Becky Kemp . . . leaves Mrs. Richardson a pair of elevator shoes which she badly needs, especially to keep up with her husband. To Mr. Edwards a Ken (barbie doll) so that he can look at himself without melting the mirror. To Mr. Taylor a pet goat to eat up all the paper in the halls. To Mr. Lee a baseball bat to direct the band with.

Debbie Lotts . . . leaves Mrs. Hoal a classful of model students like Mary Frank Saunders, Gary Israel and Tony White so she won't give us all headaches with her gavel and drive herself crazy screaming, begging, and pleading with us to do better work and act like people — not vegetables.

I, also, leave Mrs. Dillard a choir that remembers to bring the music back when they check it out and a second soprano section that is strong enough to carry the melody and a first soprano section as good as the one she had this year. And if she can stand it an alto section that does not talk. I leave the cheerleaders more pep and spirit to push our Matadors on to victory, and bigger and better players to lead us to victory.

To Mrs. Buchanan, I leave a sense of humor, a drop of cheerfulness and a new understanding of teenage girls. To Mr. Steinmetz, I leave an abundance of hall passes reading: "Anybody to Anywhere". To Mr. Taylor, I leave 14 robots that will automatically pick up trash, take mops and buckets to the office, pick up (literally) skipping students and take them to the office and one special robot to supply the art room with rat traps and cheese so that Mrs. Hoal does not have to bring her black cat to school to catch the rats.

Lisa Stanley and Priscilla Guerrant . . . leave Mr. Bean one bottle of fungi remover for his upper lip, and to each teacher at Madison, we leave at least one pair of clackers, and tons of jelly beans to Mrs. Buchanan to sweeten her up.

Jack Brice . . . leaves the entire student body ear plubs to shut out the continual, "May I have your attention, please!" To Mr. Hunter a bloodhound with a sweet tooth to find all the missing cans of candy and a map of all the woods, rocks, and caves around here where it was hidden. Jennie Hazlegrove . . . leaves her "sterilized" drawing to Mrs. Hoal, and all the fun she had doing it to the art classes to follow. To Momma Duffy a portable basketball team complete with court and baskets, and last but not least, to Mr. Mack, another generation of Wheelings to keep the class in complete chaos.

Many ninth grade pupils leave the following:

To Mr. Bean a garden to grow up in. To Mr. Mack a fake mustache to wear at school for the students but that can be taken off before he goes home. To the office a revolving door to accommodate all the bad, bad pupils and more counselors to hassle with them. To Mr. Frye an alarm clock that sets itself early. To Mr. Moorman a classroom so he will keep his students out of the hall, and a baseball bat to keep their mouths shut. To the school a list of prospective custodians so when one leaves they can get another one fast. To Mrs. Sink five more hands to hold the doors closed at lunch. To Mrs. Richardson a job with WDBJ since she enjoys T.V. so much. To the school, an automatic foot wiper and scrapper to scrape some of the red mud from the top of "ole Snob Nob" out of the school.

Christine Trent . . . leaves the faculty the students of James Madison more S-O-U-L and P-O-W-E-R to carry O-N to Mr. Perry a school that starts a little later. To Maggie, less nagging when cleaning up, and a cleaner school to try to keep clean.

Paula New . . . leaves Mrs. McCadden the record, "Silver Threads and Golden Needles", and a thousand sewing machines. To Pam Saul some of my bulging figure as she needs it.

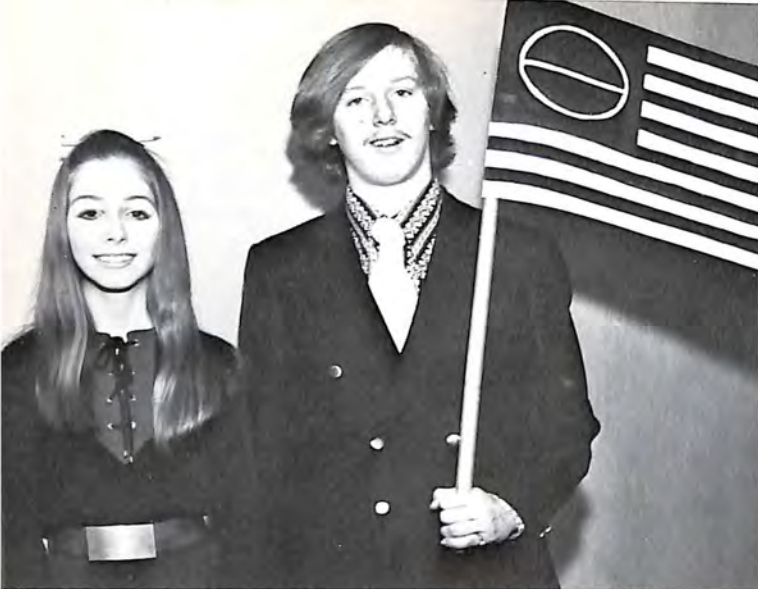

Denise Jones . . . leaves Mr. Richardson her ability to sit in the Guidance Office on her deierere for study hall. Charlene Goode — leaves Mr. Hancock all the problems he would have had if he had caught her in all her antics. To all the teachers, new fresh, unpolluted students for another wild, exciting year at dear ole Madison.

Good-by from the first of the wild Matadors.
