PATRICK HENRY HIGH SCHOOL

2102 Grandin Road S.W.
Roanoke, Virginia 24015
Volume 18

It is early in the morning and the sun is just creeping over the mountain tops and gazing into the valley below. All is serene and motionless. Echoes of yesterday seem fresh in the air as today demands the attention of the living.

But wait! Amid the tranquility comes an explosion. Its origin is not evident at first, but as the "smoke" clears, one can see people beginning to appear. And lots of them. But don't be fooled. No stereotypes here. "People" seems to be an inappropriate word for them; motion explosions would be more descriptive of this mass of zeal.

Shock waves surround the campus as the Patriots prepare to face another day at a school known for releasing a "passion" of sorts. And especially now. The bombardment of vigor is stronger than ever as the challenges become greater. New buildings, new faces, new potential. And oh, yes — new energy! It reaches out and embraces you as it creates a sense of pride for the best high school around. And why not? If the feeling is there, it seems only natural to let it out "on all fours" to experience the excitement of 1979. And if anyone was capable of experiencing these outbreaks of emotion, it had to be a Patriot.

The cheerleaders and Miss Wendy Campbell entertained at the pep assembly by getting team members to perform a victory skit which ended in an explosion of Patriot spirit.

With a limited number of pep assemblies, the senior class listens attentively to the Patrick Henry Honor Band; then they showed their spirit and support when the regional volleyball team sang their victory song.

Showing his strength and generosity, Terry Overstreet helped Lori Sarver up the steep quadrangle steps after she had broken her leg.

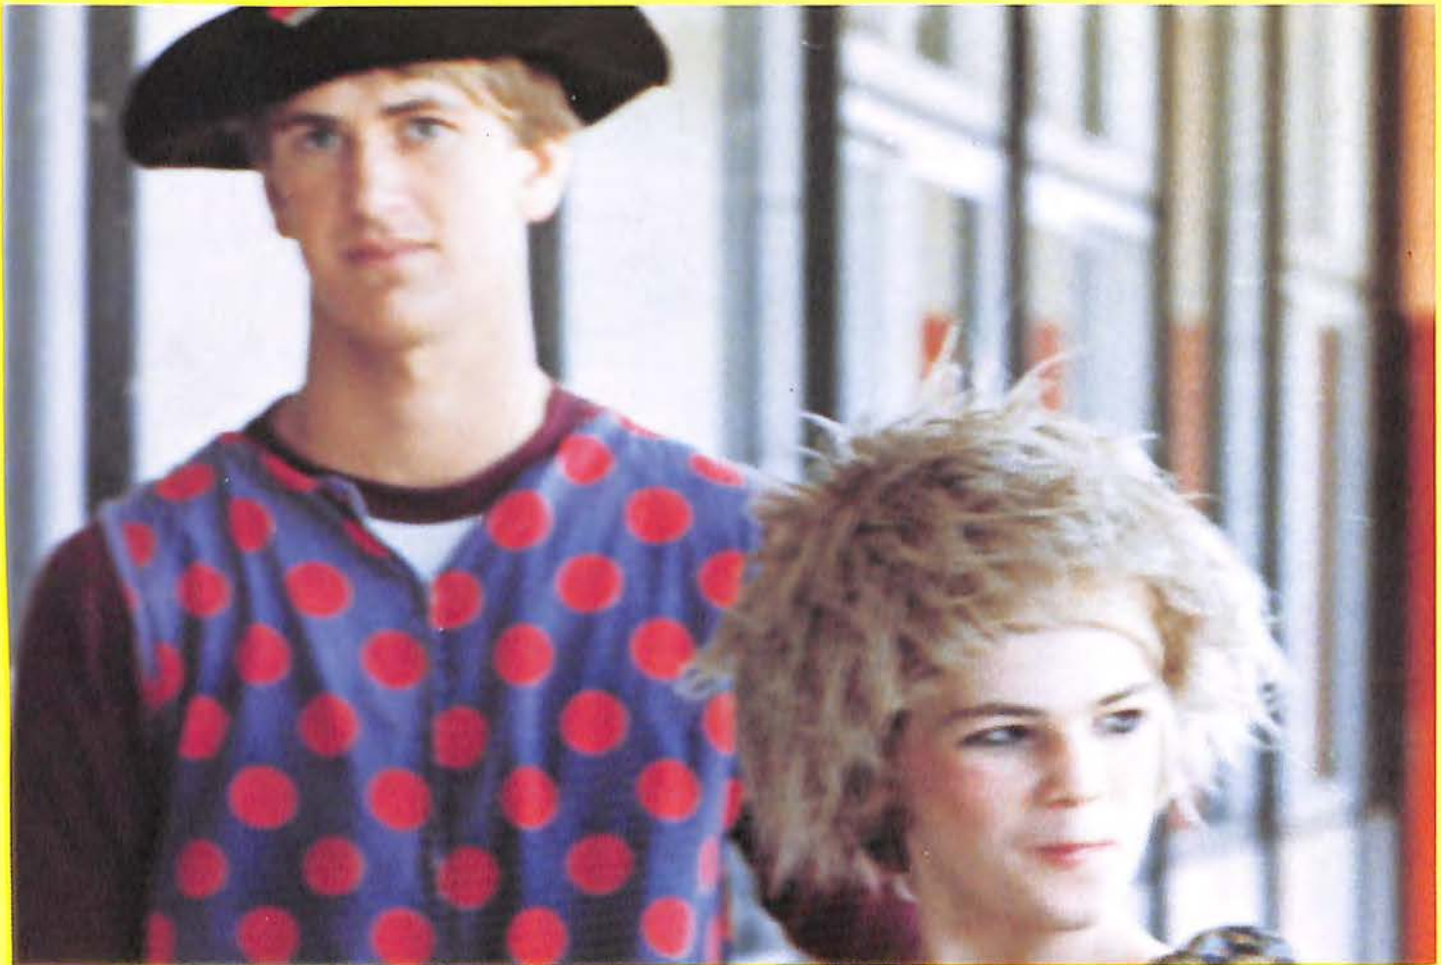

The gym vibrated as the sophomore class really showed enthusiasm over their great high school. With their constant displays of spirit, this class seems to be destined to make outstanding upperclassmen.

On August 28th sixteen hundred and fifty living, breathing souls uncorked the year. They streamed onto campus from all over the Roanoke Valley. Some arrived in cars, others on buses and still others rode their bicycles or walked.

There were a lot of complications in getting the '78-'79 school year off. Schedules had to be changed, fees had to be paid, struggles were made with the lockers. Unity between the classes was not easily achieved. It was evident in the first week of school that the classes felt like individuals by the many class flags waving in the air.

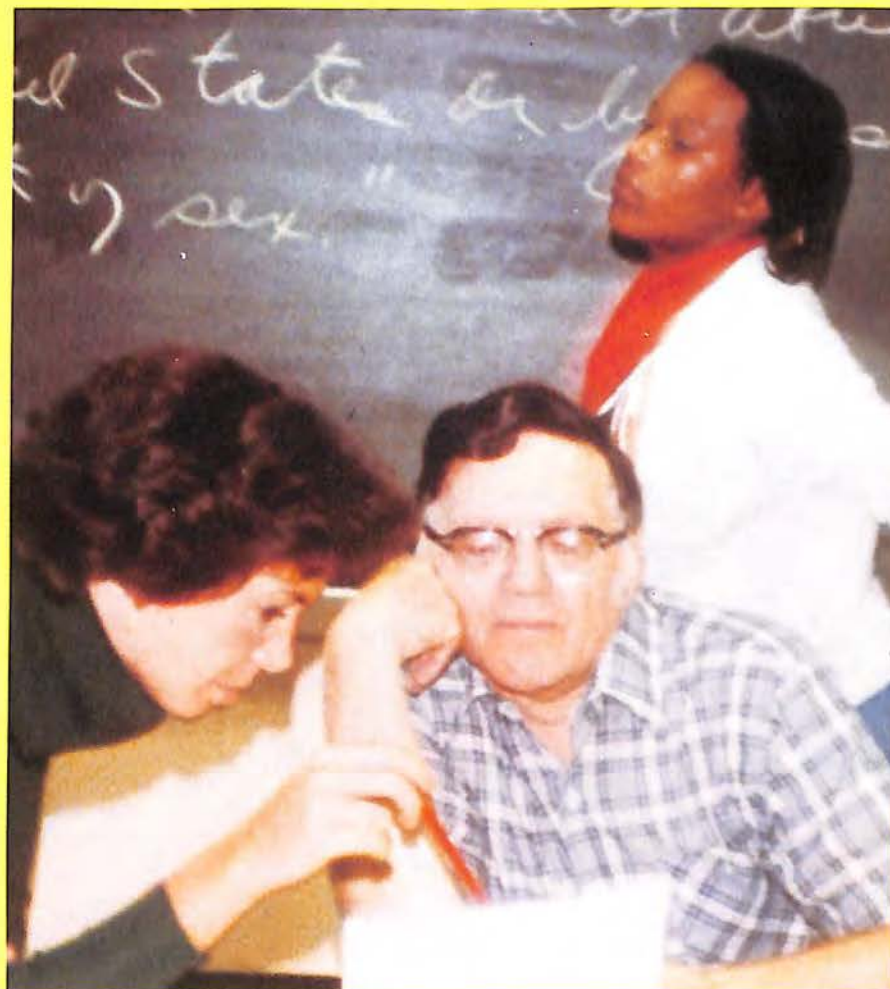

But there was one common feeling among all the classes, and that was that Friday seemed a long way from Monday, but by working together we did strive to make every day seem like a Friday.

Dressing up for the occasion, John Brady, in a tight fitting dress, and Ward Stevens, in his new, pressed pokadotted suit, marched together at the command of their masters on Serf Day.

The quadrangle was filled with a variety of Patriots. Some were dressed up as clowns, ballerinas, candystripers, and even motorcycle maniacs, while their masters plotted their next mischievous act.

While Hunter Draper asks Mr. Frank Smith a question in government, Juanita Moore seems disinterested, so she struts on by.

With great effort and skill, Mark Carper plays a solo in front of over five hundred people and receives a standing ovation.

The Patrick Henry Honor Band takes a well-deserved bow for their tremendous performance in front of a cheering crowd.

“... The Homecoming queen is ...” Everyone rose to their feet; there was silence in the stadium as all awaited the announcement, “... Nancy Ferguson, escorted by Russ Berry.” The crowd went wild screaming and yelling as the new queen was crowned.

As the tradition holds, each year a queen must be chosen. Each class chooses one girl to represent each district. The queen was chosen from the representatives of the senior class.

This year’s senior representatives were Nancy Ferguson, queen; Vickey Hunt, maid of honor; Sara Low, and Carol Blankenship. The sophomore class representatives were Renee Anderson, Donna Conner, Beth Boardman, and Sharon McCorkindale. The junior class delegates were Anne Kepley, Tai Collins, Stella Mitchell, and Gloria Evans.

IN SESSION''

Homecoming Homecoming Homecoming Home

Monday was the night of the bonfire as the branches crackled and spurted out; so did the students. Like the bonfire itself, everyone was "fired-up."

Before the big game with Cave Spring on Friday night, juniors display their winning float, fully equipped with "Patriot-Power."

Taking a break from his master's commands, Bob Martin takes what he thinks is a well-deserved rest on Serf Day.

Pschyed-up for the homecoming game, the Patriot football team gathers for a last minute cheer.

coming Homecoming Homecoming Homecoming

Excitement filled the air around Patrick Henry's campus during homecoming week. Each day of the week had its own special activity in order to prepare for the big weekend. Monday was a double-feature with the seniors and a bonfire starring. "Senior Sidewalk Day" gave seniors complete domain over the upper walkway between Parsons and McQuilkin Halls. A fine of twenty-five cents was charged when underclassmen trespassed on senior territory. The "hot spot" to be on Monday night of homecoming week was at the Patrick Henry bonfire. The Patrick Henry Players tossed in a dummy dressed as a Cave Spring Knight, which burned, exploded, and "fired up" the audience. Tuesday was "Color Day." Patriots dressed in purple and gold to receive discounts on their dance tickets. Seniors ruled over underclassmen bought as serfs on Wednesday. On Thursday, each student received puzzle pieces to trade until all the pieces were collected for a free ticket to the dance. By Friday everyone was excited and ready for a victory! Russ Berry and David Vest found the spirit stick for the seniors. Students and advisors put finishing touches on their floats and the parade proceeded to the stadium where the juniors' float was judged the best. Nancy Ferguson was crowned as P.H.'s homecoming queen and Vickey Hunt was pronounced maid of honor. The Patriots didn't win the game, but they made an admirable effort against the undefeated Cave Spring Knights. On Saturday, students "boogied down" to the beat of the Royal Kings. Homecoming week was a hectic, fun-filled week overflowing with unity and spirit for Patrick Henry High. "Home of the Patriots."

During the break on Serf Day, Kevin Whitmore sweeps the ground so his master, Chris Robertson, doesn't get his shoes too dirty.

Considering it was put together on the final night, the sophomore float proudly rides through Victory Stadium on homecoming night.

Working very hard on the senior class float, Claire Smith and Paul Bowers try to prepare a winner.

A ROYAL EVENT

As always, the grand finale of the homecoming week was the dance. It was held in the cafeteria, and though it was very hot, no one seemed to notice. They were all too busy listening to the dynamic sounds of the Royal Kings. The Kings proved to everyone that they deserved their reputation as one of the best bands in the state.

During one of the breaks, the homecoming court was presented. After the representatives of each district and their dates had been introduced, Harold Saunders, vice-president of the senior class, sang a song for the queen, Nancy Ferguson.

When the band returned, they rock-and-rolled until the stroke of midnight. Everyone left reluctantly, but all agreed that it had been a perfect ending to a great week.

We're gonna Boogie Oogie Oogie, seems to be the thoughts of the crowd as they display their talents in disco dancing.

"Saturday Night Fever" was in full swing as Chuck Jackson, lead vocalist, and Rick Hendricks, bass guitarist of the Royal Kings "jam" at the homecoming dance.

Flashing Lights and good music were in order as Rick Hendricks, bass guitarist, Chuck Jackson, lead vocalist, and Gary Alexander, with vocals and guitar, of the Royal Kings do their best to help everyone "get down."

Things don't seem to be "moving" yet, but by the end of the night the cafeteria was rocking.

Do you think we can do it? Allen Wass and senior Anita Hoffman appear to be contemplating that question as they observe all the new wild dances.

“FASCINATION MORE THAN A TERROR”

Stage fright and excitement were some feelings expressed by members of the cast during the fall play. The Patrick Henry Players celebrated the grand opening of the Clara Black Auditorium on November 16-19 with the production of Kaufman and Hart's "You Can't Take it with You", featuring Tom Mason of the Mill Mountain Playhouse and Polly Ayers of "Panorama".

The Players again presented us with a production of professional quality and considerable talent. The superb acting ability of the actors and actresses was increased due to the new surroundings of a professional theatre. Preparing this play took careful planning and hard work. Scripts, lights, sound and props were organized for this well-polished performance.

While rehearsing, Amanda Black and Russ Berry really concentrate on getting into character.

Contrary to how things appear, Steve Warren and Randy Woodson kept the fall play from going "up in smoke."

While taking a break, sophomore Marvin Croner concentrates on learning his lines.

During an inquisition by Denise Greenlaw, Russ Berry begins to look apprehensive at the prospect of marriage to a member of that strange family.

During one of the many nights of rehearsal, Laban Johnson works on smoothing over a few "rough spots".

At the final dress rehearsal, Mr. Tom Mason relaxes in Grandpa's easy chair.

"What do you think you're doing?" exclaims Steve Warren as Robin Everingham gives away his secrets.

“IT WAS A BLOODY GOOD SHOW”

Without a doubt, Thursday, September 21st, was a rather unordinary day for some students. If by chance you noticed a junior or senior that looked a little apprehensive or gruesome, you should have known that their dread was justifiable.

This was the day that some of the braver souls of the school volunteered to donate blood to the American Red Cross Society during an emergency shortage.

The anxiety was heightened as the donors went to seven different booths giving various information on their backgrounds. The students had to pass several examinations, including blood pressure, temperature, and hemoglobin tests, before they were allowed to give blood.

Of the seventy-five volunteers, there were seventy-five survivors. Some, however, endured the “vampirism” better than other. Some were laughing, others were nervous, and a few unfortunates passed out.

After giving blood the volunteers were helped up and offered cookies, Coke, lemonade, and water to revive themselves. After being asked if they would ever donate blood again, the students, proudly displaying a sticker reading, “Be kind to me, I gave blood today”, then went home to recuperate.

While waiting for the “dreaded needle” in order to donate blood for the Red Cross, Katie Bair demonstrates her own style of relaxing.

“Now, I told you it wouldn’t hurt,” exclaims the Red Cross volunteer to John Childress after he gives blood.

Cookies and Coke enable Jay Dooley to make a rapid recovery after giving his share of blood.

These students, patiently but nervously, await their turns to donate blood.

Jeepers Sleepers

Taking her own time-out, Nancy Ferguson catches her breath during the powder puff football game.

Daydreaming seems to be more exciting than chemistry as Michael Scales falls into the world of "Never, Never Land."

As visions of volleyballs bounce in her head, co-captain Phoebe Beckley takes a break on the way to Halifax for the Regional Volleyball Championship.

Whatever they're doing in class is not as important to senior Sheri Jenkins as catching up on that sleep she lost studying for all those tests.

'PATRIOTISM' PREVAILS

Better watch your step. Senior cheerleader, Cindy Wickline carefully carries the cake the cheerleaders made for the football team to team captains Darryl Jones and Kenneth Gee.

Waiting to hear the nominations for the Christmas court, the senior class gets ready to cheer.

Junior varsity cheerleaders show their enthusiasm during the Patriots first home basketball game.

Hopping and hollering, sophomores show their Patriot spirit as they drift by the stands on their homecoming float.

Showing great appreciation, Cindy Wickline accepts a carnation from Ann Kepley.

As their horns go up, members of the band get down!

Offering us entertainment, the volleyball team sang a tribute to P.H. during a pep assembly.

WAR BETWEEN THE CLASSES

The day after seniors attempted to show superiority, the juniors tried to outdo them, but their handiwork was exterminated early in the day when senior Russ Berry ruined their plans.

Toga, Toga, Toga. The seniors strive to finish their float for the homecoming parade. Taking a break, Drew Kepley, Steve Holland, Tom Penn and Claire Smith examine the next portion of the float.

Our school wasn't just made up of books and buildings; the most important elements were the people and those special times that they shared which helped to make the past year a memorable one. These events were memorable because it was the students who made them be what they were. Class rivalry was a big part of this. It gave everyone a chance to reach beyond Shakespeare and The Revolutionary War in order to just enjoy being a part of Patrick Henry High and the people who went there. The small, fun things broke the everyday routine of school life . . . but the spirit that exploded when those classes competed! It was just tremendous!

Upon the arrival of the second day of school, the sophomores and juniors found that the seniors had struck. Many attempted to correct what they thought was a "mistake" but found their attempts greased.

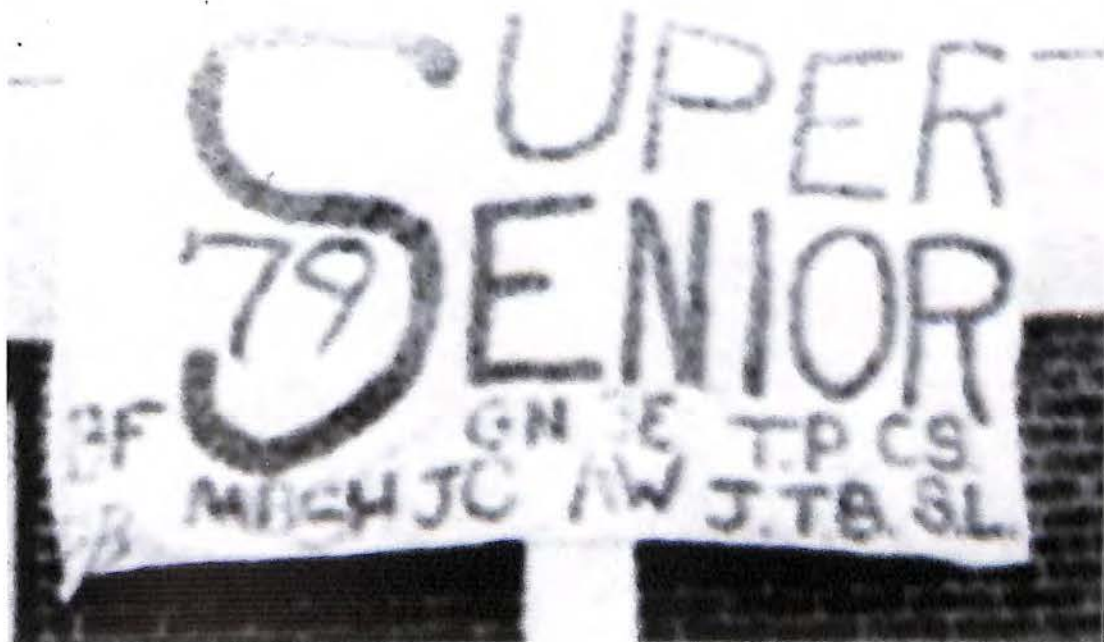

During the first week of school, competition between the classes was very strong. The junior girls attempted to prove that the class of '80 was the best, but the seniors washed away their plans.

The Class of '79 showed school spirit during homecoming week by decorating McQuilkin Hall on Hall Competition Day.

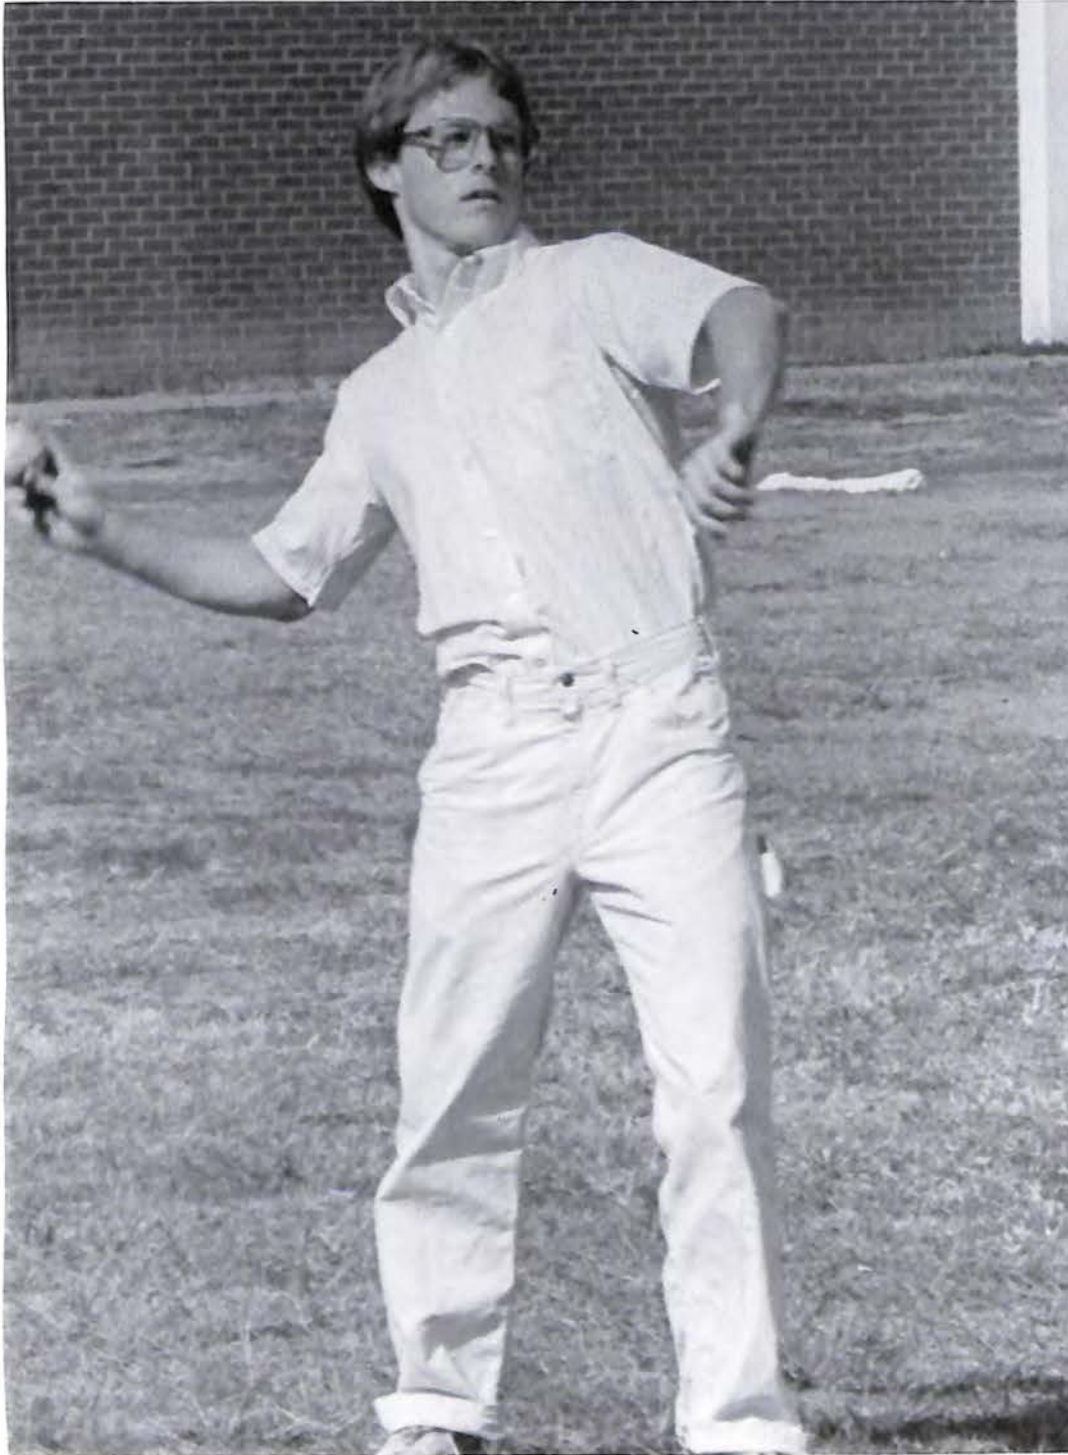

Super Senior flags were seen from Penn to Persinger Halls during homecoming week. The initials might give you a clue as to who was behind the conspiracy.

Holding the ladder for senior Wayne Dacal as he sneaks up the flagpole to steal the juniors' flag. sophomore Rae Martin looks apprehensively for any oncoming juniors.

Campus Life

Senior David Smith shows his athletic ability by throwing a baseball for his fourth period class.

"Ho Hum," replies Becky Markham as she begins another boring day in Math 5.

Senior Mickey Strickland takes a moment to increase his reading ability in the library.

FUN IN THE SUN?

The powder puff football team seems to have tackled the problem of who's on top.

Senior girls are in a huddle to plan their next attack on the unsuspecting junior team.

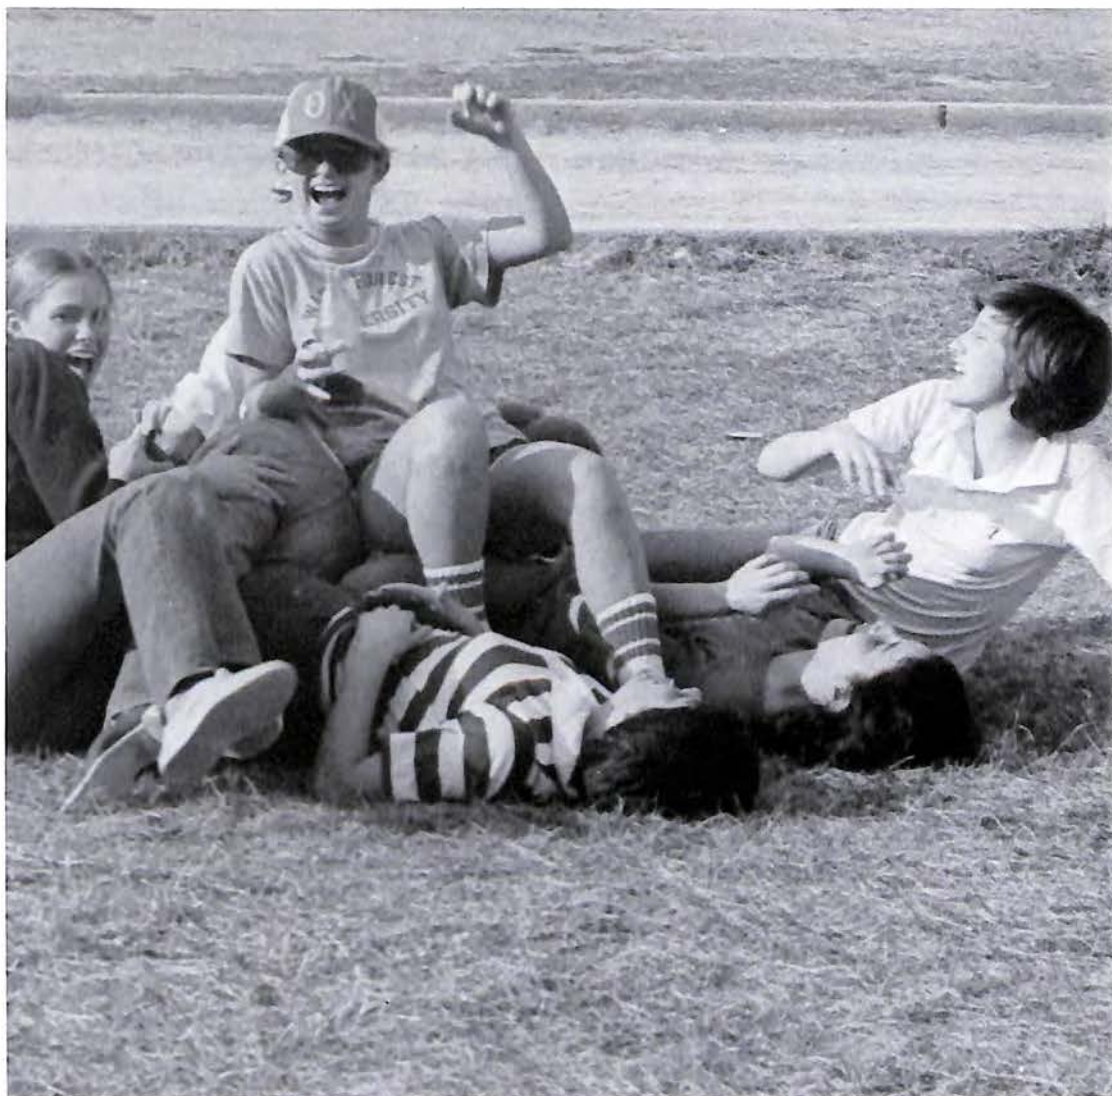

Yes, fellow Patriots; it was a day to remember. There were those who had "reminders" of the occasion long after the day had passed. There was, supposedly, a "powder puff" football game played between the junior and senior girls. The talents exhibited that day were quite the opposite of the powder puff myth.

Look at Annette Poore, a faithful Patriot supporter. And what did she get? You guessed it: a busted nose. Oh, and let's not forget Jane Callahan and her mobile kneecap.

There was, however, true spirit on the field, even though there were obstacles to overcome. The juniors didn't seem to have as much support as was expected, but some senior girls decided to "come to the rescue" and from that point on it was action. The tackles seemed even brutal at times. "Powder Puffs?" Ho! Ho! No one suffered from whiplash or anything similar. All suffered from exhaustion in the end, but everyone felt better for having been there.

The two teams were very closely matched and played very well. Fun in the sun? Well . . . yes! Everyone was there for a cause: to enjoy a challenge and relinquish their energy to the purple and the gold!

Taking her position on the senior side, Anne Hoopes looks ready to kill.

Referee Miss Pam Willis looks to have tackled both junior and senior teams!

Quarterback Annette Poore catches the ball and waits to pass to the receiver.

'Thank God It's Friday!'

With "radar hats" ready for the Cave Spring-P.H. basketball game, Joey Privott and Robert Thomas turn to catch the action of the cheerleaders.

Rolling along, John Dubase pushes grocery carts at A&P to earn weekend money.

"Professional queen" Nancy Ferguson displays a friendly smile, in spite of the cold, as she rides down Main Street in the Salem Christmas parade.

Friday, Saturday, and Sunday: the weekend!

By 2:15 Friday afternoon every student was sneaking sly glances towards the clock, waiting, watching the minutes pass by slowly — five seconds, four, three, two, one. At last, the bell!

The halls were filled with students rushing to their lockers to dump their unwanted books, but mainly, the halls were filled with excitement. The weekend had begun!

Weekends were looked forward to from Monday. As each day passed and the weekend grew closer, the excitement built. By Friday most students had the following two days planned to the minute and their anticipation grew.

For some, the weekend meant going to parties, working at their part-time jobs, going to movies, or going out with friends. For others, it meant just relaxing with the thought of no school for two days.

But no matter how it was spent, for each student the weekend was his own.

Some unwanted visitors such as these were sometimes seen at many of the parties during the night-time activities of the school year.

Always eager to help, Phillip Houchins loads groceries into a customer's vehicle at his job at Mick-or-Mack at Towers.

Sparks fly from her fingertips! Junior Margaret Guarrant gets into the Halloween spirit and into the partying spirit as she prepares to cast a spell on the photographer.

There was laughter; there were tears, and together they made it our year. With eagerness and ambition, we watched the sun rise with different eyes. Learning from our experiences over the years has made us a greater class and better individuals. The first step we took was a lonely one. With the second step we made new friendships. Together we shared similar emotions, ideas and adventures.

After our struggles and hardships from the first grade to graduation day, the reward we received meant that we had succeeded in getting over some of the many hurdles that were placed along our unknown "journey." We followed different paths and set new goals for ourselves with the constant reminder that there were dreams to conquer. But the dreams that we shared will never be far from our memories, because we reached for them together.

Stuck In the Middle

Being the middle child is always hard. They don't have as many privileges as the older child, but they're no longer the baby of the family.

This is true for many students' entire junior year. They are told to set a good example for the sophomore class, but are still continuously put in their place by the seniors.

In spite of these problems the junior class of 1978-79 showed their spirit in various ways. During homecoming week, the juniors decorated Persinger Hall. Their purple and gold streamers and original posters won the class competition.

Later in the week the juniors' float, "Knight of Death", won the float competition.

Throughout the rest of the year, the class of '80 proved themselves in many other ways, including sports, academics, and many displays of school spirit

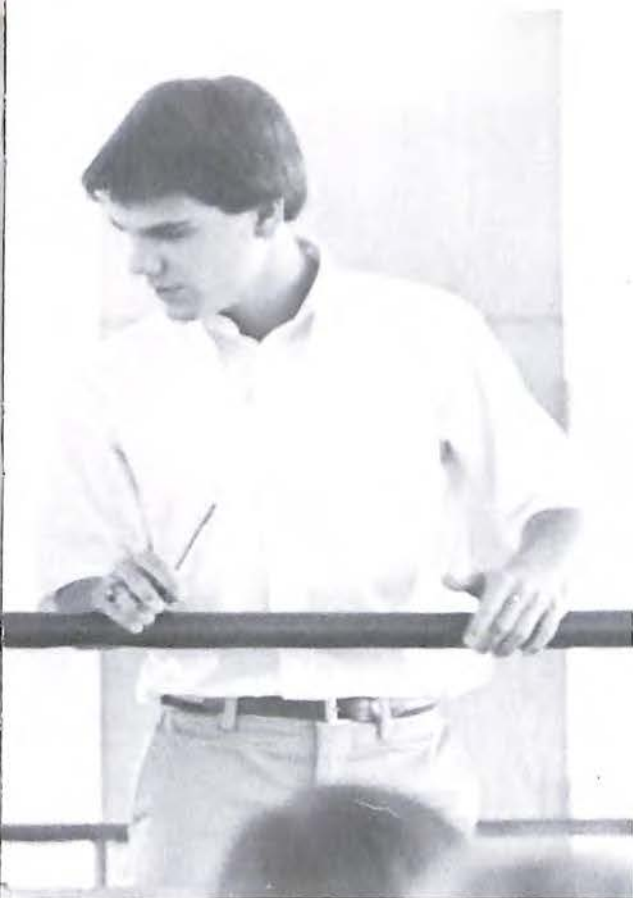

A look of fear crosses Velvet Moock's face as she prepares to throw her mighty bomb during the powderpuff football game on November 5th.

Gossiping in the lunch room, Stephanie Hampton surprises Priscilla Robertson with the news from last night.

Chewing Skoal seems to be a popular pastime with Robert Ballou while talking with his friends during break.

Making suggestions to Mr. Gerry Ciaffone, Gordon Poore seems proud of his accomplishments.

Feeling the security of his teddy-bear, Stuart Sadler rests against his locker awaiting his master's next command.

"Do you think she'll go with me?" Jeff Perkins asks Chip Aker as he starts back to class.

"Knight of Death" was the theme of the juniors homecoming float. The float, equipped with coffin, pall bearers, and dead knight, was followed by a hearse and weepers. The funeral service, preached by Margaret Guerrant, was the gravest part of the homecoming parade.

Revenge of the Pink Panther! Phillip Markley looks as if he wants revenge for being dressed like this by his master on Serf Day.

Approaching Tim Eads from his left, Michael O'Brien attempts to steal the soccerball, but Tim kicks it away in time.

With a look of disgust, Ginny Tatum looks on as the senior powderpuff team plans its next play.

During lunch, Katherine Townsend carries on an animated conversation with John Echols.

With just a little help from each other, Kathy Evans, and Tammy Rosser complete their French assignment.

A crowd of underclassmen gathers quickly as Chris Altizer and Stuart Sibley begin to wrestle.

Looking up, David Arnold rushes to class to be on time. With this year's new attendance policy, every three tardies counted as one absence.

Hurriedly taking notes, Cynthia Dillon doesn't bother to look up as she rushes on with her assignment.

"I won't even take it off in the shower." Robert Ferguson clutches the necklace given to him by Katie Bair.

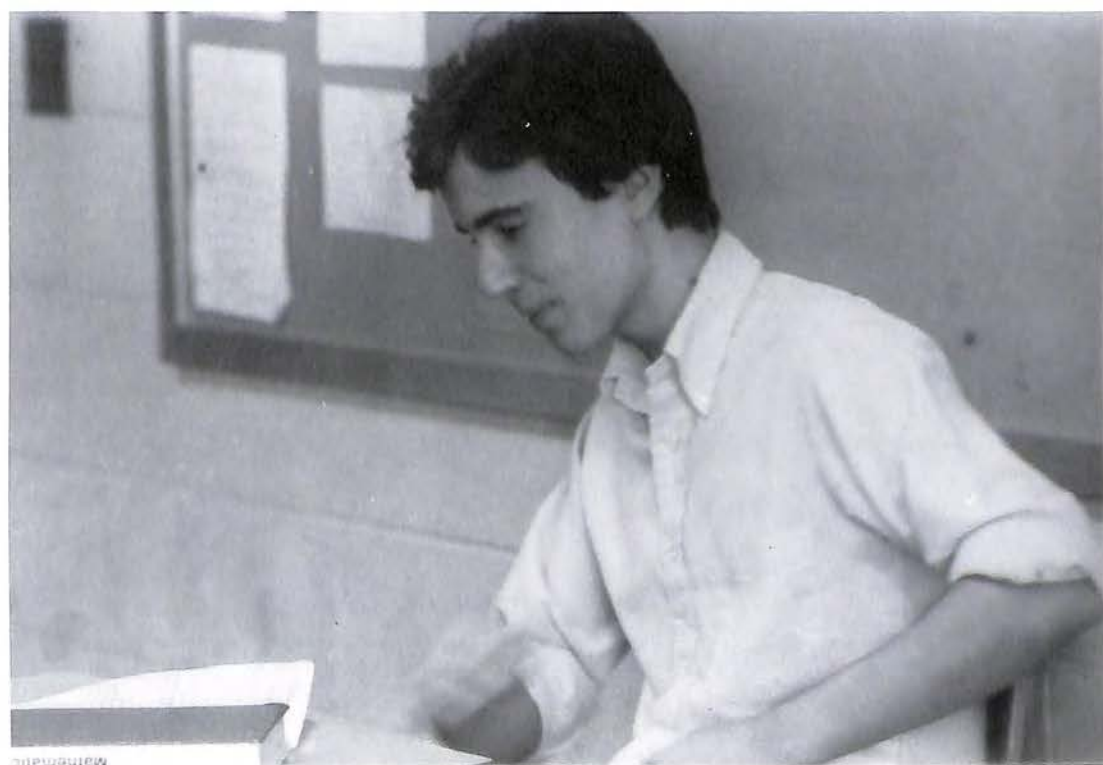

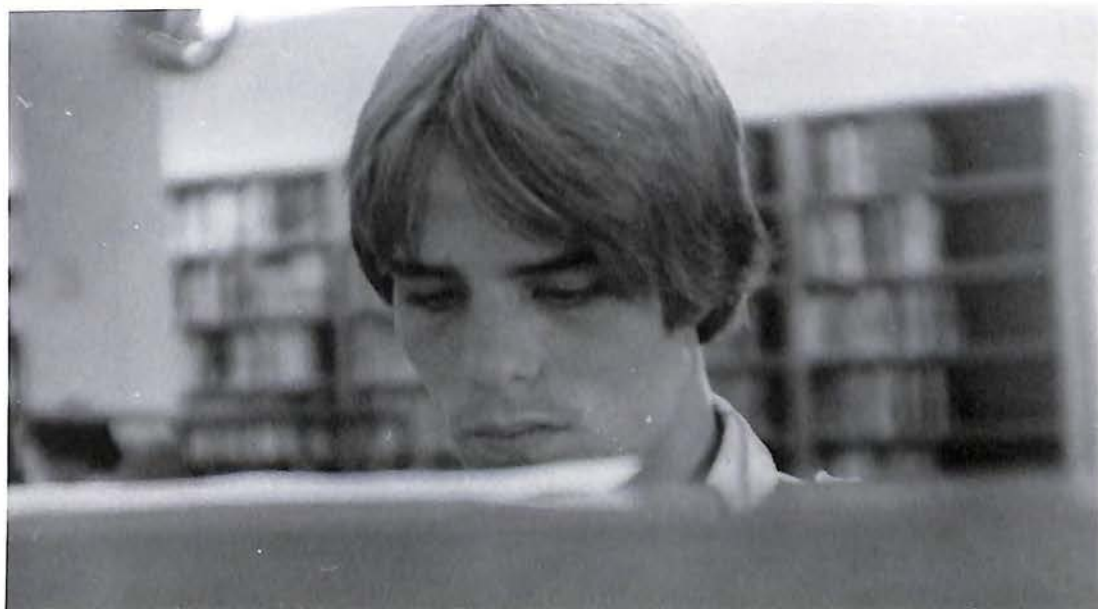

Eating lunch doesn't seem to be a chore for Jim Bishop and Don Strubler as they munch their lunch.

The break-time conversation in the quadrangle doesn't appear to be interesting enough for Michael Skelly as he stares into space.

Studying hard in the newly remodeled library, Danny Thompson looks glum as he searches through a reference book.

While preparing to leave Towers Mall during the homecoming parade, Anne Kepley smiles radiantly.

After seeing a recent test grade in Mrs. Marmion's fifth period Latin class, Jeff Atkinson shakes his fist and grimaces.

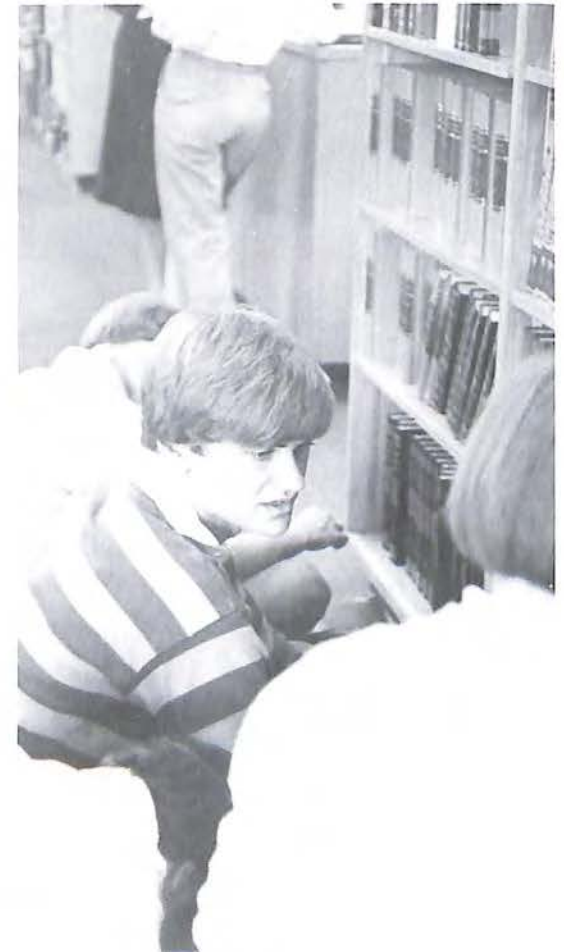

Being in the middle isn't all bad

Juicy news seems to have caught the attention of Cindy Trout, Cindy Smith and Anne Kepley during lunch.

Many varying expressions are found on the faces of juniors as they show their fascination with Mrs. Shepherd's chemistry class.

Searching for the unknown, Ward Stevens hunts for the library's encyclopedia he needs.

"Pardon me, will you please pass the salt?" Juniors Tim Eads and Scott Petty enjoy a friendly chat during lunch.

Accidents do happen. Sammy Lowman, Chip Aker, and Gordon Poore proved this when they all received football injuries at the beginning of the year.

He has been called many things, but Nato Evans is the Mr. Skool.

Standing to show their spirit, juniors cheer loudly at a pep assembly.

Juniors find time to work and play

On a cold December day, Mike McKay keeps his books warm.

With the thought of conquering the last half of her classes, Tracy Lowe leaves homeroom.

Students nonchalantly walk by as Gordon Poore throws Lori Smith over the railing.

Hoping the Latin banquet would turn into a toga party, John Shannon dressed in his Roman apparel.

With great concentration, Frances Ramos cuts the cake for the Latin Banquet.

At the homecoming dance, Tai Collins and her date, Teddy Comer, enjoyed a free moment to talk.

A Year of Jubilation

"J-J-J-U-N!" The chant began loud and strong as did the juniors' year. Seeing old friends, meeting new teachers, changing schedules, and settling down to school life again helped the juniors prepare for the coming year.

"I-I-I-O-R!" Christmas passed with snow, semester exams, and class rings marked the middle of the year. Struggling through English, chemistry, and American history, the juniors looked toward spring.

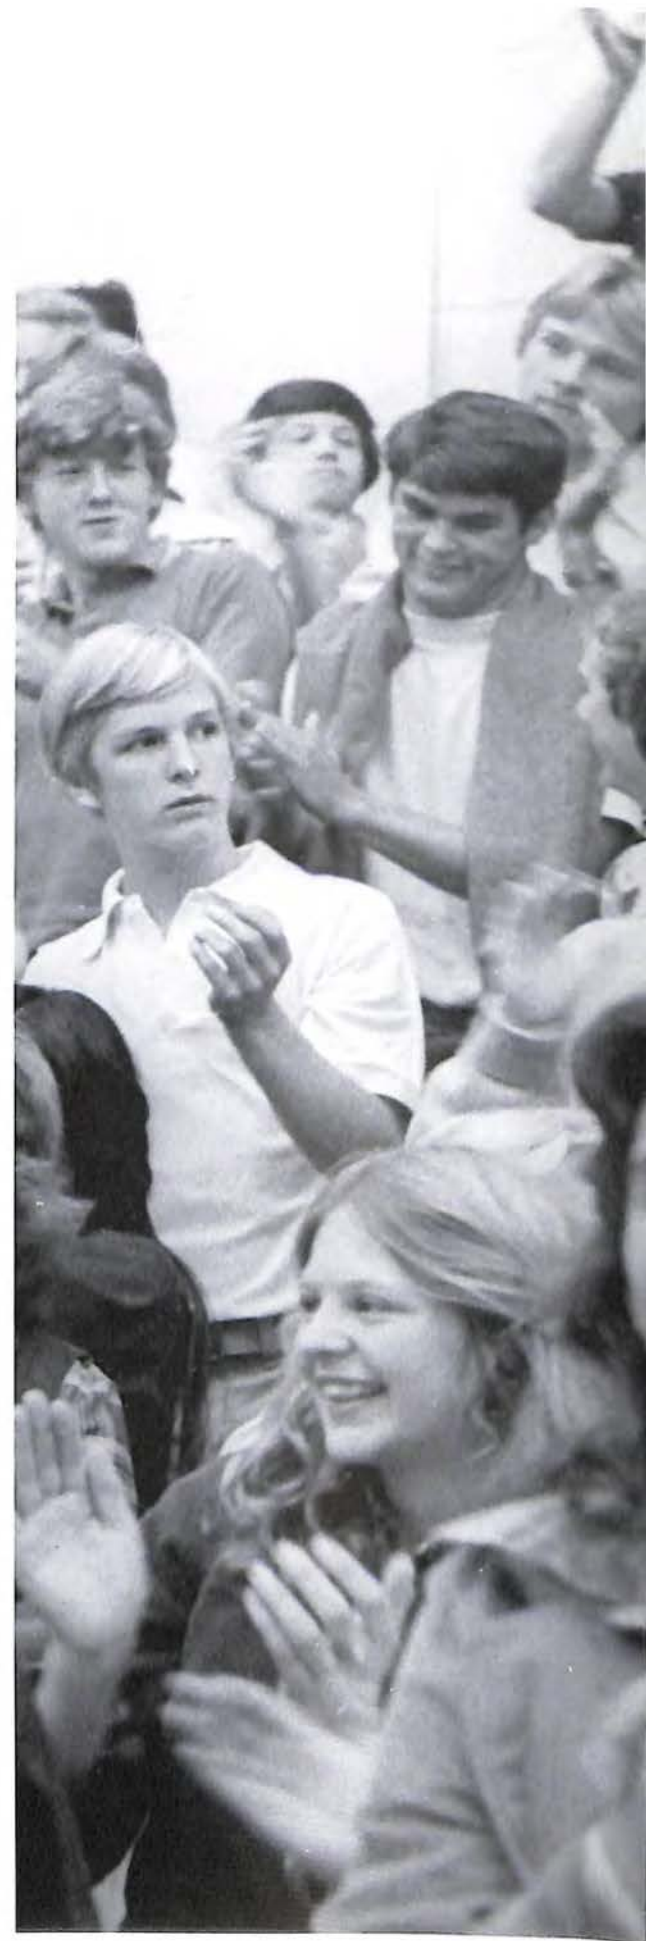

"J-U-N-I-O-R!" Some juniors planned and decorated for the prom while others scurried about making their last-minute preparations for the big event.

"JUNIORS! JUNIORS! JUNIORS!" The year passed quickly and the juniors were suddenly seniors.

Expecting to see more than a fly on her shoulder, Donna Houseman prepares to defend herself.

While concentrating on the game, Hilda Willis still cheers her team on with enthusiasm.

Amused by all the other students rushing to and from class, Mark Slaydon sits back and relaxes.

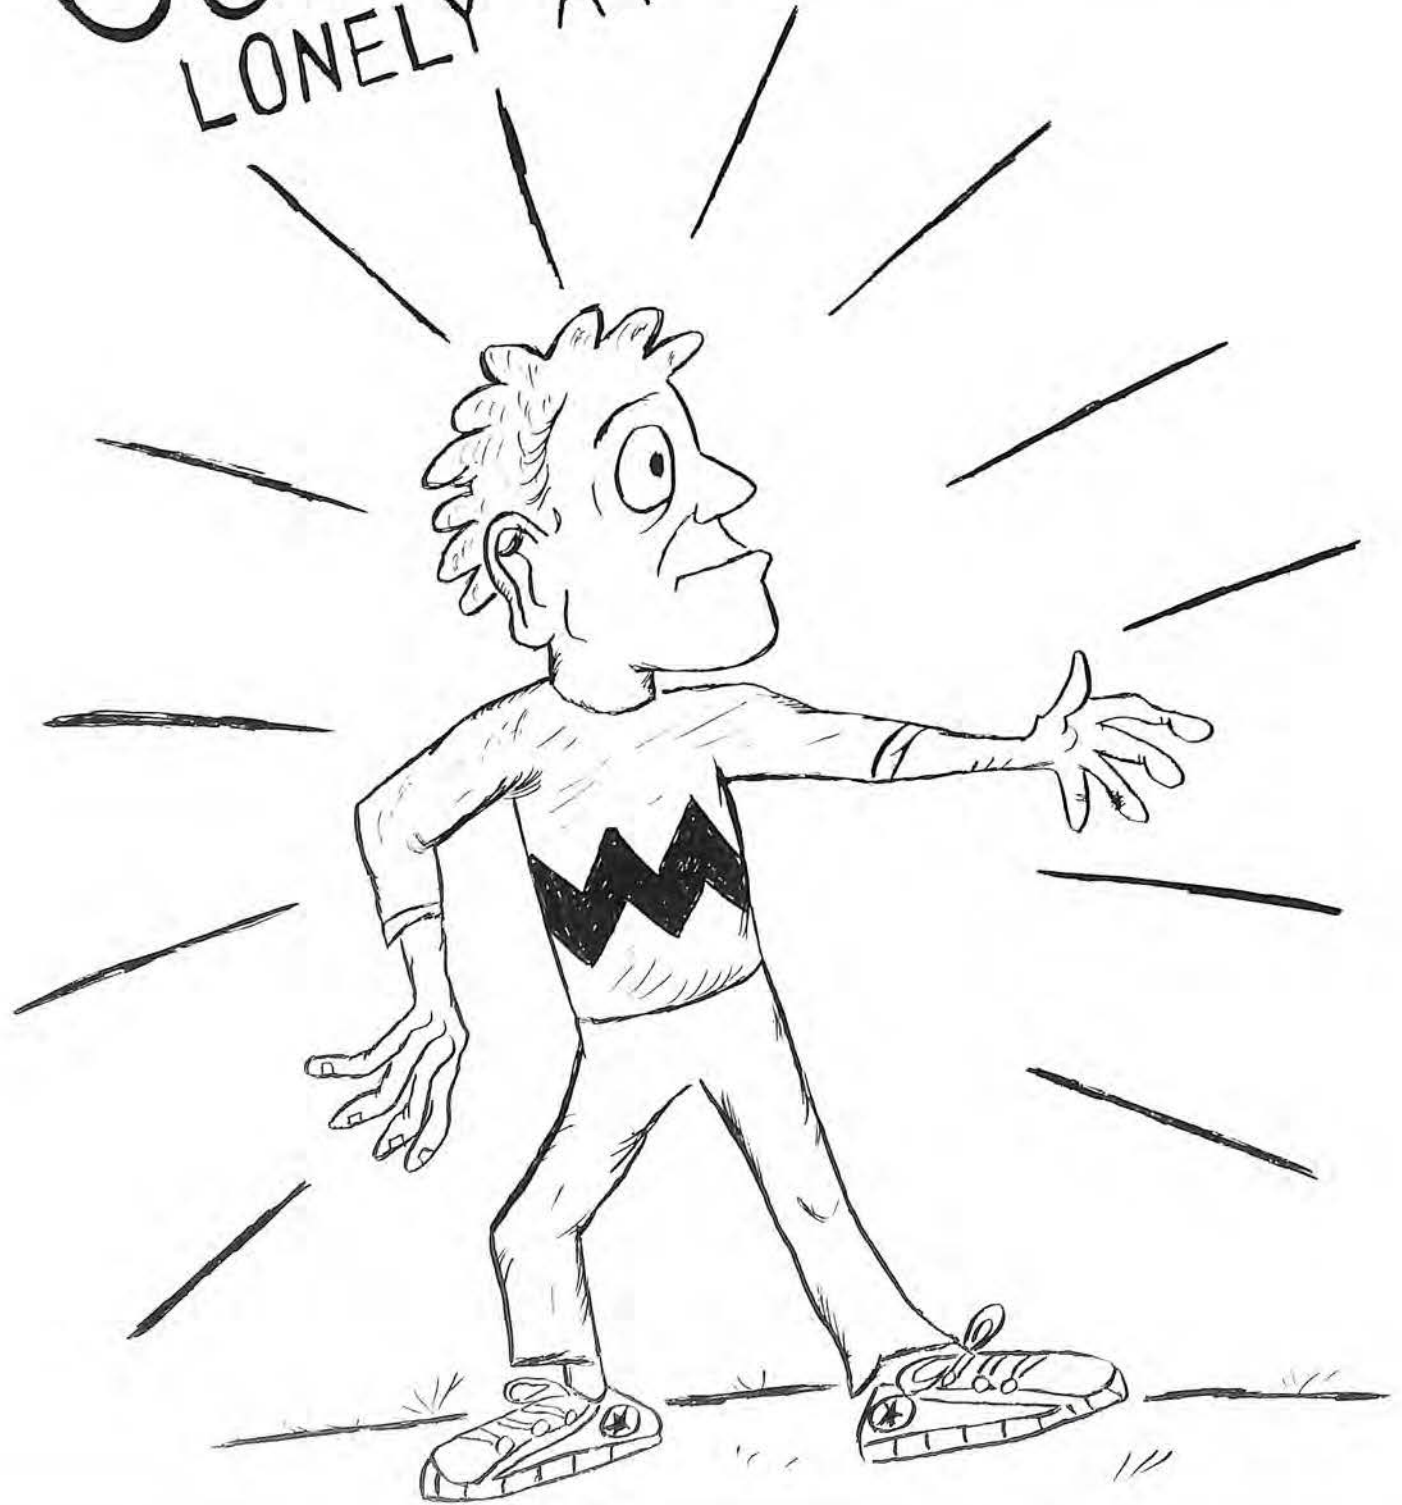

Enthusiastic juniors cheered loudly during one of the few football pep assemblies.

Clapping enthusiastically, Patriettes Renna Colbert and Tai Collins cheer the girls' basketball team on to another victory.

For many new students at Patrick Henry, the big day came late in the summer on August 25, 1978. The Student Government Association scheduled a half-day for the sophomores so that they could become accustomed to their new school.

The day started at 8:30 in the auditorium with the introduction of all of the hall deans, Mr. Jack Graybill and Mr. George Graybill. The SGA Executive Council officers were also introduced. After the initial welcome, the "baby Patriots" were sent to their homerooms for the start of a real school day. All of the deans gathered their new students together to explain the rules, to answer any questions and to give them a more personal welcome to the school. By the time all of these deeds had been completed and mass confusion was settling in, the guides, teachers and new students were ready for a break. The cheerleaders had cookies and cakes for sale and each student was given a drink before the elated moment arrived. The final and most important act was yet to be achieved. Each student then proceeded to his class according to the schedule. As the sophomores wandered confoundly through the halls looking for Parsons 213 or wondering which building was Penn, the confusion mounted only to be relieved by the upperclassmen and teachers who sent them off in the basic direction of their next class.

Sophomores are Stretching-Out

The sophomores have finally come to the end of the line, for gym class anyway. After this year, the 1978-1979 sophomores will no longer have to report to the gym for one period a day every other week to dress into their uniforms for what sometimes seemed to be an unnecessary part of the day. While in their coed gym classes, the sophomores learned to play lacrosse, speedball, football and various other competitive sports, and the teachers tried to keep them in good physical condition by starting with exercises every day.

The other week was spent in health class studying about a variety of different diseases and "quackery." Information was given on how to prevent being drawn into unnecessary health situations.

Even though the sophomores seem pressured by the fact of having gym as a required course, it is a vital part of their well-being and will continue to be a required course in our school system.

Could it be the bump? Holly Altizer displays her talents in gym class.

Sophomores try out their skills in volleyball.

Coach Scharnus prepares himself to teach his gym class the art of volleyball.

Playing lacrosse puts some sophomores on the go while others prefer to stand back and watch.

Are these gym students practicing ballet? No, it's Mrs. Patsel's gym class learning to play volleyball.

Is it hard? These sophomore girls seem to find sit-ups an expressional experience.

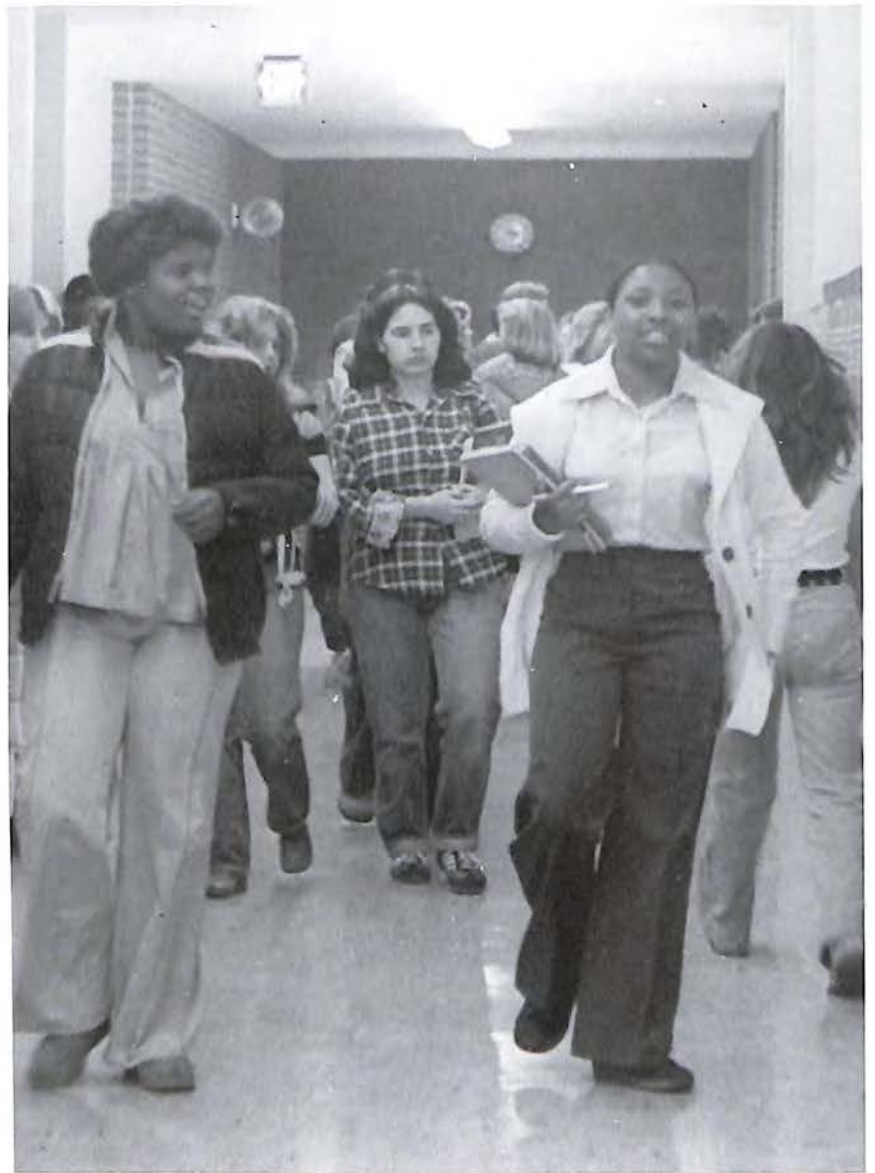

Sophomores listen intently as Coach Scharnus explains the next step.

Leading their fellow Patriots, Sue Nichols and Vanessa Finley seemed to be enjoying themselves.

"You never know who you may meet on the way to your next class!" Tamy Martin prepares herself carefully for the unexpected.

Sophomores showed their class spirit as the junior varsity basketball team was announced at the pep assembly before the first game.

Studying Biology brought different expressions to the faces of these students.

The upperclassmen helped to satisfy Barbara Gunter and other sophomores on orientation day with cookies and drinks.

Looking in all directions, these sophomores didn't seem to take in all of the happenings on the P.H. campus all at once.

Playing soccer in South Roanoke Park with other friends, Mike Ferry shows his style.

"Here goes again!" is the expression on the face of Wendy Anderson as she prepares for that rough bus ride home.

Showing those teeth, Deborah Spencer gives her imitation of that Carter smile.

With a look of satisfaction, Leigh Ann Goodwin stops during a rigid school day to think about the good points of attending Patrick Henry.

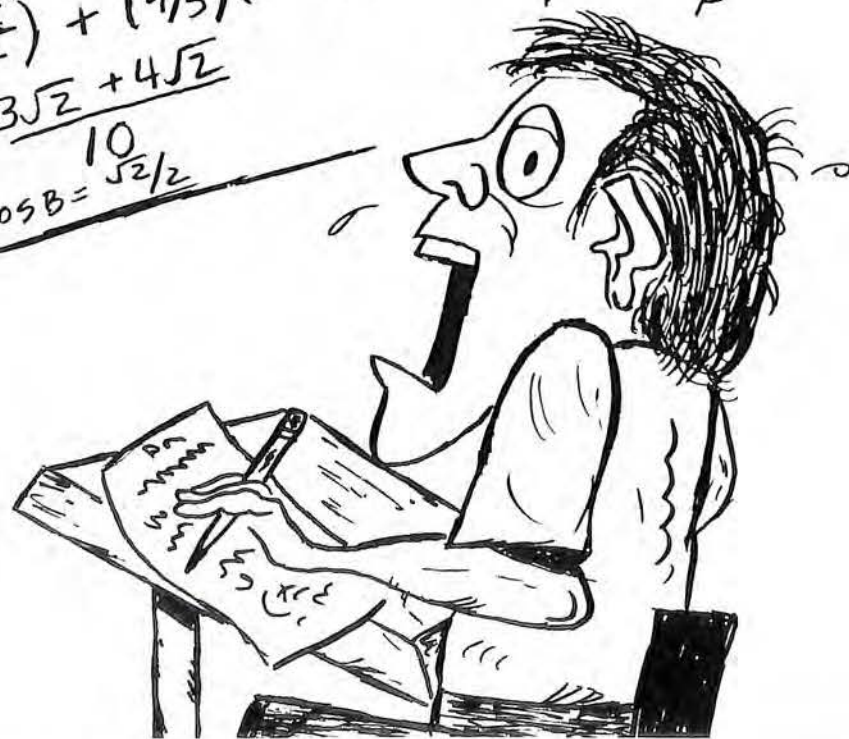

Amused by Angie Fleming's conversation with friends, Anthony Robertson tries to conceal his laughter.

ANSWER TO PROB 14

$$\sin \left[\underbrace{\arccos \frac{4}{5}}_{\alpha} + \underbrace{\arctan 1}_{\beta} \right]$$
$$\sin(\alpha + \beta) = \sin \alpha \cos \beta + \cos \alpha \sin \beta$$
$$\left(\frac{3}{5} \right) \left(\frac{\sqrt{2}}{2} \right) + \left(\frac{4}{5} \right) \left(\frac{\sqrt{2}}{2} \right)$$
$$\frac{3\sqrt{2} + 4\sqrt{2}}{10}$$
$$\frac{7\sqrt{2}}{10}$$

$\cos \alpha = 4/5$
 $\sin \alpha = 3/5$
 $\sin \beta = \frac{\sqrt{2}}{2}$
 $\cos \beta = \frac{\sqrt{2}}{2}$

Yet, We Still Have Far To Go

During carpentry class, Gordon LaPradd measures his lumber to perfection to put the finishing touches on his class project.

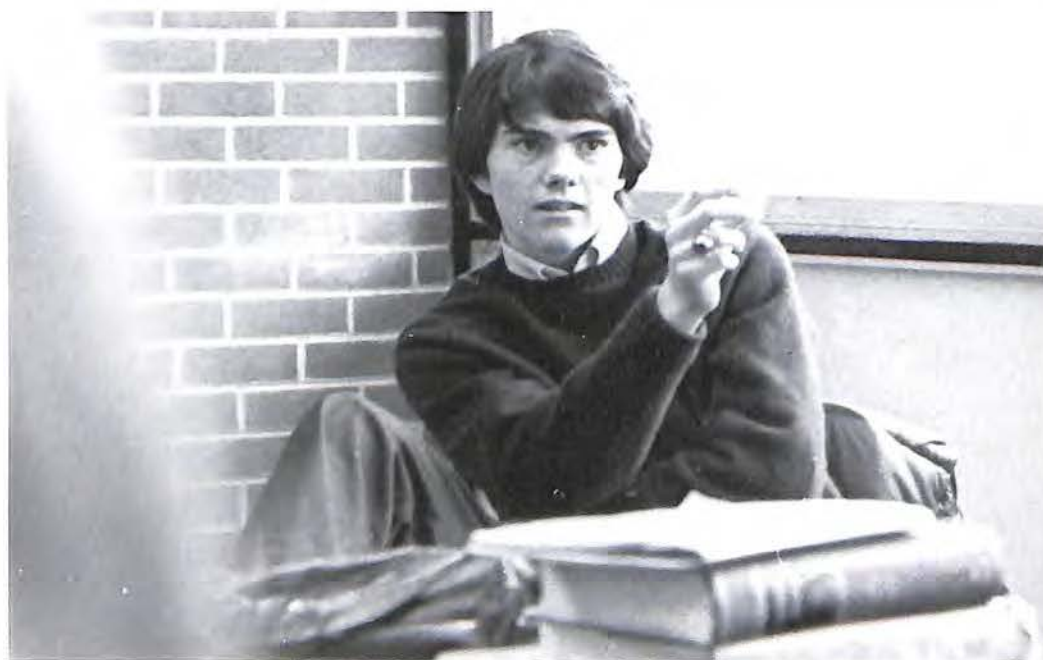

When we were sophomores, graduation day seemed very far away. Its arrival, however, was certain. But as we dissected frogs in biology, calculated square roots in math, and pondered over inch-long vocabulary words in English, our doubts grew.

As juniors, we were elated to find ourselves no longer at the bottom. We felt older and much more mature than those "little" sophomores and cunningly gave them directions from Penn to Parsons by way of the auditorium.

As the year continued, however, we found we still had to struggle through our classes. American history seemed impossible with so many facts to remember and the results of our chemistry experiments were never the same as anyone else's.

As seniors, we felt relief. Two years had passed and only one was left. As we battled with government and concentrated on our college or job applications, graduation, it seemed, would never arrive. First semester exams passed and were followed by research papers, spring fever, and Senior Day.

Finally, June came and graduation day, which had been planned for and anticipated for twelve long years, arrived. As we remembered the past three years at P.H. and looked forward to the following ones, we were a little scared, for suddenly we realized that the responsibilities we had as students were minute in comparison to those ahead of us.

Math takes Harriet Wright's concentration during Mr. Bob Goodman's class as she solves her problems.

Something seems to have attracted Bill Campbell's attention besides his stack of books.

Hurrying to finish their homework before the end of school, Mrs. Velva Wreden's sixth period class does the last of their assignment so they will not have to carry books home over the weekend.

Everyone knows Chris Altizer is known for studying figures, but this may be the first time he has studied his lessons.

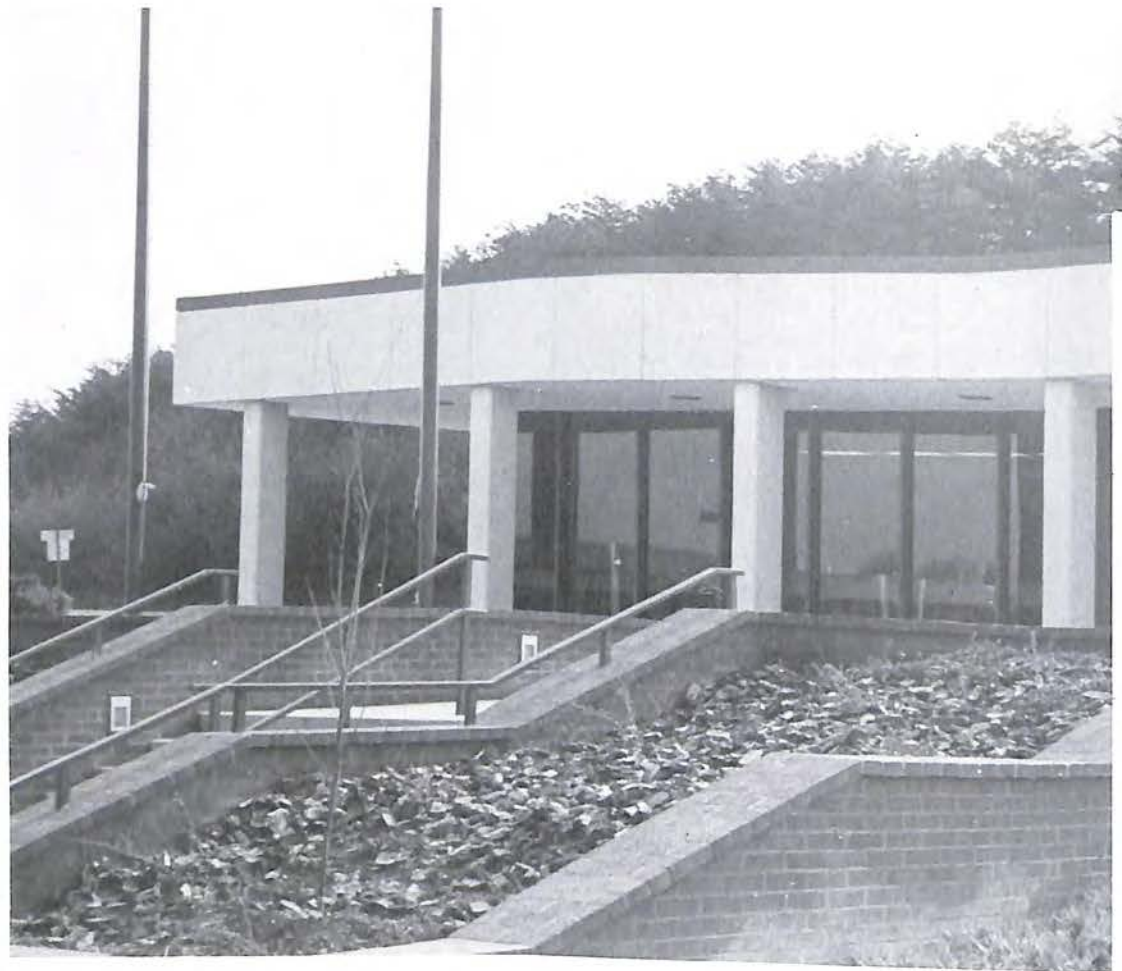

Everyone is familiar with the expression "food for thought" but Elizabeth Allen is carrying it a little to the extreme.

Hoping to prove his brutal strength, David Arnold prepares to karate-chop his desk in half.

“For all
I gave,
I received
ten times more.”

The new main office is a great addition to Patrick Henry's facilities as Mrs. Reid shows by working hard on school-related materials.

The new vocational school makes more classes available to students on the Patrick Henry campus. In auto mechanics class, Michael Wade proves the new school's educational value by lubricating his van with Penzoil.

Three new buildings opened this year on the Patrick Henry campus: the main office building, Gibboney Hall, and Black Auditorium.

Dedicating Gibboney and Black Auditorium was a formal affair with an informal air about it. Who would have been a better speaker than our Theatre Arts and Technology Director, Laban Johnson? Mr. Johnson centered his speech around how the Bible was full of stories about building-up and tearing-down. It was, therefore, fitting that a building used to strengthen and train young minds and a building of the arts be dedicated together.

Dorothy Gibboney has spent her life working in and improving public education. She has been a teacher and principal, and at one time was the only female superintendant in the U.S. Miss Gibboney enabled us to have an adult education program long before it was the trend to "go back to school." At night Gibboney Hall is filled with men and women completing their high school education and fulfilling a dream. Miss Gibboney pointed out that Patrick Henry was a school within a school. Each hall is a school in its own right. Now the school is complete with an auditorium, vocational building, complete library, and a larger cafeteria.

Clara Black has also dedicated her life to helping students in her own special way. Ms. Black brought happiness to hundreds of people with her productions and programs from the Roanoke Valley Children's Theatre. When she was praised for her achievements, she just smiled and said: "For all I gave, I received ten times more."

In its growth, Patrick Henry is also giving its students a chance to grow. With these new explosions of vitality and foreshadowings of things to come, we must dedicate ourselves to the improvement of our attitudes and the attainment of dreams.

The new auditorium provides a place for many activities, including room for the stage band to practice. Cathy Atkinson, Jane Callahan, and Phoebe Beckley move furniture around to help the band prepare for practice.

Wouldn't it be nice if all the other students at P.H. could enjoy their tests as well as the juniors do as they concentrate hard on their SRA tests at the Roanoke Civic Center?

Seniors Lisa Garland, Laurie Nunn, and Ginger Noce tensely await the starting of SAT's.

H and R Block needs to catch up with Sally Williams as she hurries through her math competency test.

Puzzling over the problems on his competency test, Antrey Brown tires to solve them.

CLASS OF '81 GETS BOMBED

Will the class of '81 graduate? After getting bombed with the competency tests this year, this is one question that was running through many underclassmen's minds.

The tests required a variety of skills including math, vocabulary, general information on determining distances on a given map, reading tables to determine taxes, interests, insurance premiums, and a variety of other practical abilities.

Although the tests were advocated as being "something to worry about," the overall reaction from the "baby Patriots" was just the opposite. When Melanie Haner was asked what she thought of the tests, she replied, "they were a big joke. It was stuff I had in the fifth grade!" When asked the same question, Jay Anderson said "They didn't teach me a thing." Debbie Soots, likewise, gave her opinion: "I finished about half an hour before I was supposed to. It was all common sense; just read the directions and you have it." Mark Peake also stated his opinion on the matter: "They were an insult to our intelligence."

The results, published in December, stated Patrick Henry's sophomores scored an average percent of 81 in math and 82 in English.

From these opinions and scores, it seemed certain we could count on the class of '81 to graduate on schedule.

Sophomores were not the only class to be surprised with tests this year, however. The State Department of Education revised their requirements for the SRA's and the juniors took the tests again in November. College-bound seniors also took SAT's and the Achievement Test during the fall.

"If you do something, do it right" must be what this sophomore is thinking as she patiently finishes her test.

Sophomores appear thrilled about being the first class to take the competency tests.

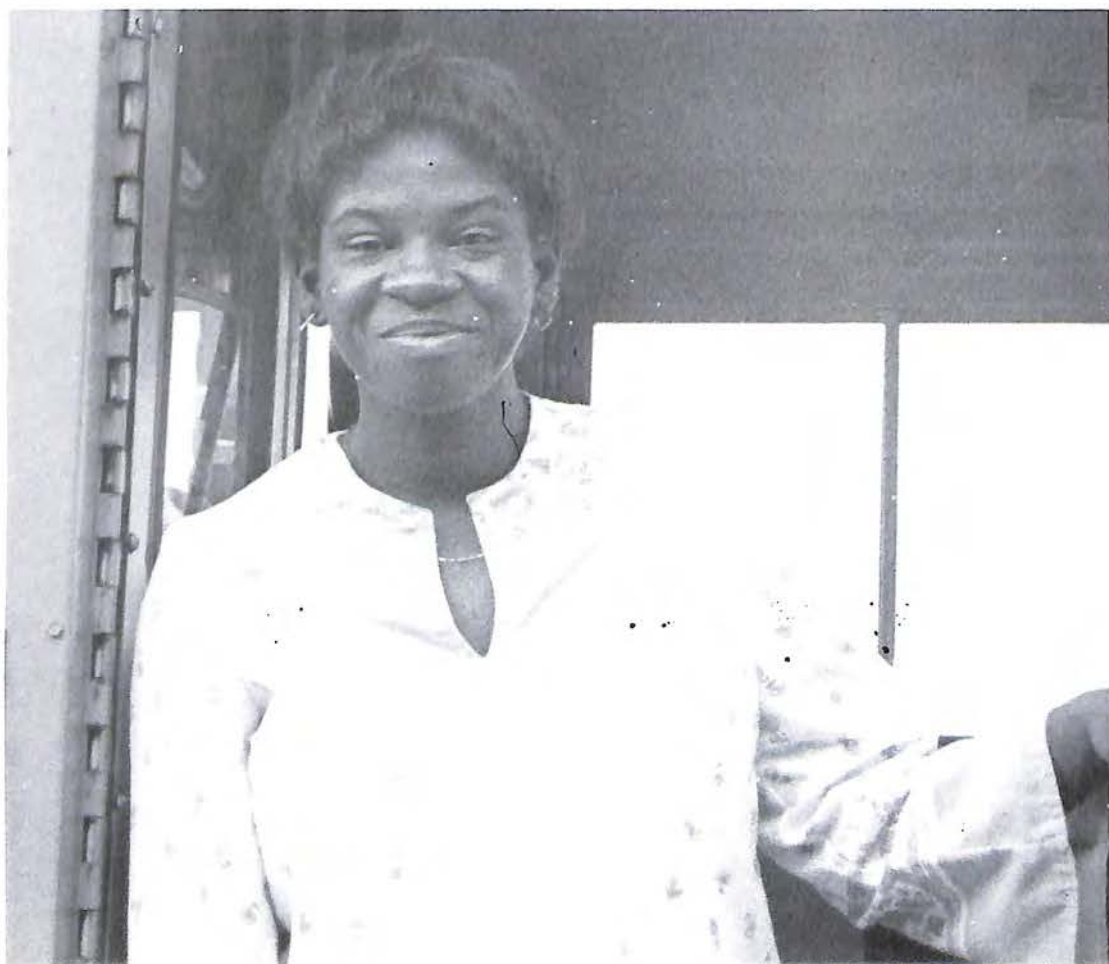

BUS DRIVERS SHOW DEDICATION

Being responsible for number 17 and its occupants is Melvin Anderson Jr.'s top priority.

Students find it difficult at times to get up early enough to catch their bus, but just think how hard it is for the bus drivers!

VO-TECH MOVES IN

While checking the oil and the transmission fluid, John Rucker finds that he's a couple of quarts low.

Trying out the new styles, this cosmetology student contemplates a new hairdo.

After a hard day of welding, these vocational students observe their finished product.

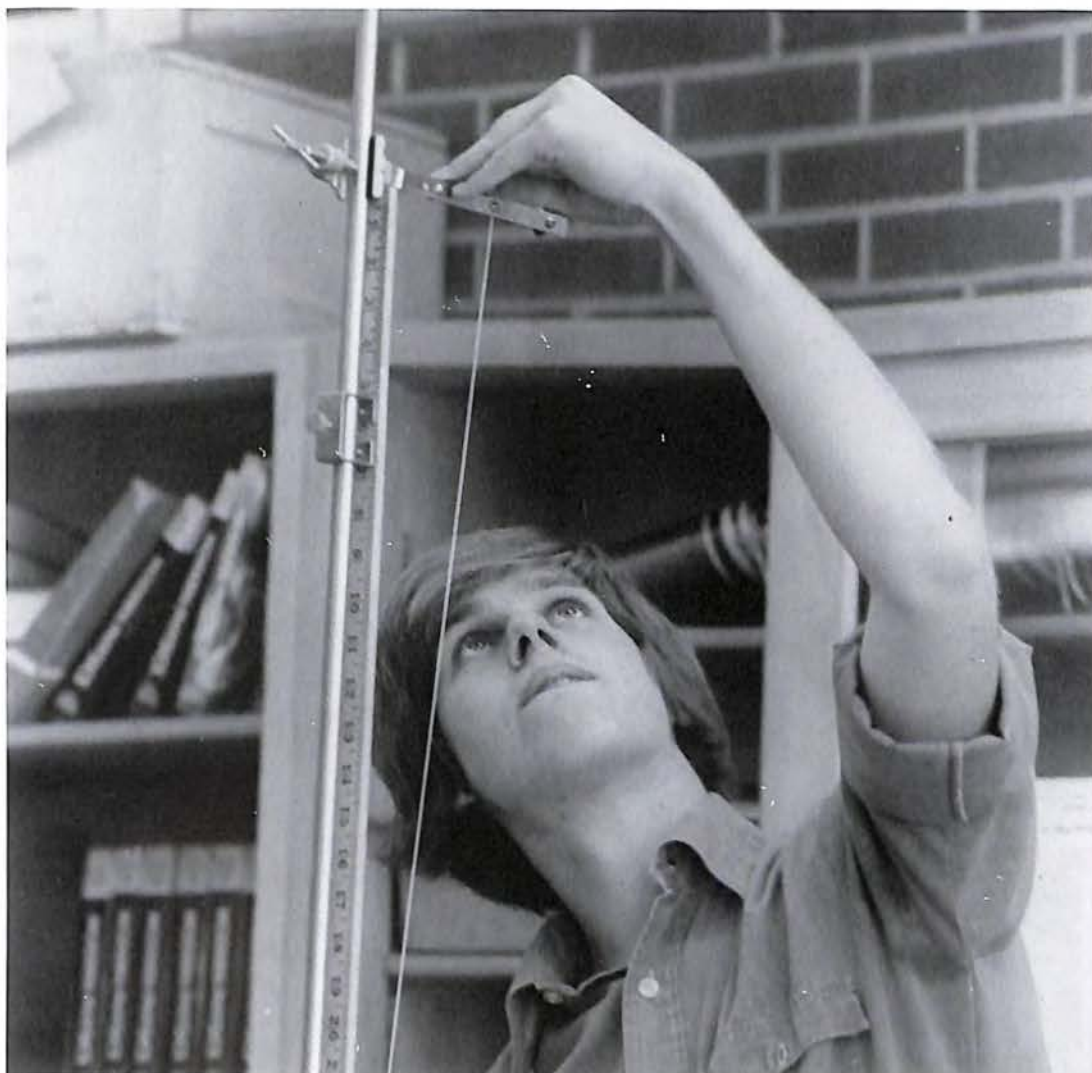

"With animals!" Mary Wellford looks stunned as Mr. Robert Porterfield tells one of his famous stories.

With a questioning look, senior Lisa Yost tries to decide what to say next.

Graduation is on her mind as senior Jobie Myers completes her English assignment.

Senior Marjorie Tenzer does her imitation of the "Coneheads."

Accuracy is of importance as senior Lee Jennings performs his Physics experiment with precision.

Picking and grinning, senior Thomas Johnson wonders if it was really worth it.

Improvements For The Future

In the past, our school has offered its students only a regular high school diploma. In the future, Patrick Henry will have five types of diplomas.

A TNI or Vocational diploma, an Academic diploma, a general diploma, a Business diploma, and a Special Education diploma will be available for future graduating classes. A Certificate of Education will also be given to those students who, after reaching their senior year and meeting all the state requirements for graduation, fail the competency test.

Of course, before anyone may graduate, one must meet all the state requirements for graduation. These are: five credits in English, two in math, two in science, three in Social Studies, and eleven in electives. One must also pass the Minimum Competency test.

The purpose of these new diplomas is to allow the students to pursue the careers they wish. Each diploma is designed to show what the student excelled in during his high school years.

Teachers and students receive the requirements for the Academic and other diplomas from Mr. Jack Graybill during the diploma meeting on November 13, in the library.

Listening attentively to Mr. Jack Graybill describe the new diploma requirements, Mr. William Sumpster stifles a yawn as Mr. Arby Frost looks grim.

Don't worry, Mrs. Barbara Rogers; this is not a test. It only explains the new diplomas P.H. will be offering.

Teachers listen solemnly to the description of the new diploma.

From the expressions of Laura Weaver and Walter Rose, the new requirements for the academic diploma are as easy as pie.

NIGHT TRAIN SHOWS CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Cameras flash. Music blares. You just entered the Twelfth Night Ball. Everyone was "decked-out" for the occasion which seemed only natural since the holidays require the best of everything. Excitement was felt throughout the room. The crowd seemed to have a "merry" time as they danced to the sounds of Night Train.

The time came for the big event. A band composed of some Patrick Henry students, replaced Night Train for a short while in order to give everyone a special performance. The announcement came for the presentation of the court. "Lords" escorted their "ladies" through the archway to their place beside the throne. Tension mounted as the moment drew closer. And then . . . king and queen were announced: Chris Robertson and Ginger Noce.

Soon after the floor show, Night Train began to play again and gave an energetic rendition of "Shout," a popular song from the movie, "Animal House." The crowd seemed to get into the swing of things. As the night passed and the dance ended, everyone agreed that it had been a real "ball."

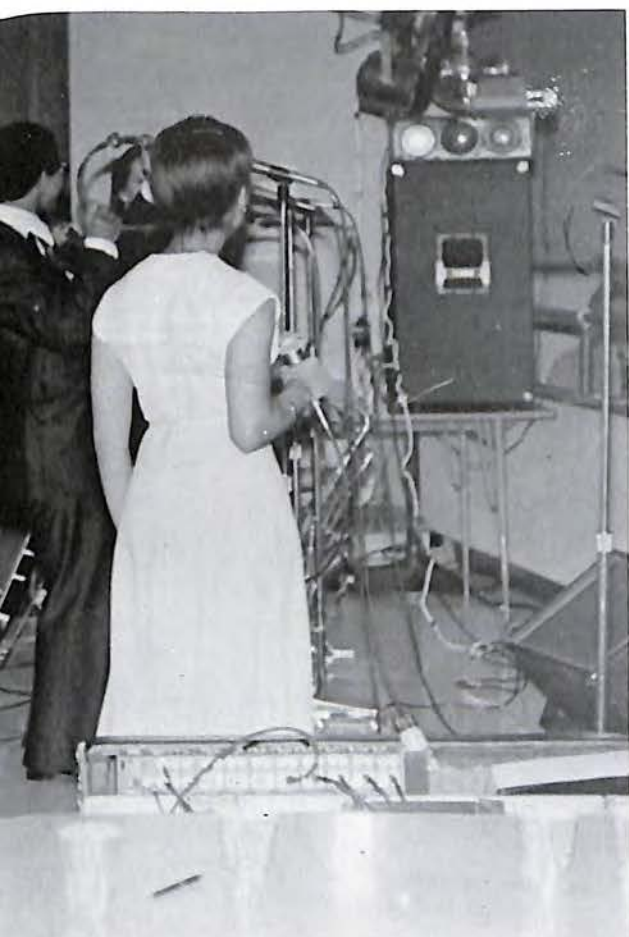

At the "Twelfth Night Ball" Jennifer Shank boogies with her partner.

King and queen of the Christmas court, Chris Robertson and Ginger Noce, stand with prince and princess Steve Holland and Amanda Black.

While performing during the presentation of the Christmas court, Russ Berry marks time for Paul McCusker and Vernon Williams.

At the Christmas dance, Meredith Lovegrove keeps a watchful eye on the other dancers.

After being presented, the 1978 Christmas court gathers around king and queen Chris Robertson and Ginger Noce.

Volleyball Team Wins Regionals

As soon as the ball is served, junior Ginny Tatum springs into action.

This year, as in the past nine, the girls' volleyball team again emerged victorious. Ann Bondurant was the highest scorer with 172 points for the season with Phoebe Beckley next highest with 166 points. Mrs. B.J. Patsel and Coach Woody Deans led the team on to victory at the Northwest Regional Championship. This year was the second consecutive regional win for the team. Virginia doesn't have a state tournament but the girls hope there will be one in the future.

The team started practice in late summer and their games lasted from early September to early November.

Nine seniors left the team this season. They were: Cathy Atkinson, Phoebe Beckley, Ann Bondurant, Sandy Gorge, Mary Hagan, Sara Low, Becky Rice, and Katie Wallace. Next year's team will feel this loss greatly, but there are indications of strong potential which may add yet another championship year to the record.

Some members of the team get a quick pep talk with Coach Woody Deans.

Several members of the volleyball team consulted one another to plan their next cunning play.

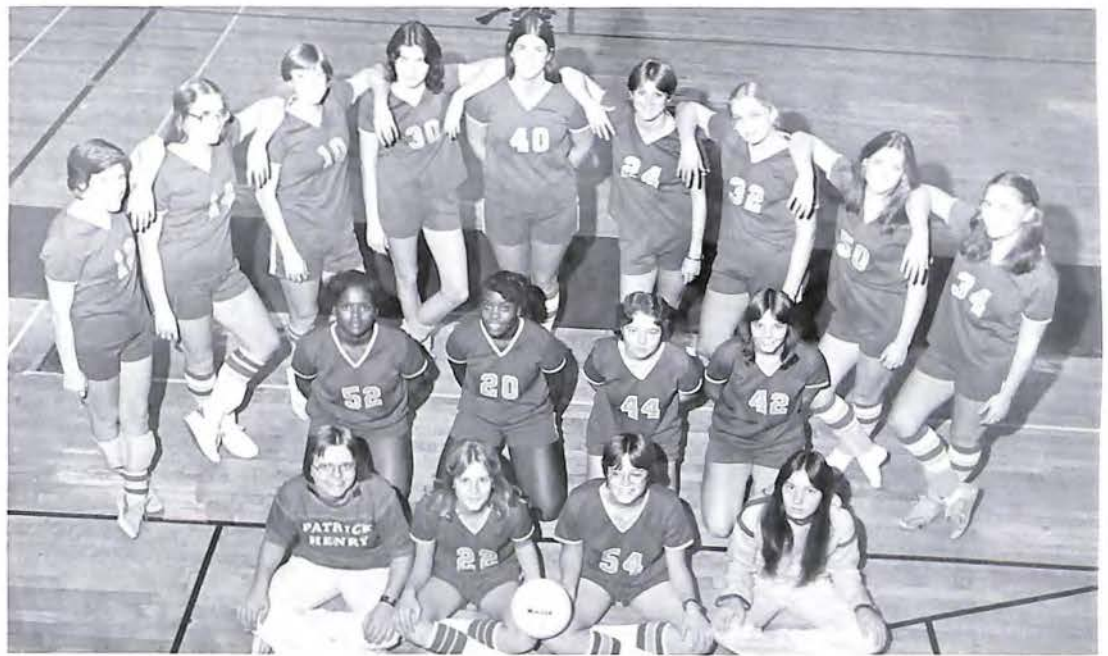

Keeping a sharp eye on the ball, Ann Bondurant displays another one of her dynamite serves.

NEW COACH TACKLES THE JOB

Although football is a fall sport, practice starts in early August and doesn't end until November. This year's football team kicked off the season with a new coach. Coach Willis White led Patrick Henry through a winning season of 6-4. Patrick Henry's victories wouldn't have been possible without the help of Coaches Cannaday, Hareis, Scharnus, and Kasey. Coach Cannaday coached the first junior varsity team P.H. has had in the past ten years. The J.V. team made an excellent showing against such teams as Cave Spring, Pulaski County, Franklin County, and William Fleming. Their games were played on Wednesday afternoons and aside from tying with Fleming, the J.V. team won all of their games. Nearly twenty juniors on the team this year were on at last year and hopefully will return next season to lead P.H. on to the championships.

Shouts of joy and satisfaction go up from spectators and players as the referee signals a "touchdown," made by P.H. against Salem with the aide of Ward Stevens (73) and Robert Wray (77).

The coaches at P.H. truly believe in the saying, "practice makes perfect," and this is proven to the players during one of their practice sessions.

For number 33, Danny Thompson, this was the perfect time to show Salem some fancy footwork that led to a 31-21 victory for P.H.

WINNING IS A NATURAL

The Harlem Globetrotters they may not have been, but the '78-'79 version of the girls' basketball team provided moments of tension and excitement to all of those who attended the games.

The team, coached by Miss Sylvia Wright, had a tremendous turn-around from last year, and worked hard for a season of which to be proud. Fay Gunter and Ginger Noce, the team's captains, were the team's high scorers.

Maria Whitlock and Ann Hoopes, both seniors, played a great part in the team's success as guards, while Barbara Waters, a junior from Maine, also contributed greatly.

The team's hard work and enthusiasm took its toll as the girls averaged 49 points a game while their opponents averaged only 41.

Keeping up his pace, Michael Scales expressed the agony of a devoted runner while Martin Young fell into step.

Refusing to give up, Richard Morrison fought to pass a Fleming runner.

Determination and inspiration helped Teddy Ashby to cross the finish line.

Many people do not realize how much work Cross-Country runners put forth to run on the team. Every day team members ran anywhere from four to eight miles. Team members were: Teddy Ashby, Susan Brady, Mark Fields, Margie Hicks, Ty Linn, Richard Morrison, David Smith, Steve Templeton, Tim Umberger and Martin Young. Steve Templeton and Susan Brady both sustained injuries to their legs and were unable to participate in several meets. Ted Ashby, Richard Morrison, Michael Scales, and David Smith were picked for All-District and Morrison also was selected for All-Metro. Team members worked hard and showed that it takes dedication and determination as well as speed and endurance to make a Cross-Country team.

With that barefoot feeling, Margie Hicks practices in her socks.

Looking ahead, David Smith saw himself crossing the finish line. Who knows? Maybe one day the Olympics?

Discussing the outcome of the meet, Mark Fields and Martin Young had differing opinions.

Struggling to break the grip of his opponent, Willard Terry attempts to flip Fleming's man over.

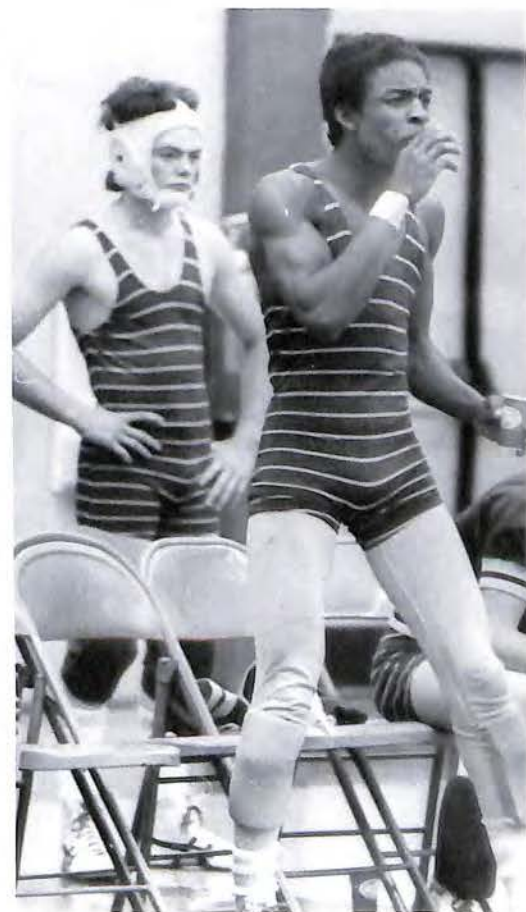

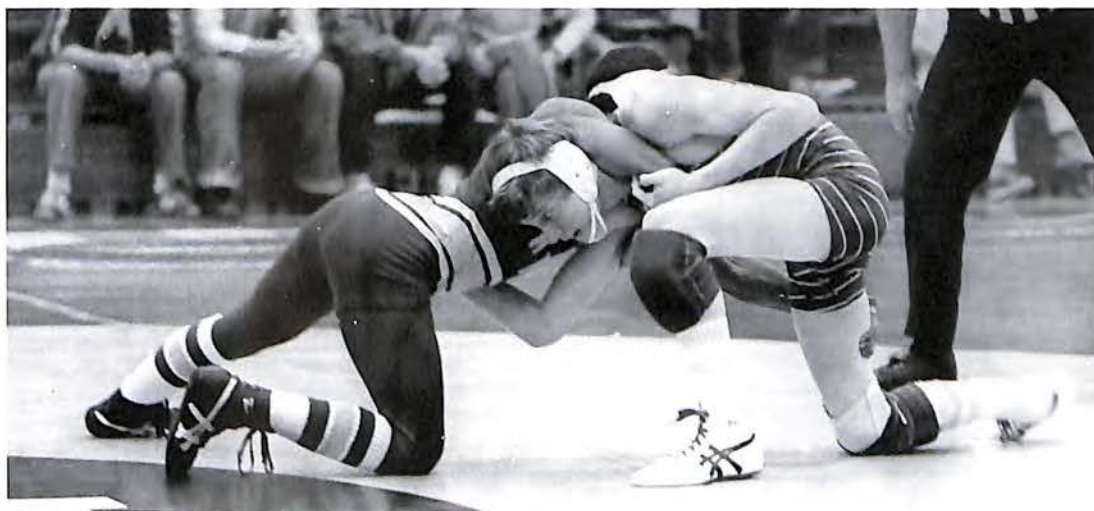

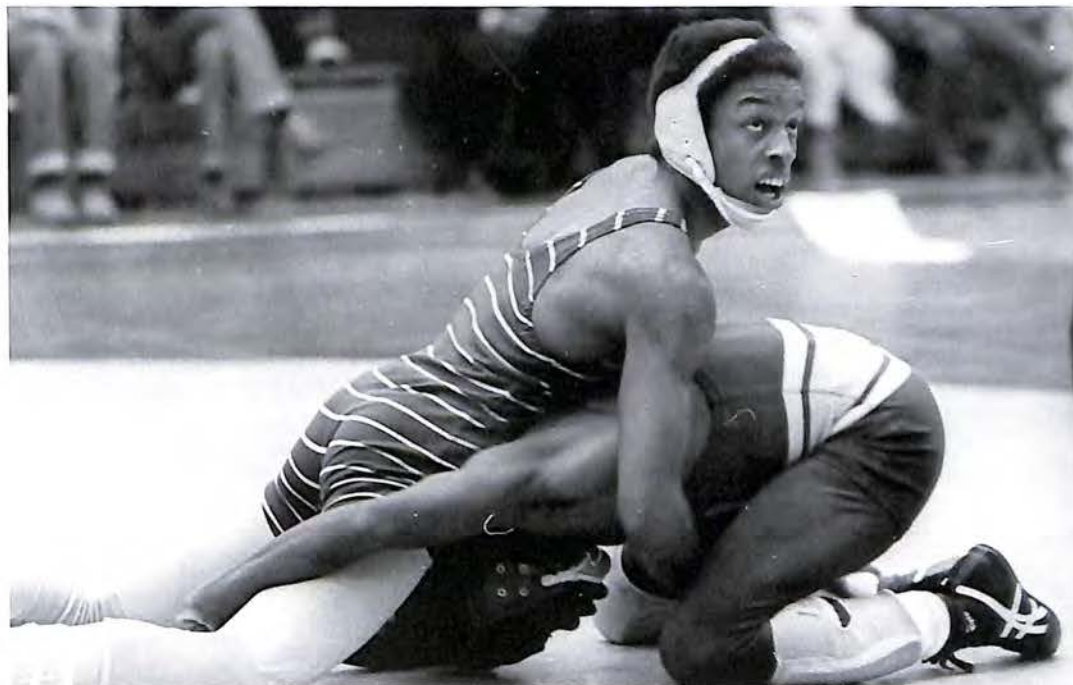

With just the right hold, Kelvin White ties his opponent in knots.

A prematch briefing from Coach Padgett helps Kelvin White to win points for P.H.

Reaching under his opponent, Stefan Hilton goes for a take-down.

Hard work, determination and pride in their personal performance were the three things it took to be a wrestler for Patrick Henry. Before and during the season, the members of the Patriot wrestling team could be found lifting weights and running to keep in shape. Wrestling is composed of both individual and team efforts. Under the direction of Coach Steve Padgett, captains Darryl Jones and Stefan Hilton led the team in wins ending undefeated for the regular season. Hilton and Jones were also Big Orange Tournament champions. This was Hilton's second year in a row as a Big Orange champ. The Patriots shut-out E.C. Glass 61-0. The team finished the year with an excellent record.

If every student at P.H. showed the team spirit of Ed Wilson, P.H. would always come out on top.

Cold Weather Can't Stop Us . . .

Running every day for some people can be monotonous but not for Margie Hicks or Susan Brady.

Sizing up the competition, Ricky Alexander gets ready to participate in the shotput competition.

No, Ricky Alexander is not digging his way to China; he's just participating in the Regional long jump at Heritage High School.

On cold winter afternoons, the indoor track team could be found in the cafeteria, running and running and running. When it was raining or snowing, the runners practiced just like it was any other day. Since P.H. doesn't have the facilities to operate indoor meets, indoor track is run in small field houses at Heritage and V.M.I. The team had a good year, placing second in the district and fifth in the region. Danny Thompson won both the pole vault and high hurdles while Tim Eads won the 600 yard dash. Tim, Danny and Mike Scales all qualified for the state meet.

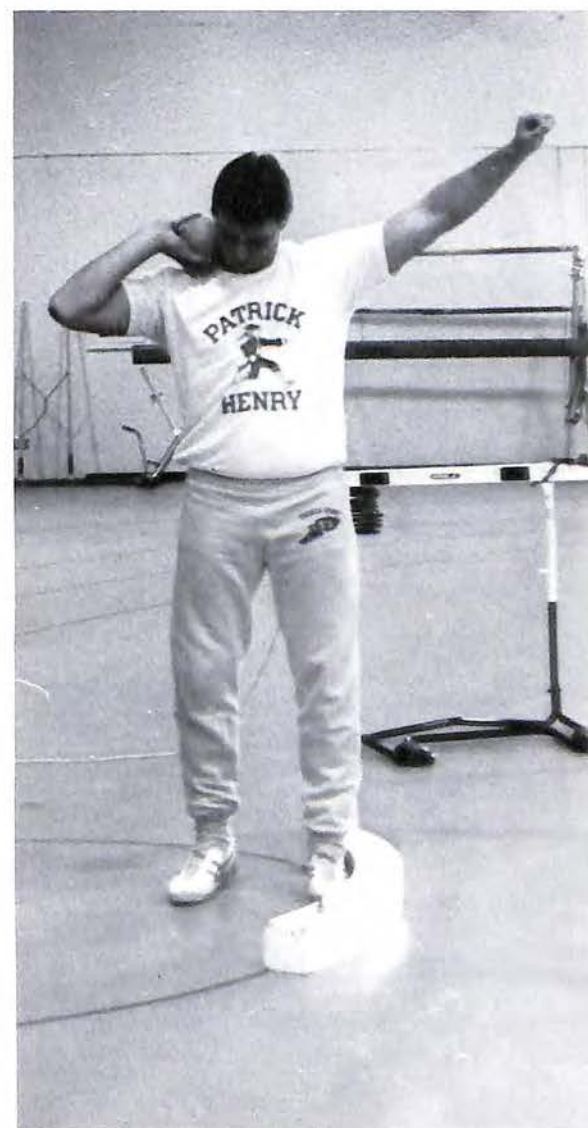

The track team tries not to have any accidents and Pat McGuire follows suit.

It is important for Danny Thompson to have his sights set a little higher than the rest of the team.

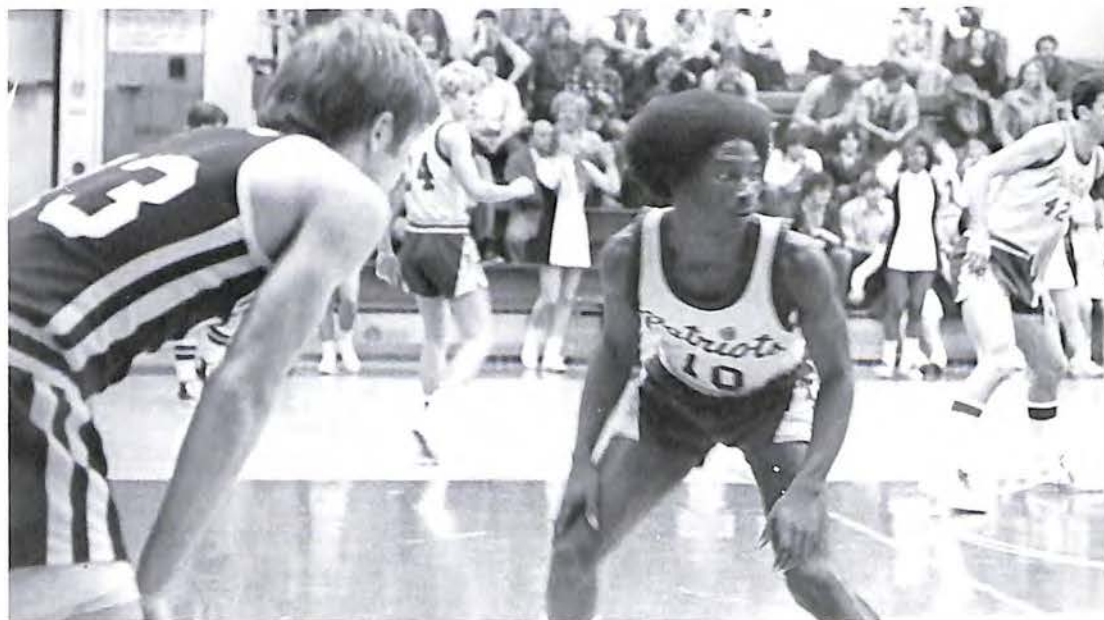

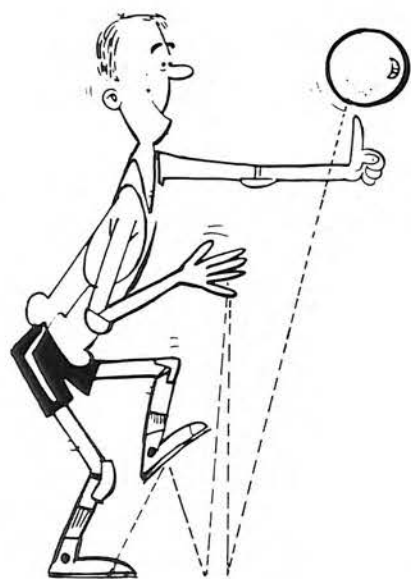

Slowly jogging along the track, Richard Morrison warms up before the big meet.

Front Row: Coach — Mr. Lloyd Woods, Amanda Black, Ann Bondurant, Ted Ashby, Richard Morrison, John Bowen, Melvin Fralin, Randi Smith, Tim Eads, Coach — Mr. Sam Hartman; Second Row: Susan Brady, Jill Cotton, Margie Hicks, Steve Templeton, Mark Fields, Bill McGuire, Thomas Linn, Ricky Alexander, Pat McGuire; Back Row: Michael Scales, Curtis Easley, John Childress, Glenn Phillips, Terry Washington, Meredith Lovegrove, Ingrid Laite, Stacey Baxter.

Concentrating, Glenn Phillips prepares to throw the shot.

Using man-to-man defense, guard Percy Martin keeps his man from getting in on the action.

State, State, State. Coach Kepley reminds his team that every win puts them closer to the top.

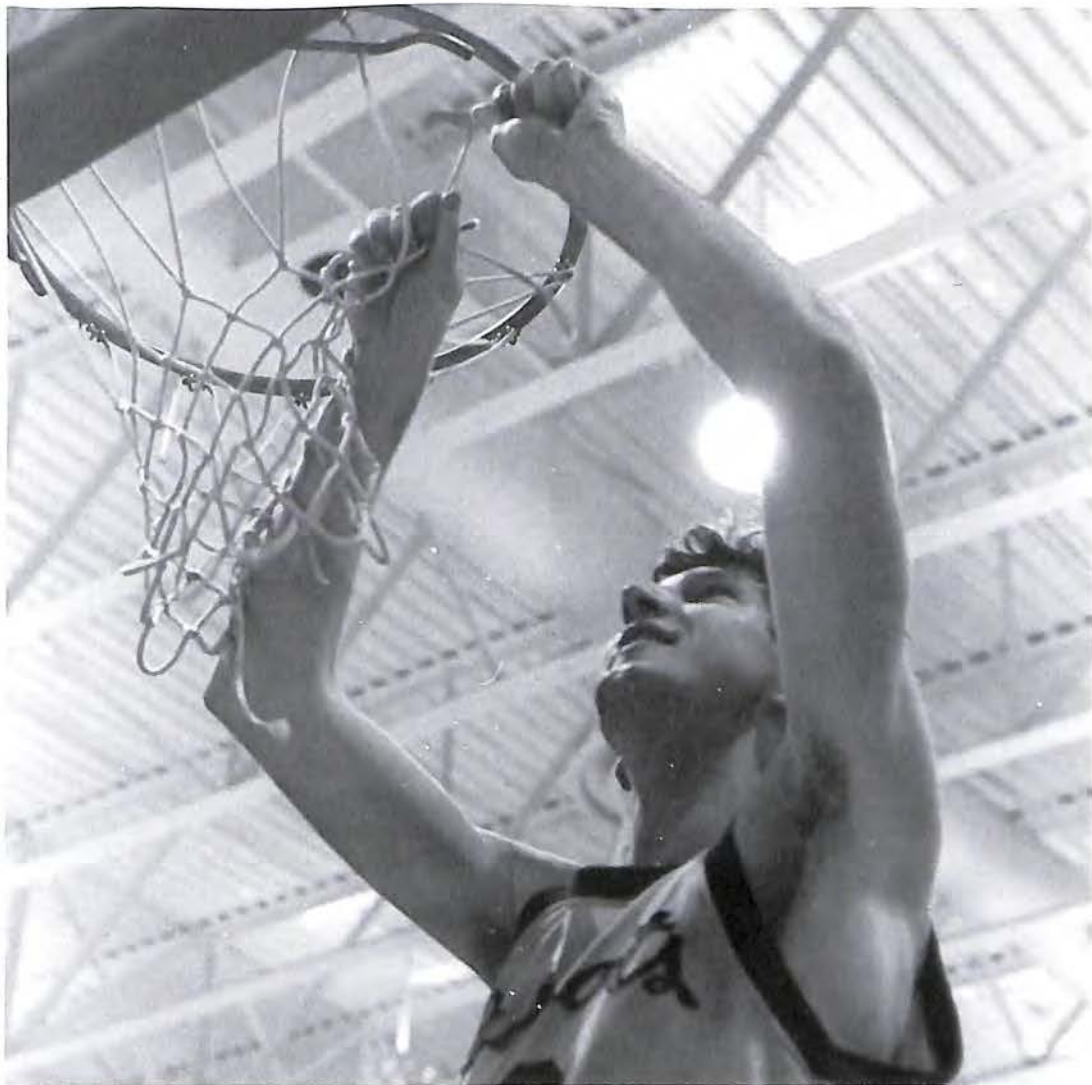

The Jumping Junior: Ricky Wells lives up to his nickname as he leaps up and over E.C. Glass.

No moonshine on the floor. Paul Bowers and Drew Kepley are advised of Franklin County's "rules."

With the Regional title in the bag, Kevin Skelly and Paul Bowers enjoy the thrill of victory with a well-deserved hug.

Short people do have a reason to live as Percy Martin demonstrates as he climbs over the "mountains" on the court and scores two points.

The taste of victory is sweet to Kevin Skelly as he takes a souvenir of the win over Gar-field in the Regional Tournament.

With an impressive win over Gar-field, the Patriots proved once again that they were not to be messed around with.

Many of the Cave Spring players look amazed about P.H. having the ball, but they shouldn't because look who ended up number one.

Only the Great Go to State

Although the Varsity basketball team started the season with some problems, the Patriots bounced back to form a great group with a fantastic record. The Patriots knocked off Franklin County for the District Championship and went on to defeat E.C. Glass and Garfield to become Northwest Regional Champs. Their fighting spirit carried them to the State play-offs where they were narrowly defeated by Maury High School. It was a great year for a great team, and we are proud that they represented Patrick Henry High.

Looking around for some help, David Johnson defends himself and the ball against the oncoming opponent.

Without the refs, Kevin Skelly, Drew Kepley and the Spartans battle for control of the ball.

Trying for another two. Kevin Skelly shoots for a win.

Playing at the E.C. Glass gym seems as easy as playing at home as Paul Bowers demonstrates by outmaneuvering this opponent.

The man, Ricky Wells, is not showing us how to jump; he's showing us how to score!

All the hours of practice Drew Kepley put in paid off when he needed it the most.

UNDEFEATED

3rd YEAR ROANOKE VALLEY
DISTRICT CHAMPS

Stretching-out, Ralph Wright takes a jump shot.

Thinking things over, Teddy Hackley, Tom Young, Anthony Robinson, and Ralph Wright plan their next strategy.

Patrick Henry's Anthony Robinson is bound to get this rebound.

The junior varsity basketball team was like a boulder bounding down a mountain; they couldn't be stopped. With win after win the junior varsity team led Patrick Henry to victory.

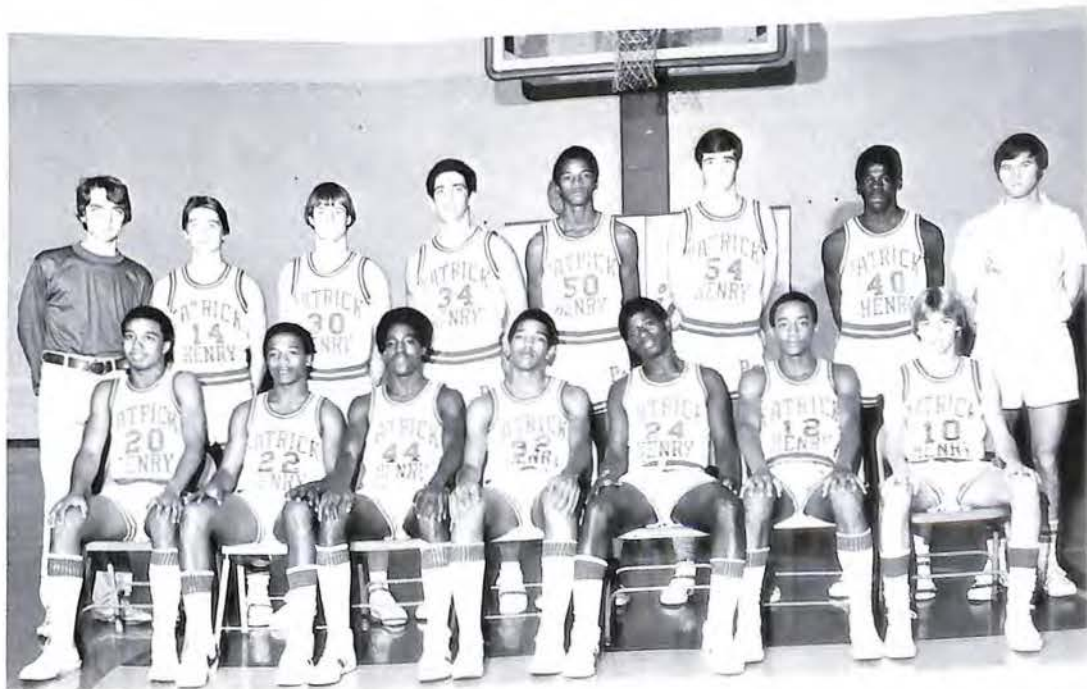

"We run and press a lot and we play exciting basketball," stated Coach Woody Deans. This and the team's year-round practice brought great results. The team averaged seventy-five points per game while their closest opponent averaged only forty-two.

According to Coach Deans, Cave Spring was the team's toughest competition. However, the junior varsity team closed them out 64 to 50. Ralph Wright was the game's high scorer with seventeen points.

Victories like these are what helped the junior varsity team shoot for number one.

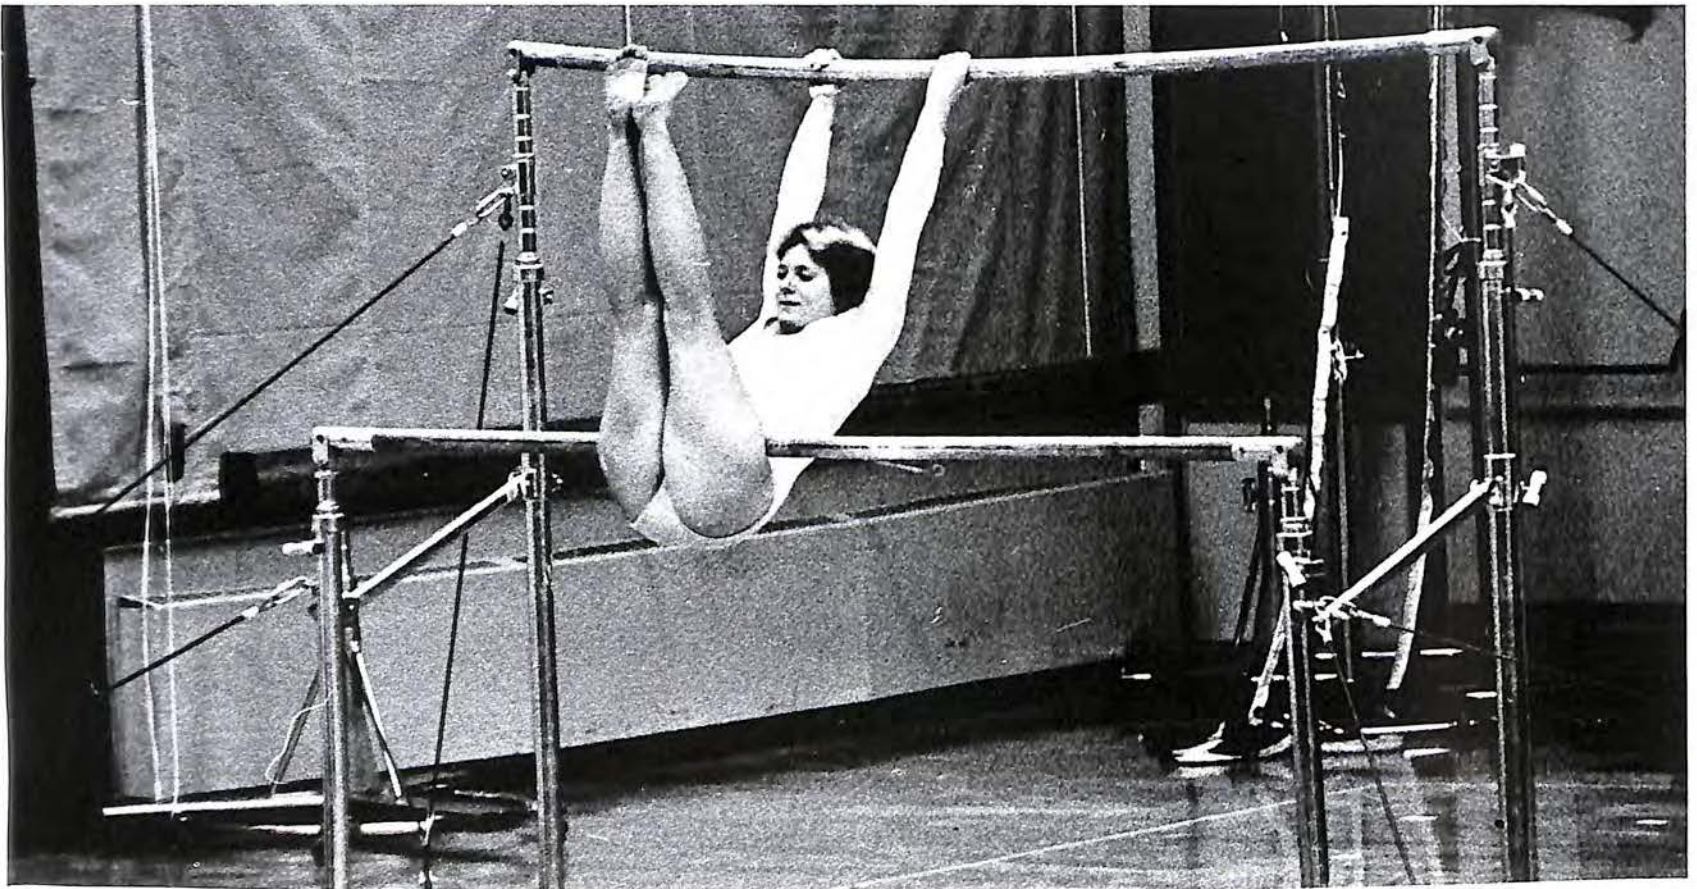

Showing his ability David Talley shoots two.

The Patrick Henry basketball team stood up to Cave Spring like Patrick Henry stood up for his rights.

FANS FLIP FOR GYMNASTIC TEAM

Patriot gymnast Linda Pruett executes a flying hip-circle in her bars routine.

The upper bar of the uneven bars is the perfect spot for Mary Scully to take a break during practice.

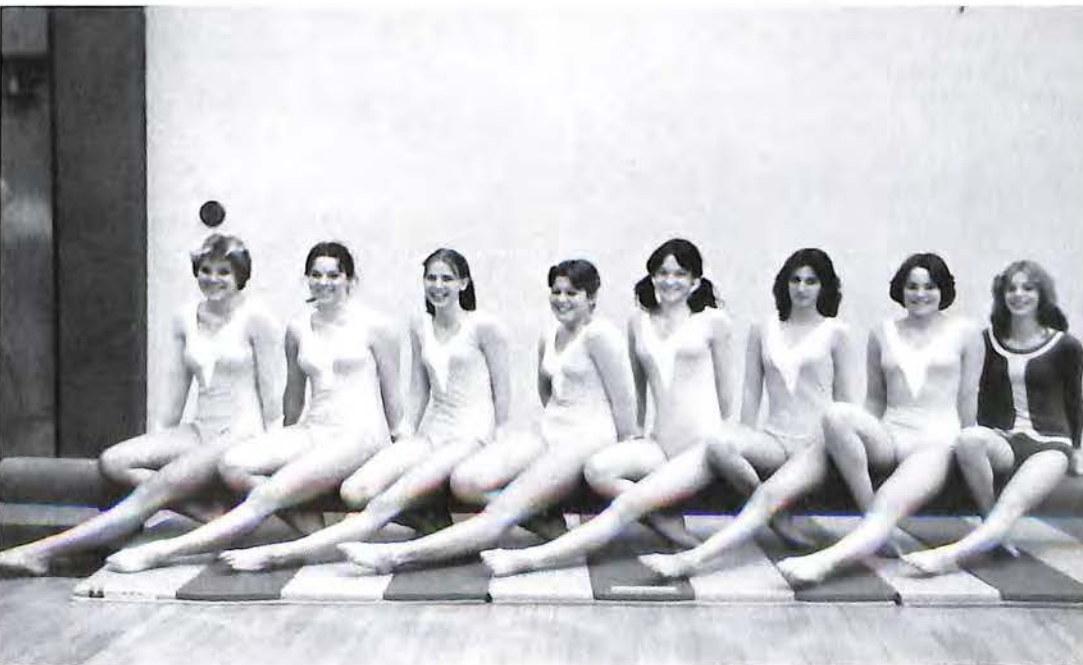

Gathering her energy, Lisa Anthony prepares to make her run of back handsprings across the mats.

Grace and originality are contributing factors in determining scores. Melissa Thurston exhibits both in her floor exercise routine.

Watching a gymnastic meet is different from watching other spectator sports. The fans at a gymnastic meet are silent while the team members are competing. Two of the four events run at the same time. Floor exercise and the uneven bars start the meet and vaulting and the beam close it. Three team members this year competed "all-around": Linda Pruett, Lisa Anthony, and Melissa Thurston each competed in every event. This year's routine setup was different from last year's. Last year each girl had to learn a required routine as well as make up one of her own. This year they decided to drop the mandatory routine. This made the meets shorter and not as tiring on the team members. Although each girl competed for her own scores, it was the team effort that won the meet.

Linda Pruett, Stacy Torian, Melissa Thurston, Lesa Francis, Mary Scully, Debbie Williams, Lisa Anthony, and Lynn McLendon.

GIRLS TENNIS REPRESENTED AT STATE

Led by sophomore Margaret Skelly, the girl's tennis team had an outstanding year.

Under the guidance of Coach Shepherd, the girls finished the year undefeated in the district with a record of 5-0. The girls suffered a disappointing loss to Danville (5-4) in the regionals which put an end to their hopes for a state championship.

Margaret Skelly went on to the state championships individually, taking third overall.

Margaret and Desi Taylor also went to state in doubles, again placing third overall. Although they didn't quite make it to state this year, the team only graduates two girls this year and has high hopes for next year's title.

Being serious is not always easy for Mary Hopkins, but on the court she's all business.

Boy, what a backhand! Deseree Taylor showed the other team who was in command.

With a look of determination, Dee Clement watches to see if her opponent will return the ball.

Watching the ball closely, Martha Branch draws back to smash the ball over the net.

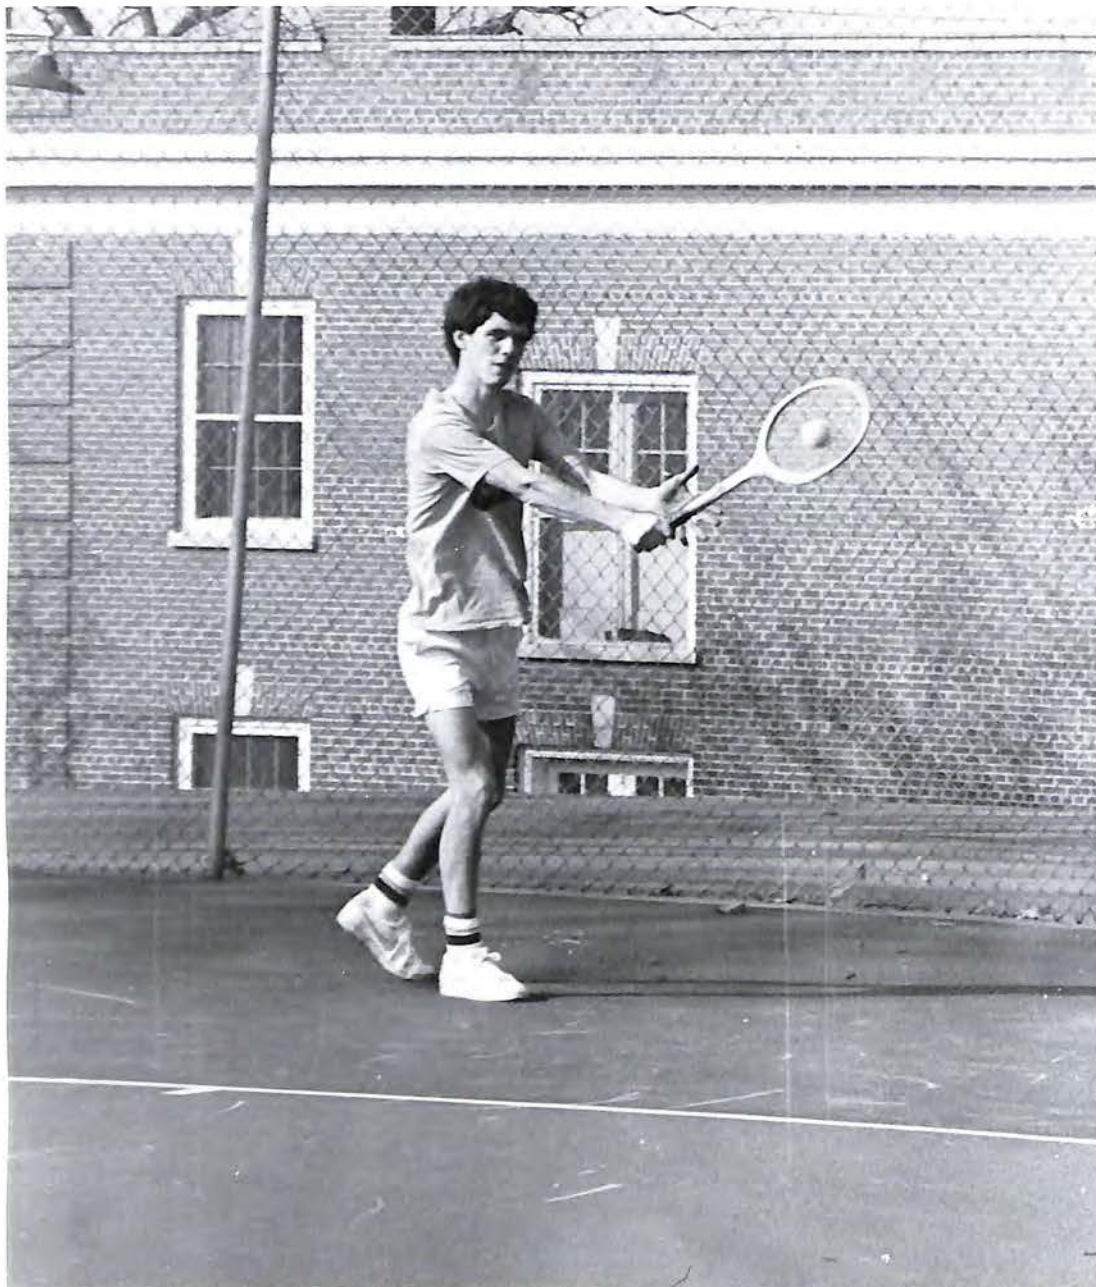

The teams most loyal fan, Mrs. Noel Taylor, watches the match with the team's coach, Miss Shepherd.

Taking a deep breath, Margaret Skelly prepares to backhand a shot from her opponent.

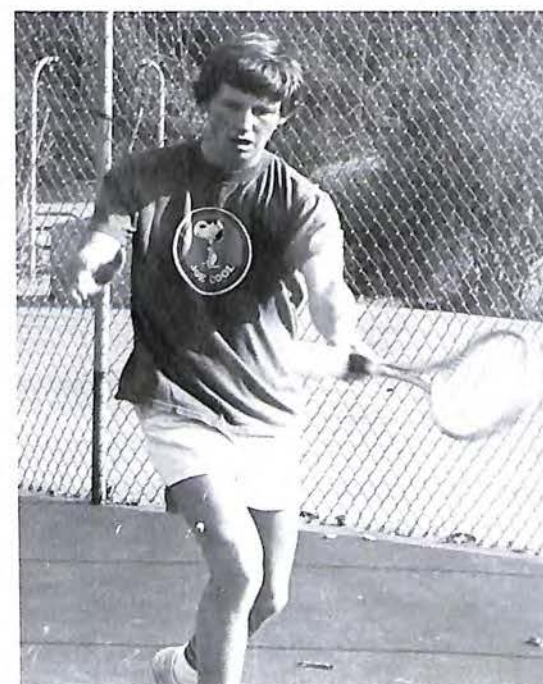

What a smash! No . . . we're talking about tennis, not Angie Fleming.

"How about this coach?" Mike Sawyers asks as he works on his backhand form.

Cool Steve Holland struts on over and with a two-handed backhand demolishes the ball.

Trying to play tennis is an easy sport for Joe Carroll, since he's the number two seeded player for the boys tennis team.

"Hmmm . . . What a nice shot," thinks David McGee.

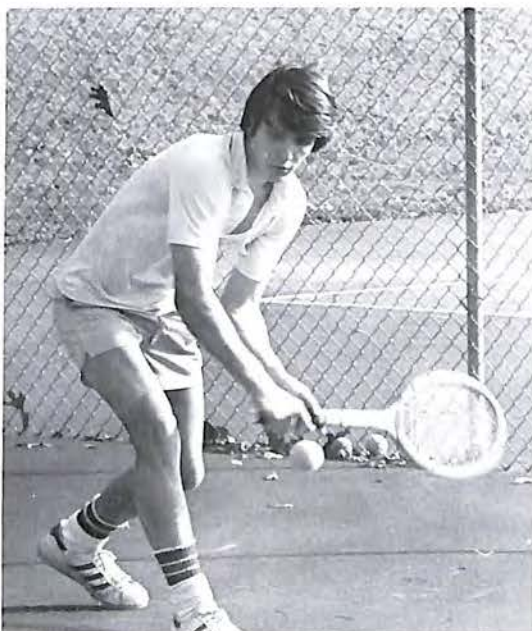

Keeping his eye on the ball and bringing back his racket, Samir Patel prepares to destroy his opponent's volley.

TENNIS GETS "SET" TO WIN

Reaching for the ball, Todd Bramblett demonstrates the true meaning of the cheer, "Stretching-Out."

Long hours of practice has made tennis player David Carroll what he is today: an asset to the tennis team.

You can never stoop too low to conquer your opponent, as Bill McDearman demonstrates.

Track Team Looks Promising

Coming in for the finish, Tim Eads and Michael Scales exert the last of their energy to cross the finish line.

Go get 'em boys! Curtis Easley and Melvin Fralin hop, skip, and jump after their "prey."

On your mark, get set, go! Stacey Baxter is off and showing his ability as he leaves the block.

A "slipped discus" never stops Glenn Phillips from achieving his goal.

“It Takes Sheer Energy”

Concentration blocks out everything for Ginger Noce as she strains for that extra inch.

Working on just the right stance, Linda Pruett tries to improve her throw.

Listening attentively, Amanda Black takes some effective advice from Coach Sylvia Wright about long-distance running.

It's not unusual to see Margie Hicks, Amanda Black, and Susan Brady running around P.H. to keep in shape for track season.

Front Row: Lisa Stott, Marie Haven, Jill Cotton, Margie Hicks, Ann Bondurant, Karen Musgrove. Back Row: Lisa Strong, Susan Brady, Linda Pruett, Jane Moser, Sharon Shears, and Ingrid Laite.

Victory On the Green

Getting into the swing of things, Bill Fisher tries to be a cool dude.

Going for the birdie, David Arnold looks pretty confident, but it is obvious he forgot something. Could it be the ball?

"Well, come on!" Will Angle can't seem to get the ball to cooperate with him today.

BASEBALL SWINGS INTO ACTION

Never doubting his ability, Chip Aker thinks of himself as quite a swinger, but Stuart Sibley has his doubts.

The players must really play as a team as David Willett backs up Kenneth Gee in a major play.

Throwing another strike, Jeff Hundley shows his improvement to his teammates.

ORGANIZ

ACTIONS

STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

Did you ever wonder who sponsored the dances or who called the House of Burgesses meetings, or who took care of the little things that always needed to be done? Well that question could be answered with three letters: The S.G.A. If something needed to be done, the S.G.A. was the one to do it.

Consisting of members from all three classes and working together, they accomplished everything they set out to do and more. Thank you S.G.A.!

THE PATRIOT BAND OF GOLD

The Patriot band had another exciting season this year. Their first half-time show thrilled the expectant fans and filled them with pride for the Patriot Marching Band of Gold. The band has received excellent ratings and awards in competitions that included top bands from around the country. Ratings of superior went not only to the band itself, but to the flag line, rifle line and drum line in the Wake Forest Marching Band Festival. Other trips included the Lynchburg Invitational Classic, various Christmas parades, Vinton Dogwood Festival, Winchester Appleblossom Parade, and a special performance at Disneyworld for Mickey Mouse's birthday in Orlando, Florida. No matter where they were, the band continued to come out on top.

Band members — Amy Sanders, Mike Latsko, Carla Mattingly, Wanda Hancock, Cristy Monasky, Polly Hunley, Miriam Roller, Kelly McCormick, Jeff Harger, Ingrid Laite, Robin Adams, Teri Rice, Mary Wellford, Nancy Bigler, Lynne Godsey, Jeff Willis, Beth Day, Pam Hartman, Linda Mack, Linda Pruett, Becky Markham, Robin Buzby, Desiree Taylor, Kathy Swain, Laura Linn, Sonja Reynolds, Jackie Reynolds, Dannette Wood, Mack Wood, Vereina Lucas, Jenifer Stoneman, Shannon Bare, Gini Shepherd, Kathryn Wade, Ethel Lewis, David Pauley, Kenneth Hurt, Tracey Reynolds, Cynthia Early, Keith Overstreet, Maxie Davis, Kenneth Songer, Michael Peterson, Johnny Murray, Tony Shartt, David Vest, Mike Kelly, Mark Carper, Laurie Smith, Keith Umberger, Tim Callaghan, Nila Long, Kevin Whitlock, Jeff Bower, Robbie Briggs, Mary Lou Knott, Bill Romano, Becky Farmer, Bryan Keith, Larry Brooks, Greg Willis, Kevin Mahaffey, Scott Petty, Kevin Whitmore, Thomas Williams, Bobby Waker, Charles Cox, Steve Lowe, Jonathon Glassner, David Arnold, Frank Cupp, Mark Noell, Richie Tomlinson, Chris Altizer, Lisha Osborne, Ken Hancock, Scott Moore, Billy Altman, Hiwatha Wheeler, Kenneth Paulin, Elliot Clark, Howard Smith, Steve Holland, Brent Sheffler, Brian Hartman, Mike Hall, Brad Allen, Ronnie Haynes, Jeff Poff, Jay Dooley, Jay Noce, Keith Thompson, Darryl Woody, Sarah Levin, Mike Fitzgerald, Greg Hubbard, Robert Kenney, Juliana Nixon, Anita Hoffman.

Drum Majors Stacy Torian and Russ Berry stand at attention.

A proud Patriot uses "pucker power" to "pep-up" players for a victory.

At the front of the band, Dreama Hodges and Susan Thomas prepare for the Salem parade.

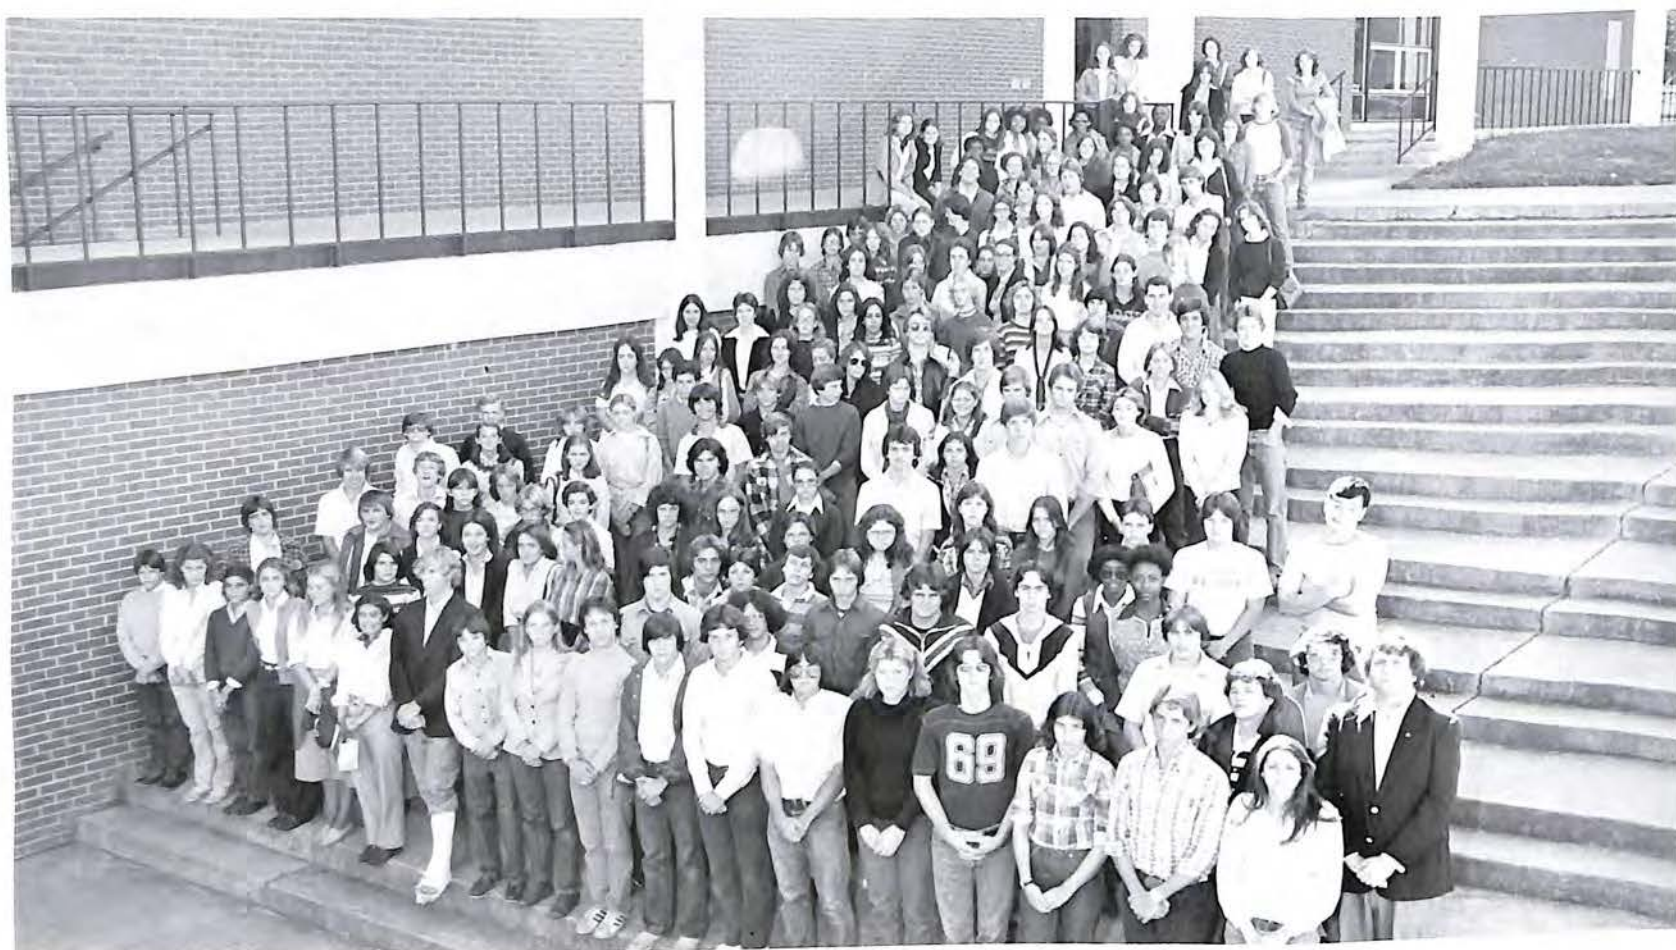

The band bows down for its grand finale.

ORCHESTRA

THE PATRICK HENRY PLAYERS

Advisor — Laban Johnson, president — Jonathan Glassner, vice-president — Robin Everingham, secretary — Stacy Beck, treasurer — Elizabeth Haner.

The Patrick Henry Players, Patrick Henry's Theater club, is the largest club in the school with its 180 students. The "Players" produce at least three major performances a year. The season opened in the fall with Kaufman and Harts' "You Can't Take It With You," which received a grand response.

The spring production, "The Midnight Frolics," was completely student-written and performed with the assistance of the Director of the Theater Arts Department, Mr. Laban Johnson.

This year was a special year for the "Players" because it was the first year they had the new Clara Black Auditorium. This new theater complex was a long-awaited and well-deserved new facility for the "Players."

"Just like you, they long to be close to me." Players' president, Jonathan Glassner, imitates Vic Holiday, a personality well known to all Players and most students.

"You've got to be kidding," says senior Amanda Black when director Laban Johnson plots out his plans for acting warm-ups during practice for the fall performance of "You Can't Take It With You."

Munch Out!!! Player's vice-president Robin Everingham eats hungrily at the Players' banquet.

Members of the Theatre Arts Technology class help Laban Johnson build the set for the fall production.

"Let's get fried" was a familiar statement around Patrick Henry this year, but not for sophomore James Antonelli, for he was the "lucky" guy picked to play the Cave Spring "Knight" which was burned by the Players' dragon during the homecoming parade.

It took six days to create the world, but that wasn't the story for the set of "You Can't Take It With You." It was finished on the day of the first performance.

CREATIVITY: THE ART CLUB

Energy and enthusiasm marked the start of many projects for the sixty-member Art Club for 1978-79. The club did many art and service projects for the school such as painting the trash-cans on campus, making projects to sell in the Modern Foreign Language Carnival, and donating a potted plant to the dedication ceremonies which helped to beautify the school.

Many guest speakers visited the club. Commercial artists, weavers, and water colorists came and shared with the students their own talents in art.

The club has taken field trips to various art shows at Roanoke College and the Art Fair at the Roanoke Civic Center. A trip to Cherry Hill was also planned.

For the members who have been active in the Art Club, certificates, pins, and trophies were awarded at the end of the school year. A final picnic was held in the spring to celebrate another successful year of artistic achievement.

It was the end of a decade and a school year. It was the beginning of a search for a new identity. We were looking for new heroes while questioning the prominence of past ones. Sometimes it all seemed to be a futile effort; at other times it seemed to be "the only way to go." The rewards of hard work and dedication seemed immense during the year. At other times we felt all alone, isolated in the midst of a crowd. Our existence was one of constant beginnings and continuous endings.

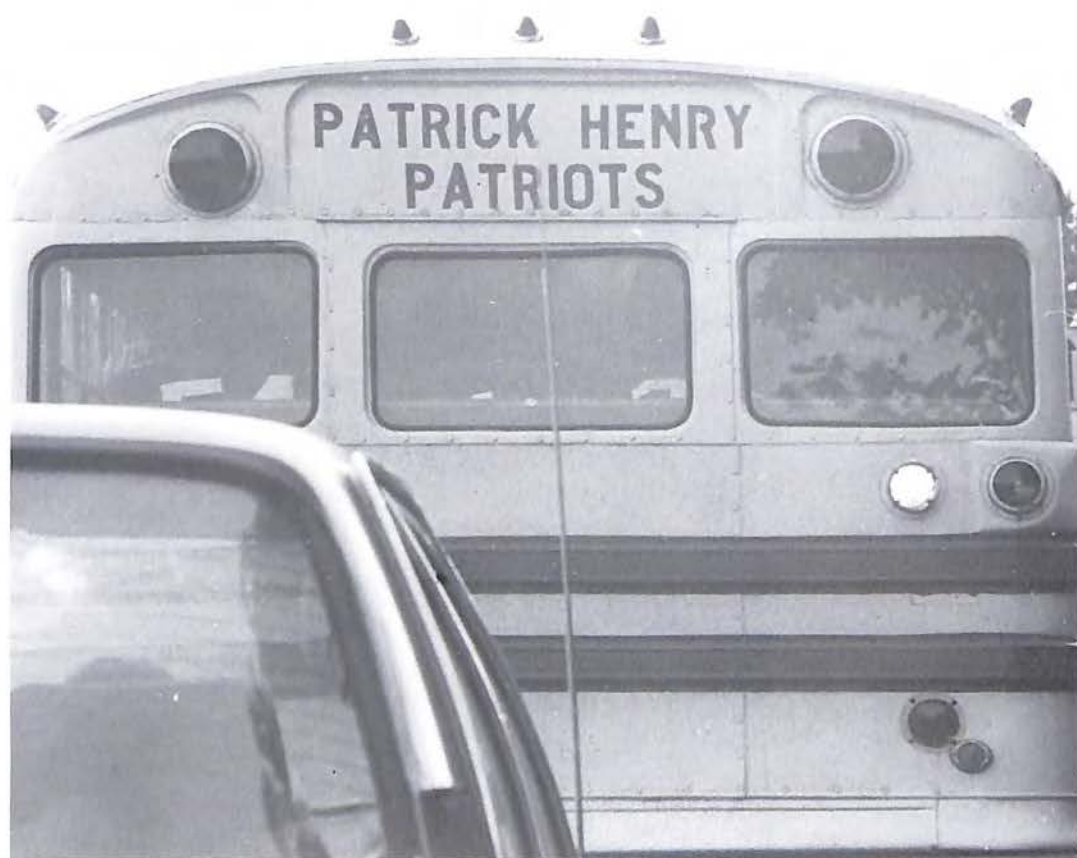

Friends said that they would keep in touch with you, but you knew that they wouldn't. Teachers and other staff members said to come back and see them, but you knew that you wouldn't. Maybe as time journeys on, it won't really matter; but for now, it feels as though you left a part of you behind.

There is a "myth" which states that "all good things must come to an end." This thought must have been conceived by someone who did not have the fortune of looking at us. Yes, us. We, the students of this great school, can see that "all good things must continue." Let it end?

Oh, no. It's the end of a great decade, but the time for beginnings is at hand, also. We are all individuals with many great distances between us at times, but we have a deep, common devotion to Patrick Henry High. The contagiousness of the "purple passion" must continue.

Good-bye, dear '70's; we salute you and the challenges you presented. Hello, sweet '80's and the fulfillment of our dreams. Thank you, Patrick Henry for the best years yet. May the "passion" find no end.
