"You may be whatever you resolve to be."

Who is this Stonewall Jackson?

Thomas Jonathan Jackson was a military genius. He won fame as an army general during the American Civil War which took place between our northern and the southern states from 1861-1865. Jackson never lived to see his beloved south lose the war, but the military tactical maneuvers he created during the war are studied in military academies the world over.

Jackson and his men marched four hundred miles, won five battles, defeated three generals, killed or wounded 3,500 men and captured 3,500 more — all in forty days!

It was at the first battle of Bull Run (Manassas, Virginia) that Jackson earned his nickname. There Confederate General Bernard Bee watched Jackson in the midst of his brigade of men giving orders as shotgun shells flew around him. Bee's troops retreated and so General Bee shouted, "Look yonder! There's Jackson standing like a stonewall!"

In what was to be his last battle at Chancellorsville in May of 1862, Jackson made a surprise attack on the Union Army from the back while his good friend General Robert E. Lee was struggling against the same troops three times his strength. What would have been a probable loss for the south became a victory! Sadly enough, later that night a nervous North Carolina unit mistook Jackson's horses for an enemy cavalry. Jackson was shot in the hand and arm and died three days later.

Thomas J. "Stonewall" Jackson was born in what is today Clarksburg, West Virginia on January 21, 1824. (Clarksburg was merely in the western part of Virginia at the time.) When he was three years old his father died leaving the family penniless. Tom was sent to live with various relatives and at the age of six his mother died. The prospects for a good life seemed dim. Tom attended various country schools infrequently but was known to read books when he could get his hands on them.

At the age of eighteen, Tom was struck by the accidental fortune which was to mold his life. A boy from his district, having won a place at West Point (The United States Military Academy in New York), withdrew and there was a vacancy. Tom became determined to go as West Point seemed a glittering opportunity to better himself. After much work and help from his congressman, he got an appointment. At age twenty he arrived for his first day dressed in homemade clothes and he soon became the object of jest by his classmates who called him "The General."

Jackson began at the bottom of his class as he was poorly prepared for college. He almost flunked out his first year but after long hours of extra studying in a class of 72 which dwindled to 60 he stood 17th when he graduated. Later he became a college professor at the Virginia Military Institute (V.M.I.) in Lexington, Virginia.

We should be proud that our school is named for such a great man. "Stonewall" Jackson has proven to us all that where you come from doesn't determine who you can become. He said it best in his own words which can be found engraved at the arch behind his statue at the Virginia Military Institute.

"YOU MAY BE WHATEVER YOU RESOLVE TO BE."

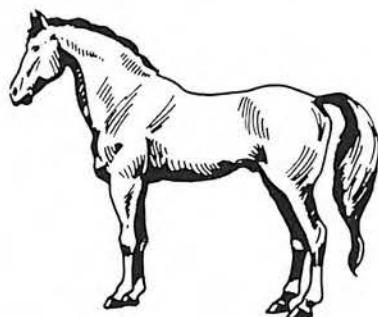

The 1991 Stonewall is dedicated to all the men and women of the armed forces who are currently serving in Operation Desert Storm. Like Stonewall Jackson they are fearless soldiers serving their country.

ARE TO BE

Twenty years from now our memories will begin to fade. Twenty-five years from now the wish for youth will grow stronger. Thirty years from now we'll wish we were thirteen at Jackson for just one more day. Who will you be then? What will your life be like? Will you be proud of your accomplishments? You'll only know the answer to these questions if you ... dare to be.

Learners in a Middle School

Children in grades 6, 7, and 8 are our true adolescents, a joy and perplexity to parents, teachers, and themselves.

Volumes have been written about the difficulty in guiding the adolescent wisely in our culture. Jackson Middle School's opinion however, is this. Children between the ages of twelve and fourteen offer the brightest and most interesting opportunity for teaching of any group. Their minds are wide open and their lives are free from the dull necessities of formal academic labor. It is the time when strict routines of childhood may be left, yet too soon to let them fend for themselves in a large high school. It is the golden age of imagination. This is the time for the study of units of far distant lands, Greek Mythology, of ancient Egyptians, dinosaurs, castles, map making, the Japanese, flowers, birds, African art or carburetors. All that is needed are teachers who can find magic in such topics and lead boldly. At Jackson such teachers exist. We see ourselves as the facilitators of a great production whether it be a game show, a play, a concert, making glass masks, or merely letting mathematics and writing flow into every subject. At Jackson we dare to be and it is our hope that our students will dare to be too.

Learning a Trade

"Getting a Jump on Life"

Every day during 1st and 2nd blocks, (exploratory periods) some very lucky eighth grade Jacksonians get to board a bus and head for Addison Middle School to get hands on activity while exploring the possibilities for a future career. The participants of Exploring Technology at Addison may try their hand at metal working, electronics, building trades, power and transportation, and medical technology.

Our new principal, Mr. Kennedy, came to from neighboring Madison where he served principal for the past three years. Prior to that was Director of Secondary Education for two years in Montgomery County. He has fifteen years teaching experience in the city having taught science, mathematics and physics at Ruffner, Addison and William Fleming. Mr. Kennedy is a graduate of both Roanoke College and Clemson University. We are particularly happy to have him with us this year because he is an alumnus of good ole Jackson Junior High!

Mrs. Felty also attended Jackson and came to us in her first year as an assistant principal from Patrick Henry. She is a graduate of both Longwood College and Radford University. She has twenty-five years of experience teaching students art, humanities, journalism, and English. She has taught all grade levels with the exception of third grade.

Project YES

Project YES, Youth Experiencing Success is a drop out prevention program targeted toward 6th and 9th grade students throughout Roanoke City Schools. The program contains instructional and counseling components that help students adjust to their new school. During the year the students participate in small group enrichment activities, tutorial sessions, career awareness field trips and out of town excursions that facilitate positive social integration. Pictured is YES counselor Natalie Wright with some sixth grade students.

Extended Day

Extended Day is an after school tutorial program open to sixth graders. Students have the opportunity to get help with homework and receive extra instruction in language arts, mathematics and computer literacy. This year the students also became members of the YWCA and had the chance to participate in swimming. The program is funded by Chapter 1. Mrs. Robertson directed the program at Jackson with the help of Mrs. Trogon, Mrs. Simmons and Mrs. Leonard.

Sometime in distant
years when we are grown,
Gray-haired and old,
whatever be our lot,
We shall desire to see
again the spot
Which, whatsoever we have been or done
or to what distant lands
we may have gone,
Through all the years will
ne'er have been forgot.
