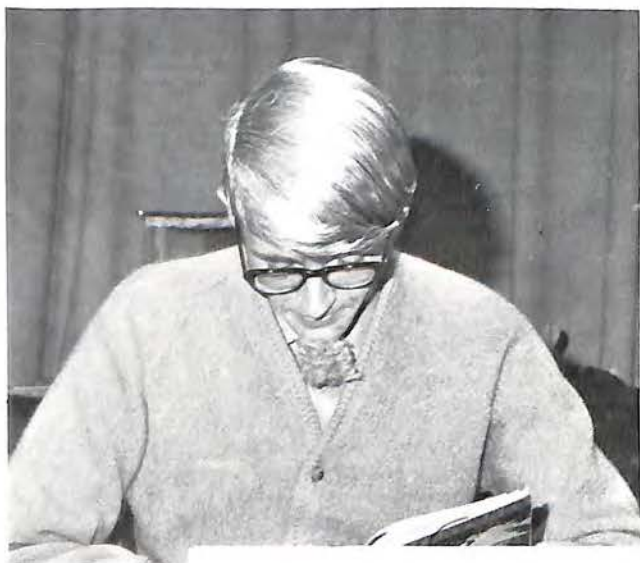

Troupe 570 of the International Thespians did not stop moving all year. In the fall, "The Diary of Ann Frank" opened to a full house. Spanning the mood from drama to comedy, they went on to produce "You Can't Take It With You" in March.

For most high school dramatists, two highly-successful productions would be enough, but the Fleming Players came on with more. The Christmas play, "Scrooge", featured Susan Wade as the Madonna. "One Man's Destiny," the festival play, received an excellent rating at the E. C. Glass competition "A Night at the Lively Arts" featured dramatic readings, musical numbers, and a short play, "The Brick and the Rose."

tion "You Can't Take It With You". Later, Gay passes out on the couch, to the dismay of other members of the family.

The William Fleming Drama Forensics Department has a long tradition of "bringing home the honors." This year was no exception. Mrs. Genevive Dickinson, who heads the drama activities, was honored as one of "2,000 outstanding women of achievement in the world." Students also received many awards. The one act play, Man of Destiny, received an excellent rating at the Longwood Invitational Forensics Tournament, and William Fleming won fifth place in competition with 27 other schools. Susan Bower placed third in the State Oratorical Contest. Many other individual and group honors rounded out an impressive array of awards.

"Pillows for Sparrow" campaign at their monthly meeting in Coulter Hall.

Youth Council Collects "Pillows"

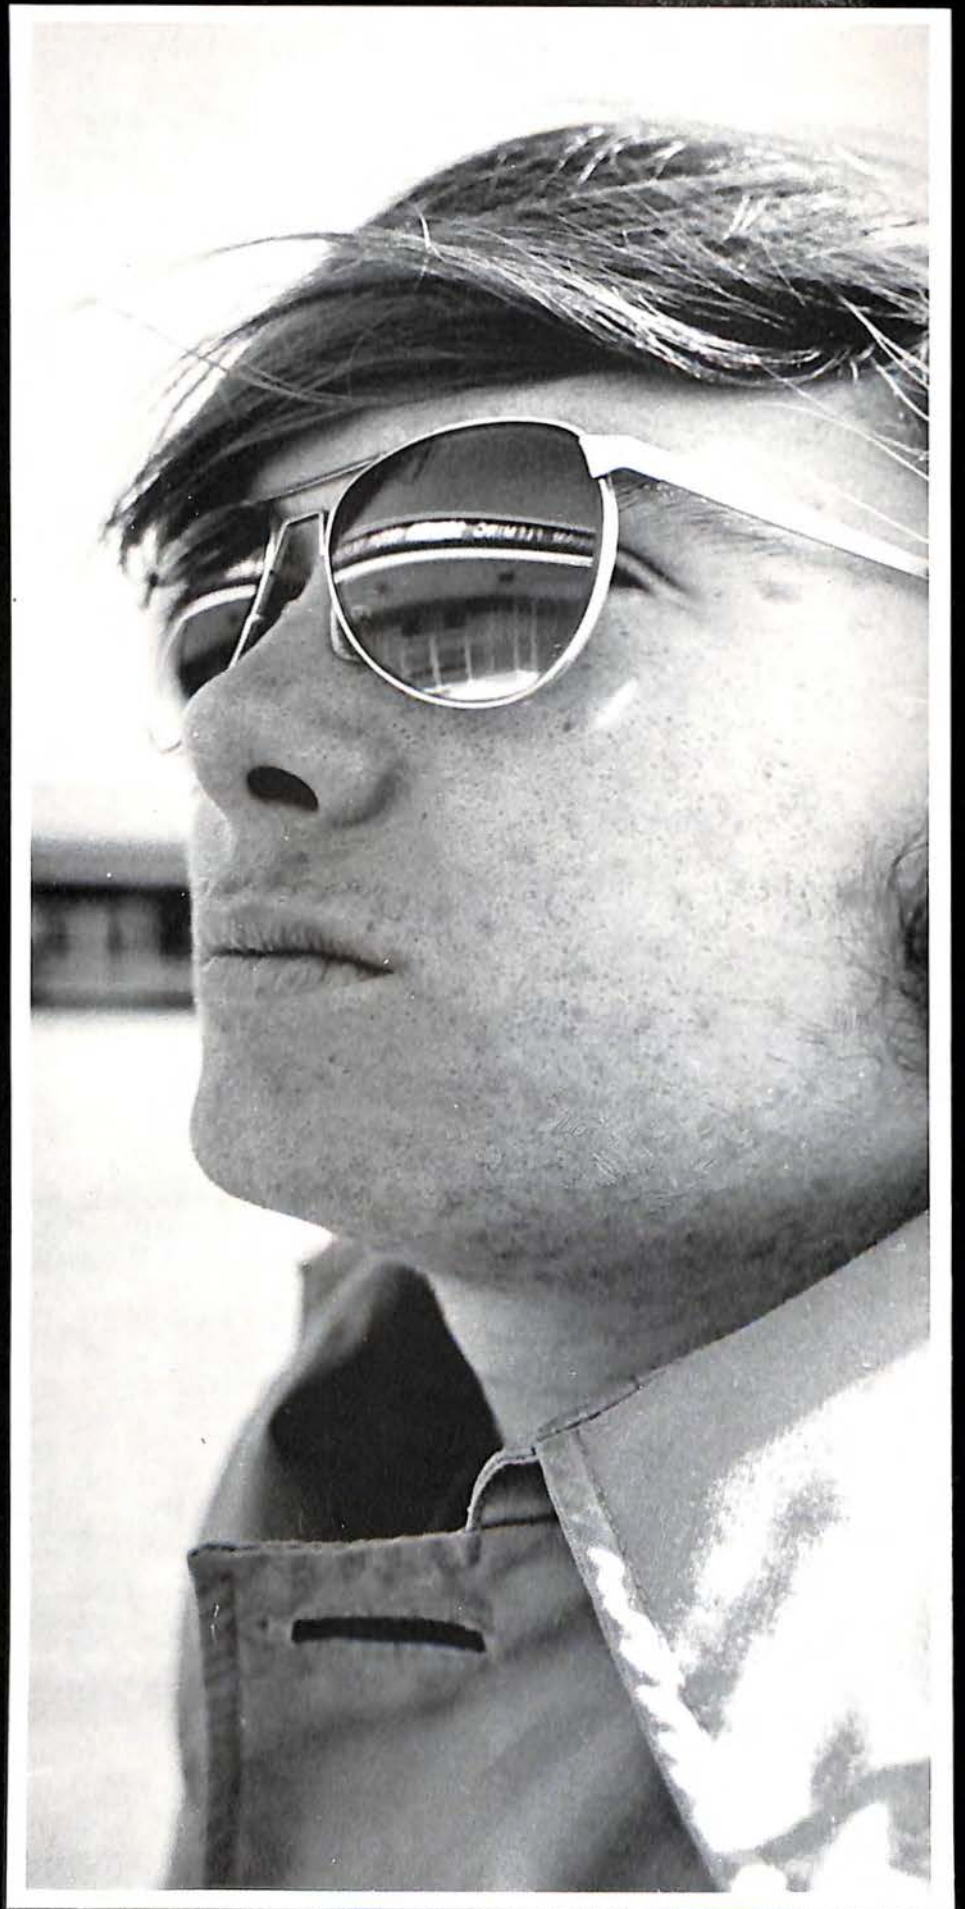

The intercom hummed a minute. Then a voice announced, "Will all youth council members please remember to bring used tea bags to school tomorrow". Students wondered what the youth council was up to now. The used tea bags were used as "pillows for sparrows" in the Roanoke area. The service group did far more than help our feathered friends. It also sent Christmas plants to Corner Springs Nursing Home and worked with the Valley Volunteer Bureau in various capacities. Three trips to the Municipal Court highlighted the year. The group also entertained the residents of Friendship Manor.

Classes

A few paces to the right of the principal's office a secretary slips an inky stencil into the cartridge of her typewriter and begins to type a letter to the new sophomores. "Dear Student," she pecks. "Welcome to William Fleming High School." She finishes and leaves the letter on the principal's desk for him to sign. A few days later the recipients are driven or bussed to that special place where friendships are formed, where new faces soon cease to be strange.

Some three years later the same secretary carefully pens names on 9 x 11 inch diplomas, suitable for framing. Graduates march slowly to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance," rubbing shoulders now and then with their classmates . . . remembering the beginnings they have shared together in the brief time called high school.

Seniors Earn Caps And Gowns

Crisp white shirts and freshly-ironed dresses dotted the campus on Friday morning, May 28, as seniors awaited the traditional march into capping assembly. At the sounds of "Pomp and Circumstance" the audience, underclassmen, faculty, and parents rose respectfully. As the deans read the names of soon-to-be graduates, Principal Frank W. Beahm, Jr. capped each senior individually. Junior ushers snapped robes into place and the seniors emerged, garbed in blue. Stephanie Marshall led the Class of 1971 in the singing of the Alma Mater. Then, the seniors recessed solemnly, in the caps and gowns they had awaited twelve years.

Underclassmen, parents, teachers, and friends rise respectfully as the senior class files into the gym, carrying their caps and gowns over their arms.

Rev. Garber Inspires Class

A deluge of parents and friends braved the floods of a rainy Sunday night, May 30, to attend the Baccalaureate service for the graduating seniors. Strains of "God of Our Fathers" brought a slow and stately procession into the gym past many friendly faces. After the invocation by the Rev. Mr. Earl J. Tyler, senior choir members filed to the front to join the underclassmen in singing "How Lovely is thy Dwelling Place" and "Glorious Everlasting". The Rev. Mr. O. S. Garber, retired principal of Melrose Elementary School beseeched the seniors to pattern their lives after "Jesus, the Master Teacher". The class recessed to "Onward Christian Soldiers".

Empty chairs and choir members silently await the arrival of seniors.

Class Of '71 "Hears A Different Drummer"

The academic procession of faculty members, each one wearing the colors of his school or university, moved ceremoniously to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance." Lines of blue-gowned seniors bobbed slowly across a campus they had grown to know very well during the last three years. The mountain ranges stood majestically; they made a perfect backdrop for the 1971 Commencement Exercises of William Fleming High School. After the invocation by the Reverend Noel C. Taylor, Senior Class president William Cochran welcomed the parents and guests who had set up lawn chairs on the neatly-trimmed grass. Dr. Roy Alcorn, superintendent of Roanoke City Public Schools, addressed the graduating class. The salutatory speech by Helen Peroulas preceded remarks by four student speakers. Bill Anderson, Marie Anderson, Dale Hendrick, and Debbie Howell spoke on the graduation theme, "A Different Drummer". Ann Berman and Larry Hall, co-valedictorians, spoke before Principal Frank W. Beahm, Jr. awarded the diplomas. Then, tassles turned, diplomas in hand, the graduates paraded for a last time across the campus, some with thoughts of the three years past, others with thoughts of the beach trip to come.

Seniors from Hart Hall file slowly to graduation ceremonies in front of the Administration Building as their high school careers come quickly to a close.

At the first pep assembly, enthusiastic seniors are eager to prove their supremacy over underclassmen. This year, when the cheerleaders turn to them for a competition cheer, the class sums up its attitude in one phrase: "Seniors are Studs".

Graduates with a scholastic average of 4.0 or better, including Linda Jessee and Georgia Krauss, are honored by the F.T.A. with a tea held in the library.

Active Seniors Watch Year Slip By Quickly

Piling their plates high, Kenny Brown and David Burrows enjoy the Senior Banquet held at the Barn Theatre. Dinner was followed by the play "Abie's Irish Rose".

Feet dragged as fall brought old juniors back through the orange doors, but with a new title, senior rings, special lunch tables, and more prestige, the class of 1971 ran through its big year with pride. Pride in the form of lung power blasted from the gym as seniors united to outdo the underclasses in pep assemblies. Pride in the form of service was abundant as senior class members headed clubs and strived to improve their school.

In January, a call for seniors to meet for cap and gown measurements brought the realization that half the year had slipped by. For many, the second semester meant less work and more fun with "senior slump" as a ready excuse. Participation in a host of dances, field trips, and banquets gave seniors little time to notice that their year was closing. It was with much pride and a faint look of disbelief that the class of 1971, in caps and gowns, rose to sing the Alma Mater for the last time.

Junior Class Hosts '71 Prom

Betsy Ross Candy and sheets of purple tissue paper occupied the time and efforts of Fleming's class of '72. Juniors decided to host this year's prom in the newly-built Roanoke Civic Center. Enthusiasm and hard work made their fund-raising candy sale a success.

Highlighting the year was the long-awaited arrival of senior rings. They marked the beginning of sometimes happy, sometimes sad, always memorable moments to come. As spring elections came around, juniors began to realize that their turn to be the "big wheels" at Fleming was fast approaching.

Many sophomores found their first year at Fleming a good time to make a fresh start. After the endless hours of studying, there were pep assemblies, football games on Friday nights, plays, and pizza parties at the Village Inn. As the year slowly came to an end and the ribbing was finally over, most sophomores were glad to be a part of it all. Rising juniors even looked forward to a new class of sophomores they could rib.

Underclassmen Adjust Easily

"A bright, shiny penny" is the topic for Sophomore Andy Russell's speech at the Thespians Assembly.

Academics

Learning can take place almost anywhere at almost any time. Sometimes it seems to come painlessly — debating the New Morality on the ride home from the game; protesting Calley's conviction over a hot plate lunch; discussing prejudice at the Human Relations Council. Sometimes teachers put learning in our path — the five hundred word paper due tomorrow; the physics lab left unfinished; the chemistry projects for the science fair; a test next week; fourteen chapters left to read.

Sometimes we complained a lot, but somehow assignments were either completed ("is commended for effort") or they weren't ("needs to put forth more effort and/or pay more attention in class"). At any rate, we all learned something.

Administrators Oversee 540 Days

Seniors this year have each spent twelve years in school; or 120 months, or 2,160 days, or 15,120 hours. Someone has to assure us that the 540 days spent at William Fleming are well spent. Six administrators — a principal, four deans, and an activities director — combine talents to operate both academic and extra-curricular activities smoothly. Working closely with Principal Frank W. Beahm, Jr., Deans Tom Dixon, Hartwell Philips, Lloyd Austin, and Paul Foster oversee the individual halls. Activities Director Kenneth French handles financial transactions and coordinates athletic and club activities.

Important papers clutter the desk of Activities Director, Mr. Kenneth French.

as he tallies financial balances of club revenues for the end-of-the-year audit.

Barren trees and scattered tufts of grass frame the round building that houses central offices, an activities office, and a modern library. Four halls, a gym, and an electives building encircle the round house, completing the "school within a school" campus.

Apprehensive new students and nostalgic old graduates recognize the redwood sign that identifies "William Fleming High School".

Initiated to the faculty with a thick stack of classes to schedule, Mr. Lloyd Austin completes his first year as dean.

Day Ends Late For Secretaries

Bells do not affect all persons on campus. The three school secretaries carry on their never-ending work, oblivious to the noisy clanging. Miss Frances Sanderson types forms and letters, checks registers and report cards, prepares the daily bulletin, and arranges the principal's schedule. Mrs. Mary Pilson takes dictation, types letters and transcripts, and keeps files up to date. In the Activities Office, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Coulter inventories textbooks, sells school supplies, and counts school money. All three dedicate many behind-the-scene hours to making William Fleming High School run smoothly.

During an ordinary day, Principal Frank W. Beahm double-checks a dictation before his secretary Mrs. Mary Pilson proceeds to type and mail the letter.

Counselors Listen Patiently

Rushed with a barrage of mid-term schedule changes, Hart Hall's Guidance Counselor, Mrs. Irma Odom, recommends options for Jerry Green's schedule.

Guidance counselors do much more than "guide" or "counsel." They often dry tears, collect test money, and allay parents' anxieties over college applications. Five guidance counselors, one for each hall and a guidance coordinator, help students through a maze of decisions. Each year they counsel individually with students to recommend course offerings and make sure graduation requirements are met. They keep abreast of college and job opportunities and suggest appropriate ones to their counselees. The administration of S.T.E.P., S.C.A.T., and G.E.D. tests falls on the Guidance Department, which also supervises College Boards and Merit Scholarship Examinations. Most counselors teach a class. Yet with so many other items of business, they always seem to be available when a problem baffles or a gripe needs airing. Their concern makes the life of a high school student easier.

Variety Spices English Courses

"To take or not to take?" That is the question each William Fleming student must ponder as he chooses from a wide spectrum of English courses offered. Survey courses in Drama, World Literature, American Literature, and English Literature supplement composition courses and instruction in both journalism and creative writing. The Bible as Literature and Poetry for Pleasure, two courses new to the curriculum this year, offer new views of "old" material.

Individualized Reading allows students to progress at their own pace. Semantics, The Concept of Man, American Humanities, and Discussion Forum balance a unique and often-copied English curriculum.

Space Age Study Lures R.O.T.C. Cadets

Training officers for both reserve and regular units of the Air Force keeps Sergeant Andrew Rutherford knowledgeable in new aircraft.

February 5, 1971: A.F.J.R.O.T.C. cadets rejoiced that snow had cancelled school. The "day off" permitted them to witness with more than average interest the Apollo XIV moonwalk. As students of aerospace education, they understood the background of United States space operations and the necessity for aerospace power.

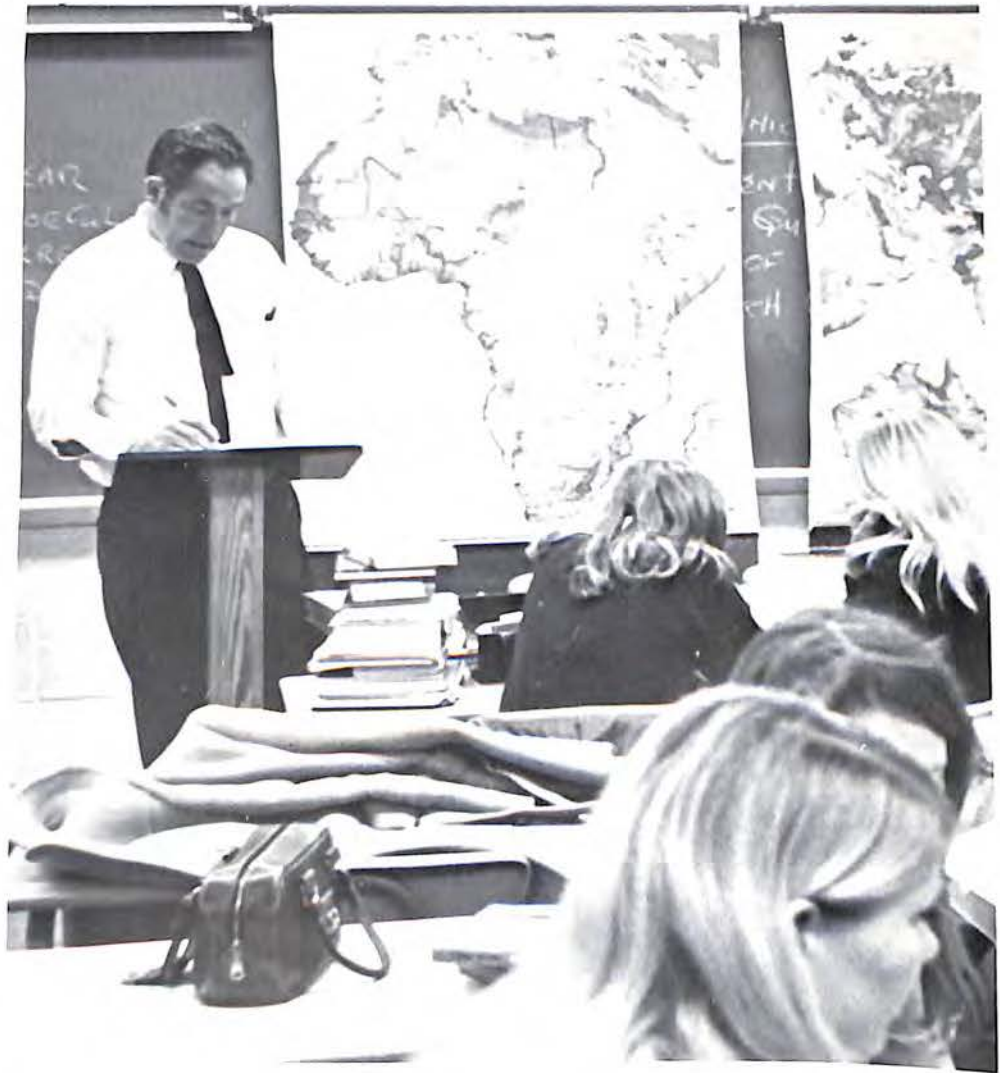

Some, intrigued by career opportunities explored in the A.F.J.R.O.T.C. classes, dreamed of the day they, too, would have a hand in making a moonshot. Others, lured by the thought of more worldly things, polished shoes for tomorrow's drill or sloshed their ways to the barbershop to get those sideburns trimmed for inspection.

Retired Air Force Major William R. Graham, Jr. instructs Mike Turpin in the mechanics of manned space crafts.

Social Studies Sees Changes

Dog-eared and underlined texts, formerly used in traditional history courses, hugged the bookcases in the storage rooms. Dads dished out dollars to buy paperbacks relevant to the new elective history courses. Mothers moved dinner up twenty minutes earlier so their children in Current Events classes could keep a daily six o'clock date with Walter Cronkite. Not only materials and methods of teaching, but course content as well underwent a drastic overhaul. The introduction of one semester history courses brought in-depth study of Political History, Civics, Twentieth Century History, American Ethnic Groups, and Civil War. Other classes in Liberty and the Law, Economics, American Foreign Policy, and Study of Communism balanced an experimental, innovative social studies curriculum.

Math Courses Vary In Depth

Computers may have solved the mathematical problems of the world, but students at William Fleming still feel the pressures of identifying the hypotenuse of a right triangle or evaluating the determinate of $f(x)$. Word problems challenge students in Business Math, Practical Math, and General Math. Algebra, geometry, trigonometry, and calculus puzzle those in more advanced classes. Those in Contract Math stay together for three years to study a full range of advanced mathematical concepts. Fifth Year Math intrigues those trigonometry students who have a way with figures; some take the two math courses simultaneously.

Scientists Find Lab Challenging

Tailored to the needs of each student, the Science Department provides a wide range of course offerings. Biology comes in three species, Green Version, Special Materials, and Modern Biology, each geared for a different method of instruction. Those surviving a bout with First Year Biology can elect an advanced course, equivalent to Freshman Biology in college. Chemistry, too, comes in two formulas, Nursing Chemistry for those planning to wear white and General Chemistry. Classes in physics and physical science complete the spectrum of courses needed to succeed in this technological age.

Culture Studies Enliven Classes

Tape recorders whir to a sudden stop. Native voices command "Repetez, Wiederholen Sic, Repete, Repita." Hesitant students obey, uttering awkward sounds. Confidence slowly builds enthusiasm. Eagerness to master dialogues in French, German, Latin, and Spanish meets with success.

In intermediate language classes, stories, songs, skits, debates, and mock television shows complete with foreign commercials spice a steady diet of grammar and vocabulary lessons. Advanced classes sample literary masterpieces.

Participation in extra-curricular language clubs expose enthusiasts to guest speakers, competition in language contests, and films from foreign countries. Fleming's six widely traveled foreign language teachers, including two Fulbright Scholars, also enrich classes with slides and personal observations of their travels abroad.

Teachers Mold Student Talents

Trumpets blare, then drift into harmony. A solo echoes, student voices succumb to discipline and produce a melody. One color temporarily dominates and then becomes a part of a rainbow. Ebenezer Scrooge takes a bow, then joins hands with the cast for a rousing curtain call.

In this way the Fine Arts Department recognizes talents, large and small, blends them into commendable productions, and correlates them with campus life.

Business Classes Provide Training

Stacks of fuzzy sweaters line the stockroom, waiting to be priced by Distributive Education students. Electric typewriters purr softly, awaiting the touch of girls in Vocational Office Training. Parts of a generator lay dismantled on a workman's bench, waiting to be assembled by knowledgeable students in Industrial Cooperative Training. Each day William Fleming students in the three programs meet the many on-the-job demands of the business world.

Other students, many desirous of office employment, learn basic skills in typing, shorthand, and bookkeeping. Notehand and Personal Typing provide one semester's work in typing personal correspondence and themes and taking notes in college.

Students use electric typewriters and modern equipment while preparing for secretarial jobs in Vocational Office Training classes.

Practical Arts Develop Skills

Cheese sauce coats the bottom of a Teflon pan. A slender needle pricks the facing of an almost-completed dress. An ultra-violet electronic oven bakes a potato in three minutes. As home economics students explore cheese sauces, fancy stitching, and the most modern appliances, they acquire vital skills for modern home-making.

Three levels of Industrial Arts also equip students for handy work around the house or on the job. The use of tools and machines, industrial practices, and consumer knowledge are studied before projects in woodwork, ceramics, sheet metal, and printing are completed.

Mechanical Drawing rounds out a versatile Practical Arts Department. After learning how to letter and use various scales of measuring, students in Mechanical Drawing gain an insight into orthographic, isometric, and architectural drawing.

Armed with white apron and cooking fork, Judy Bradley braises a steak.

Industrial Arts student David Nunley learns to operate a printing press.

Reaching for the basket, skilled hands find enjoyment in class competition.

Physical Fitness Requires Stamina

The name of the game is physical fitness. It comes in different styles, shapes, and sizes. Girls sink baskets, pitch softballs, aim arrows, do dances. Boys lift weights, pitch horseshoes, choose golf clubs, get fingers stuck in bowling balls. Both take time out from physical education classes to study health. Those over sixteen can elect behind-the-wheel driver's training as well.

The World's Oldest Computer

Man's brain is truly the world's oldest computer.

From the time you're born — you're taught to say "thank you," when something nice happens. You're taught what's "right from wrong." And you react accordingly. That's being programmed.

Today, man has developed machines that can remember. These man-made brains are called computers. They, too, have to be taught. Teaching them is called programming.

Computer Programming is a specialty that can change your entire future.

And because you're a specialist you're in demand. 25,000 computer programmers are needed right now. If you're 18 or over. And have a high school diploma or its equivalent. Send for your FREE COMPUTER PROGRAMMING INDICATOR QUIZ. If you have what it takes...ECPI will develop your talent and make you a specialist in COMPUTER PROGRAMMING. Write us today.
