Lewis Keeps Up-to-the-Minute,

Yet Holds Fads in Right Proportions.

Linking originality with just the right amount of taste and conformity, Lewis students emerged in 1964-65 with a parcel of new fads and fresh concepts. They were filled with eagerness for current young interests and the spirit of adventure needed for establishing those interests. A warm, congenial relationship resulted within the school, the youthful training ground for confirming human possibilities, and students matured in the midst of intellectual offerings and the "latest things."

1964-65 Has New Frontier and Broadeneo

Familiar, everyday sights were spiced with occasional slight deviations from the general order of things to give life at Lewis the element of enthusiasm. Everyone was involved in the essential project of learning, supplemented by such essential details as absentee notices and hall signs. Now and then, breaks in the routine reminded students of the special projects and programs, as well as regular classes, that consumed such a large portion of their time, and suggested to them why scholarship never seemed dull.

Outlook in All Phases of School Activity.

Non-Stop Students Energetically Launch

Varied Yearly Program of Endless Projects.

Teenagers constantly found themselves happily caught up in the active position of promoting and participating in school connected events. There were always the enormous signs proclaiming upcoming sports features to be painted and hung, clubs or squads to meet with for important activities, worthy causes to join- -hundreds of items clamoring for attention. Lewis students seldom experienced idle moments, for few could resist the swift pace of "something to do"-creditable things-accompanied by a zesty air of activity.

Sports Action and Athletic Team Spirit Hold

Prominent Positions in School Life Year-Round.

Even bad weather had little influence on A.L.'s rigorous schedule of athletic events. As a school with a natural inclination toward excellence in sports, its had no trouble initiating students into a wide field of grueling competitions. The reaction of the student body was equally gratifying; pride, spirit, and support for the victorious Wolverines were displayed in abundance at pep rallies and at the events. Successful seasons became logical and regular occurrences, and the exultant students cheered on their teams, congratulating one another with a confident, "I knew we could do it!"

Nine months, six report periods, and two semester examinations sounded far distant from September 2, 1964, as students began to file into homerooms on the first day of school. The number of hours seemed inconceivable and the number of pages to be covered, even more so. But the days passed surprisingly rapidly, as numerous chapters were covered and students found that they knew considerably more than they had the previous summer. With persistent effort, assignments were somehow always completed, until eventually no work remained to be done and the general conclusion was that it had not been so bad, after all.

Growing Knowledge, Passing Days, Textbooks Draw to a Close and ## Make Coming Year's End Evident as Spring Lures Students Out- of-Doors.

Faculty Members Have Daily Mountain to Move as They Deal With Growing Young Minds.

Working on the basis that a student can be taught nothing, but must learn anything he hopes to master, instructors nevertheless fulfilled an essential and demanding role as they directed daily class sessions. Young minds needed intelligent guidance, a discerning comprehension that emphasized important ideas and brought about understanding. A teacher's work was never done; menial tasks outside the classroom were part of his responsibilities. Still, time was reserved for students' problems, for lighthearted laughter with fellow faculty members over the events of the day, for the further enrichment of his own mind.

Patterson Effectively Fulfills Demanding Capacities at Andrew Lewis, Is Enduring Friend to All.

[^0]In 1959 an energetic young man joined the faculty at Andrew Lewis as a teacher in the science department. His affable manner recommended itself to students and faculty alike, as he displayed an active interest in academic and extracurricula life. Despite his busy schedule, he freely gave of his time and energy to those who requested or needed them. Two years later, in 1961, he became an assistant principal.
Every year since then, the ambitious young man has fulfilled a vital role in the functioning of the school. In 1962 he was a member of the guidance committee, aiding students in preparing their high-school curricula in accordance with interests and abilities. He was able to supply invaluable information concerning college admittance, entrance tests, and the financing of higher education. Beginning in 1963, as adviser to the S.C.A., he managed to maintain his close relationship to the issues and concerns of the student body as he worked with Student Council members.
He encouraged and gave much assistance to the founding of the Key Club, an active student service organization. This year as Director of Athletics, he worked diligently helping to set up schedules for athletic events, and establish policies and regulations regarding school sports.
This ambitious, energetic young man who has given so much of himself to Andrew Lewis and to its students, is Robert Patterson.

Teachers and students at Andrew Lewis, in daily contact with Mr. Patterson, were greeted by his warm smile and friendly "Hi."

Hurrying along with his characteristic vigorous stride, Mr. Patterson was often seen in the halls at Lewis co-ordinating student activities.

One of the most easily recognized voices at Andrew Lewis was that of Mr. Pafterson who twice daily read announcements concerning various activities over the intercom.

The 1964-65 term at Andrew Lewis was characterized by changes. Everyone, from the eighth grade to the senior class, was affected by the changes and they occurred in every phase of Lewis life.

The first few weeks were spent adjusting to differences in daily class schedules. There was a somewhat complicated new system of lunch periods which abandoned the unnecessary half hour study hall students had to cope with in previous years; also, the school day was lengthened to accommodate an extra class period. Homerooms were arranged on halls according to subject matter rather than grouping by class level. The major factor in all these changes was the appointment of a new principal, Mr. Walter A. Hunt.

However, the changes were not confined to schedules and personnel; they also took place in the building itself. The home economics department was remodeled; new guidance and attendance offices were constructed; seniors occupied a single large homeroom and numerous little yellow "Do not Enter Class in Session" signs appeared in the halls. Almost 1700 students, a larger number than Andrew Lewis had seen in recent years, crowded the halls and classrooms.

Although students required time to adjust the newly initiated procedures and circumstances, they soon became accustomed and readily accepted them. The 1965 PIONEER has attempted to picture Andrew Lewis -both changes and traditions. The PIONEER underwent a major change, too; growing from the customary high school size to the collegiate edition.

Academics

Spiced with newness, the academic curricula at Lewis were broadened to include changes in commercial, academic, and general divisions. Thirteen of the seventy-two faculty members were newly introduced. Comparative government was added to the history department at mid-term. An increased percentage of the students took classes at the Educational Center. Continued effort was made toward a more progressive academic program.

Being at the helm of a school embracing 1700 vibrant young lives is no easy task; but Mr. Walter A. Hunt, Andrew Lewis' new principal, plunged into his job with determination, enthusiasm, and a great concern for the well-being of the entire student body.

A native of Franklin County, Mr. Hunt was graduated from the College of William and Mary with a B.S. in mathematics. He received his Master's Degree in 1957.

Backing Mr. Hunt in his new job were assistant principals, Mr. Robert Patterson and Mr. E. E. Barnett. Mr. Barnett was in charge of student attendance and discipline while Mr. Patterson served as director of student activities. Both aided Mr . Hunt in familiarizing himself with the students and the operation of the school.

Senior civics classes held a mock election in November parallel to the national one, with local campaign leaders boosting their favorite candidates.

World history, a required social studies course, enabled students to see the similarities and differences between civilizations of the past and those of today.

Increased Awareness of the World.

Students gained a new awareness of the world around them through various history and geography courses. This year in particular students were given the opportunity to witness history in the

The deaths of Sir Winston Churchill and former President Hoover, the resignation of Premier Khrushchev, and the appearance of little green men in many areas were also current news. making events.
Eighth graders received a foundation for later study through their course in world geography. By learning about the physical aspects of the world they were better able to understand historical occurrences. World history, a predominantly freshman course, followed chronological happenings commencing with the dawn of civilization and gradually progressing to the world of today.
American History students followed elections close ly and were encouraged to bring newspaper articles and campaign posters in support of their favorite candidates. In their study of the constitution. Mrs. Bowman's classes experimented with a type of pro grammed study.
Senior civics classes stressed current events and discussions of political news. In addition to study ing American and Virginia government, students spent six-weeks becoming familiar with the Commu nistic theory of government.

Students became acutely aware of the effects of past events on present-day occurrences and were made to realize the importance of our arowina of forts to create the ideal government

Laboratory Experiments Convince Science

Sharon Hash (one of two ambitious girls taking senior physics) assisted by George Slusher, doggedly refused to be confounded by the mysteries held in that vast realm of science.

Seniors Margaret LaPrad and Gloria Quesenberry concentrated on a temperature experiment in ninth grade science. Many seniors chose this course as a second lab science to complete updated academic requirements.

Dotty Martin grimaced in distaste as lab partner Sandra McCown probed deeper into the anatomy of a fish.

Students That "Seeing Is Believing."

Science courses transported the students at A.L. into a field of advances and evolving changes. New textbooks, equipment, and techniques updated both classroom and laboratory procedures.
Eighth graders were introduced into the science department through a general course that included broad coverage of such fields as geology, astronomy, and human biology. In this way interest could be developed as a helpful guide in selecting lab sciences for study in later years.
Ninth grade science was confined to two main branches-chemistry and physics. This course employed more extensive laboratory practice, serving as a basis for advanced chemistry and physics.
Delving into the complex mysteries concerning life, biology students began with the basic cell and advanced through the animal and plant kingdoms. Human biology and genetics presented a detailed explanation of the functioning of body systems and the science of heredity.
Students became familiar with a new concept of science as they studied chemistry. This concept was the use of mathematics in relationship to experimental findings. Frequent laboratory experimenting showed the procedures of famous scientists could be duplicated.
A new textbook. PSSC Physics, was used in physics classes with its accompanying workbook. Lab work included everything from making soda-straw balances to observing wave motion in a ripple tank. Every science student was required to complete projects, many of which were entered in the school and county science fairs.

MISS ANN THOMASON,
Public Speaking: English, Drama; B.A., R.P.I.: M.A. V.P.I.

Andrew Lewis possessed a talented '64-'65 student body, judging from the sizes of the drama, art, choir, and band departments. Skill and interest were poured into creative activities throughout the year.
The drama casts practiced continually to present superior performances for their audiences. Miss Thomason could be heard at any rehearsal shouting, "What's wrong with you? Project, project!" The casts soon learned to speak for the benefit of those in the rear of the balcony as well as those occupying front row seats. Productions included John Brown's Body and Party of the Candidates. The art' room proved to be a busy, creative place; the shelves were cluttered and the hum of talent at work was unmistakable. One hundred-fifty art students found themselves swept into the soulsatisfying work of trying to create a masterpiece. They worked with every style, subject, and medium; much of their work was put on display at local exhibitions and galleries.
It was early to rise and late to bed for choir members this year as they endeavored to maintain their continued excellence. Each section rehearsed at eight o'clock in the morning at least once a week; exhausting concerts kept the singers occupied long into the night. Concerts included music ranging from South Pacific to The Creation. The new choir director, Mr. Harris, devoted his time to perfecting the talents of members of the choirs, A Cappella, Mixed, and Eighth Grade.
Everyone at A.L. took pride in the marked improvement and fine quality of band music. Sore feet and tired lungs accompanied the frequent practice sessions. Ambitious Mr. Farley maintained diligent practice and study among the students of the senior band and the junior band class. Three shining basses, valued at three thousand dollars, and new French Horns were purchased. In the spring a fourteen piece dance orchestra was assembled, to be ready for performance by fall of 1965 .
Four fine arts classes featuring such a varied program of study proved to be an invaluable asset in aiding students to receive a well-rounded education.

Regular drilling and long rehearsals convinced Lloyd Connor and other hard working band members of the importance of accuracy and alertness in executing precise marching patterns.

Mike Mullins and Judy Foley, two of Lewis' outstanding drama students, scanned the bulletin board covered with items con cerning drama department activities.

Students no longer considered English courses strictly as one part grammar and one part literature. Most teachers reduced grammar study to a minimum, devoting much class time to literature, composing themes and research papers, and reading and drawing conclusions about books.
Literature anthologies included choice selections of the poems, short stories, and essays of noted authors. Ninth and tenth grade books each included a novel; freshmen studied Great Expectations, while sophomores read George Elliot's Silas Marner. Those texts which did not include a novel were often supplemented with one. In this case, students usually studied a well-known work in paper-back form.
An increased number of compositions were required, as students frequently wrote themes using either personal subjects or one suggested by the instructor. Often themes explored controversial events or ideas, so that students learned to examine a subject well and to express their own opinions. All seniors as well as some underclassmen composed a research paper. Using the library and compiling detailed information provided the opportunity to become truly familiar with a single subject.
To a degree, composition and the reading of literature were combined in making book reports. Students selected novels, biographies, or nonfiction books to fulfill reading assignments, which ranged from. one book per six weeks to 1000 pages each semester.
Emphasis on literature and writing relieved the monotony the repititious grammar rules had created and caused the students to become aware of their own opinions and the need to express them.

Junior English entailed the study of American Literature and the more complicated parts of speech, all of which required Sandy Dalton's full concentration.

MR. RICHARD THOMAS,
Mechanical Drawing, Industrial Arts, Junior Class Advisor: M.Ed., University of Virginia.

Not every high school student is college bound. There are many job opportunities which do demand a certain degree of skill. Vocational courses were established for the purpose of training students to fill these jobs.

Girls who desired to go into the business field as secretaries or stenographers received high school training through such courses as general business; typing, bookkeeping, and stenography. Vocational office training gave senior students actual working experience in an office. For those girls who were more interested in the domestic arts. Andrew Lewis offered excellent courses in home economics. After spending two or three years in Mrs. Blake's class a girl is better prepared to run her own home efficiently. In addition to learning to cook and sew, girls were taught child care, how to handle family finances and how to select and decorate a home.

Vocational courses were not planned only for girls, boys, as well, had an opportunity to gain worthwhile skills. Mechanical drawing and industrial arts gave students a chance to explore their possibilities and to find out where their interest lay. Boys who are interested in this type of work may further their training at the Educational Center. Even for the student who does not plan a vocation in this field, industrial arts as a hobby can offer a sense of creativity and usefulness. Boys taking shop worked with woods, metals, and electricity, developing such useful items as small furniture for home and yard. Mechanical drawing students completed drawings which included orthographic projections, perspective drawings, and auxiliary views.

Mike McCulley mastered intricate wood-cutting with the jigsaw.

MR. EDDIE M. JOYCE,
Boys' Physical Education,
Head Football and Baseball Coach, Advisor Monogram Club; B.S., Louisiana Polytechnic Institute.

The whistle blew to launch a mad race between girls impatient to control the evasive speedball.

In order to be mentally alert, one must first be physically fit. Students at Andrew Lewis start in the eighth grade to condition their minds as well as their bodies. Girls played basketball, volleyball, field hockey, and tennis, while boys took up basketball, wrestling, and touch football. But, physical education was not all fun and games. There was much hard work involved, and every physical education student had aching muscles to prove it.

Both boys and girls were given physical fitness tests at the beginning and end of each term which indicated the students' progress during the year. The test was composed of such feats as the softball throw, sit-ups, pull-ups, and the 50 -yard dash. The results were then compared with the average percentages of high school students throughout the country.

In addition to actual physical activity the classes had courses in health, which helped students understand the body functions and systems. Besides the regular text, eighth graders studied emergency first-aid which prepared them for sudden illness or accidents in the home. Students were taught how to make and apply different types of bandages. The Life Saving Crew visited classes to demonstrate the administration of artificial respiration. Freshmen studied classroom driver training for one semester.

The three years of physical education required at A.L. helped the students to leave high school as a mature adult, both physically and mentally.

Vickie Vaughan, straining but smiling, went through the motion of the modified pull-ups.

Mike Mullins and Anne Clayton listened attentively with Mrs. Rash to tapes in the new French lab which was used as a teaching aid for third year French students.

Underclassmen Make Latin Dominant Choice Over French and Spanish.

MISS ANNIE V. COOK, Latin: Senior Class Latin Club Advisor: M.A., Randolph Macon College.

MISS DOROTHY MILLER, Latin, English: Latin Club Advisor: B.A.. Elizabeth College.

MRS. MARY RASH,
French: B.A., Roanoke Col. lege.

MRS. MARY SUE WILLIS,
Spanish. English: B.S.. Bay lor University.

As the world grows increasingly smaller there is a greater need for communication with neighbors in other countries. Students at Andrew Lewis were obviously aware of this as more signed up for courses in French, Latin, and Spanish.
French classes were conducted almost entirely in French; this gave students practice in using and understanding the French language. A special aid to third year students was the French lab in the reference room of the library. The lab was a new addition to the French department consisting of a series of tapes heard through eight sets of earphones.
Latin, which has always been the most popular language taught at Andrew Lewis, followed the same basic curriculum it had used in the past. In addition to basic Latin construction students studied Caesar's Commentaries on the Gaulic Wars, Virgil's Aeneid, and the works of Ovid and Cicero.
Spanish classes attempted to prepare a student to such a degree that he could, if necessary, converse easily with natives of a Spanish speaking country. In addition to the usual teaching aids-text, tapes, films-Spanish classes received help from Orlando Vasquez, our foreign exchange student. Spanish classes also participated in a number of extracurricula activities such as Spanish parties and a Christmas assembly.
Through language study, students became familiar with another tongue and the life and mores of citizens of another country. Such knowledge was beneficial in developing an international outlook among students.

Susan Turner, a first year Latin student, worked laboriously to solve problems raised by second conjugation. Four years of Latin were offered.

A Christmas program presented by the Spanish classes described a typical Mexican Christmas in cluding the breaking of a piñata.

Susan Leftwich mastered the use of the compass and protractor as she applied theorems and methods of proof in unified geometry. Geometry is usually the math course taken in the sophomore year.

MISS MARY JANE
MAXWELL,
Algebra: B.S., Roanoke Col lege.

MR. ROBERT McREYNOLDS,
Math: Math Analysis: Basket ball Coach, Eight Grade Class Advisor: B.S., East Tennessee State University.

Perhaps one of the most radically changed academic departments at Andrew Lewis was the math department. New textbooks, new terms, new teachers, night classes for parents, and math-a-ramas were but a few of the innovations in this everchanging department. Almost all changes were centered around a new math concept which forced students to reason with formulas rather than merely accept them.
A frequent observation on the new math program concerned the fact that parents could no longer he!p students with homework. This problem was somewhat alleviated by the formation of evening math classes for interested adults. These classes lasted for eight weeks and were taught by A.L. math teachers and Mr. Hunt, principal.
For advanced senior math students challenging courses in trigonometty and math analysis were offered. Most students taking math analysis academically represented the upper $10 \%$ of their class. These courses served as a preparatory study for college and introduced the students to many aspects of math which usually are not encountered in high school.
The Math-a-Rama was a relatively new idea in Roanoke County. Interested students were encouraged to construct projects concerning any phase of mathematics. Andrew Lewis' fifty exhibits were displayed along with projects from all Roanoke County Schools at the Army Reserve Center.

In order to locate books or specific material, students consulted their reliable guide the library card catalogue.

Complete Representation of Materials for Reading and Research Offered in Library.

By listening to tapes provided in the library facilities. French students gain fluency and came closer to an understanding of their adopted tongue.

The unique factors in the operation of the library were its necessity and accessibility to every user. As an essential materials center, it provided every kind of information that might be utilized in the study of any subject.
Students benefited from their personal work in the library in a number of ways. They were able to develop literary tastes and to derive much pleasure through wide reading. Broad philosophies, histories, and individual biographies served as guides in development of character and ideas. Students became familiar with the materials available in a library and how to use them to the greatest advantage.
The library offered various types of educational aids for use in research and study. These aids included a comprehensive collection of 14,000 books, plus 1000 books ordered during the year: a thorough system for locating information rapidly; reading lists; subscription to 92 periodicals; and a record library to serve literature, social studies, music, and language classes.
The ample facilities of the library provided the opportunity for students to acquire unlimited knowledge, both in the preparation of class assignments and the pursuit of personal enjoyment.

With the storehouse of information at his fingertips and a spirit willing to be of service, Mr. Kelly confers with Alex Buck.

Expanded Guidance Program Has New Director.

MRS. MILDRED

MR. GARY KELLY,
11th and 12th Grade Counselor; B.S., West Virginia University, M.A., University of Florida.

MRS. EDNA WEEKS, 9th and 10th Grade Counselor: B.S., Radford College.

A number of changes have faken place in the guidance department at Andrew Lewis under its new co-ordinator, Mr. Kelly. Its new location, separate from the administration office, was an outstanding difference. During the summer a classroom was divided into four office areas, a reception area, and a filing area to house the broadened guidance program.
Students received valuable aid in every phase of their high school career. Tests such as SCAT, STEPS, and PSAT were administered to determine ability levels in various areas of study. When test scores were returned, their significance was interpreted in relation to the individual.
An important responsibility of the guidance department was to provide any kind of information students might need. Manuals of over 311 colleges were available for the benefit of students. Up-todate job information aided vocational students in pinpointing the area of work they wished to enter. The guidance department maintained detailed high school records and kept these records on file indefinitely. Guidance directors kept track of graduates and their accomplishments in order to accurately rate how well Andrew Lewis is preparing students for the fields they may enter.
A worthy purpose of the guidance department was the offer of friendship, understanding, and assistance to students with personal problems concerning family, teacher, or fellow student relationships.
The guidance department was a service which aided all students at Andrew Lewis in understanding them selves and others and developing realistir educa tional vocational and emotional goals.

Students

The personality of Andrew Lewis was a cross-section of its student body, identified with the smiling eyes of 1700 individuals. Basic trends developed and were enthusiastically broadened, but the essential characteristic of distinct differences remained. Unity coupled with diversity gave the impression of versatility and strengthened relationships between students.

Athletics

Andrew Lewis experienced the year of winning teams in '64-'65. Overall, football, basketball, track, and wrestling boasted victorious seasons and highlyskilled participation of the school's leading athletes. A dynamic school spirit was rejuvenated as students discovered the thrill of attending action-packed athletic events; seasonal victories underscored a triumphant year at Lewis.

Tri-captains Steve Cromer, Dan Brugh, and Danny Wheeling and Coach Eddie Joyce accept with pride the sportsmanship award from Mr. Guy Spruhan.

The whole Roanoke Valley community rejoices with Salem in the state football championship won by Andrew Lewis High School's Wolverines. Anyone who attended a recent Lewis game, especially either of the last two, couldn't help but become infected with the championship fever. And it was contagious to a lot of people who didn't attend.

The Wolverines went through 10 straight football games without a defeat or a tie, a feat attained by no other team among the state's top high schools and something no other Salem team ever accomplished.

All Salem literally erupted that Friday evening at the final whistle when the scoreboard showed a hard-won 19 to 10 Lewis victory over Kecoughtan. For the next few hours there was nothing staid about the old Roanoke County seat. It was a sight to behold.

Hearty congratulations are due the Wolverines' football squad, its excellent coaching staff, its student body, Salemites, and all the rest who live in that part of the county whose high school is Lewis. In fact, the whole Valley feels pretty cocky at the moment. It has a right to.

Battle-worn Bo Southern, kneeling at the 50 , watched his team with confidence as they blocked offensive moves without wavering.

Coach Eddie Joyce briskly pacing the sidelines and attentively observing the action became a familiar sight to spectators at football games.

Mid-Season Games Boast Mounting Scores and Skillful Plays.

Afflicted rather suddenly with painful leg cramps, Russell Harris limped to the sidelines during the William Byrd game. Minutes later he resumed active play.

Jimmy Wright (82) took a pass over the middle for a vital first down against Halifax County as Roberts (83) and Harris (43) move in to protect.

Bo Southern (73) maintained strong blocking action as Russell Harris (43) pushed forward for valuable yardage against Kecoughtan. Harris, leading Western District scorer, accumulated 78 points in ten games.

One Hilltopper had the right idea as he attempted to prevent Danny Wheeling (20) from gaining yardage in the hard-fought E. C. Glass game.

Vigorous J.V. Games Regularly Precede Varsity Action.

The starting five prepared to open another game for Andrew Lewis on their home court. The records revealed that the Wolverines won eleven games at home while winning only three on hosting courts.

Varsity Coach Dick Miley used a time-out to give speciific instructions to his players on how to stave off a last minute attack by an opponent.

Home-Court Advantage Influences

 Repeated Victories in First Half of Season.

[^6][^7] against Halifax County as Charles Kipps Sammy Weddle (44) and Hal Johnston (12) rushed forward to assist.

It was a man-to-man situation as Captain Steve Cromer guarded Patrick Henry's Noble Marshall. The intense rivalry between A. L. and P. H. increased the excitement of the game.

Jon Roberts (24) slipped as he attempted to steal the ball from Gainey (51) of Halifax County. Lewis won both of its encounters with Halifax.

Ron Shorter, a crowd-pleaser with his easy, intuitive style of play, made these two points against Glass look easy; he was later voted Mr. Basketball by the student body.

Sammy Weddle (44), gritted his teeth in his efforts to control the ball in this play with the Hilltoppers. Sammy, a junior, scored a total of 201 points and was named to the Western District Honorable Mention Team.

Jackie Hendricks (white uniform) stopped the drive of a persist ent Hillopper, but fouled him in the process.

Outstanding Players Use Individual Abilities to

Alert Ronnie Shorter (10) stole a pass and began to move against the retreating Cardinals of G.W., Western District Champions

It was a two-man effort as Steve Cromer (30) went high into the air to pass the ball to Jackie Hendricks (32). Hendricks stretched and leaned in hopes of catching the pass intended for him and thus preventing a G.W. interception.

Advantage; Yet Master Efficient Team-Work.

Charles Kipps (34) got the .tap to open the second half of play against Jefferson. Hal Johnston (30), a promisina sophomore, was high-scorer for the Wolverines with 24 points.

Wolverines Miss Tournament Berth by Narrow Margin, as Final Games Are Lost On Opponents' Courts.

Charles Kipps (34) and Steve Cromer (30) outiumped Marion's Stevenson (33) for a vital rebound. Lewis won its home game with the Hurricanes 62-55; later Marion avenged its first loss of the season by defeating the Wolverines 72.70 .

Charles Kipps attempted to snare the ball from an unsuspecting Colonel while other Lewis and Fleming players watched apprehensively. Kipps, a junior was the leading rebounder for the Wolverines.

Jon Roberts (25) hovered near P.H.'s Noble Marshall (32) in a sequence of rapid-action guarding maneuvers.

Hal Johnston, a little man in a big man's game, was the only sophomore on the varsity squad. His zeal and determination often revived lagging team

Guard Ronnie Shorter repeatedly left opponents, including the Fleming Colonels, quite stunned by his driving and shooting techniques. Shorter was the season's high scorer for Lewis with a total of 220 points and he was a member of the Western District Honorable Mention Team.

Girls' Basketball Team Adds to Lis#

An after school practice meant that managers Bettio Brightwell and Susie Faries would be busy making certain that they had the necessary equipment handy.

Coaches LaVerne Bailey and Jane Pain anded as they anxiously watched their girls make an unexpe Jane Painter smiled as which resulted in the loss of the ball by the unexpected defensive move. which of the ball by the opponent.

Ann Patrick, a fast moving forward, moved in for a lay-up against the Vinton Maroons. Ann, a freshman, was the leading scorer for the Wolverettes.

All eyes were on Rosie Hammersley, a roving guard, as she tried to decide her next move. All Lewis games were played at Woodrow Wilson and this one against the Vinton Maroons gave the Lewis girls their second victory.

Lewis Matmen Experience Highly Successful

Alvin Gillespie (black uniform) moved for a pin against Jefferson's 95 pound contender.

Wrestling, a comparatively new winter sport at A.L., produced one of the most surprising and successful athletic teams of the year. The season's record was 10 wins, two losses, and one tie. Grapplers such as David Garraghty, Lawrence Carr, Bob Archer, and others were individual stars throughout the season.
In the regional tournament, which was won by host Northside, David Garraghty won first place in the 165 poung class; this entitled him to a berth in the state tournament. As a result of their regional victories, three other Lewis wrestlers also earned the right to compete in the state tournament. Alvin Gillespie placed second in the 95 pound class; Lawrence Carr, third in the 120 pound class, and Bob Archer, fourth in the 138 pound class.

Student Life

Life at Andrew Lewis was not terminated by merely attending classes and studying each day Student interests were broadened and developed farther through participation in clubs and school-sponsored activities and celebrations. Assemblies that provided a pleasant change of pace presented everything from talent shows to an explanation of the atomic reactions. Andrew Lewis, proud of the well-rounded young people who composed its student body, maintained its versatile program of activities.

Paul Saul, President of the SCA, presided at all assemblies and co-ordinated all of the organization's activities.

The Student Cooperative Association was formed for the purpose of promoting better relations between the administration and the student body. Delegates to the student government were elected from each class every spring, with the exception of those representing the eighth grade, who were selected in the fall.

Among S.C.A. activities were numerous efforts to bolster the organization's treasury, including the sale of student directories and S.C.A. cards, and tri-sponsoring the Christmas Dance. In addition to earning money for use in the council's own projects, the S.C.A. also helped raise funds for the American Field Service, by selling shares of A.F.S. stock, to aid in bringing a foreign exchange student to Andrew Lewis for the 1965-66 term.
Before the national elections took place the Student Council held a mock election to get the general opinion of the student body concerning their choice of candidates. Votes were recorded by the voting machines which were used at the Roanoke County Precinct for the actual election.
The S.C.A. has proven itself to be a very vital part of Andrew Lewis, giving students the opportunity to participate in the governing of the school and teaching them the cooperation and responsibility needed in later life.

S.C.A. Representatives Students

In November prior to the national election, Linda Johnston, Donna King. Theresea Yates, and Betty Spencer made plans for A. L.'s mock election. To qualify to vote students either presented their S.C.A. cards or paid a five cent poll tax. The result was a victory for Johnson and Humphrey.

Devotions were held in the auditorium each Friday morning. Speakers included students, teachers, and guests: Carol Koestner was one of the student speakers.

Beta Club Sets Standards, Participates in State Conventions.

The thirty-nine members of the Beta Club, an organization for honor students, attempted to enliven interest in the club through a more active program. In early fall, a constitutional committee was named to establish up-to-date requirements for membership. The necessary grade average for membership was set at 2.50 of a possible 3.00, or a $B$ average: leadership qualities and character were also to be taken into consideration in selecting new members. All students in the Beta Club were required to be at least sophomores.
A banquet for club members and their parents was held at the school in February. The highlight of the spring activities was the State Beta Convention held in Richmond. The A.L. club actively participated in the convention by nominating a candidate for state vice-president and by selecting two students to sérve as marshals.
The Beta Club, determined to fulfill its role as a service group, discussed the establishment of a tutoring service and a student day in which students would participate in county government.

Future Teachers Aid and Honor Faculty.

Mrs. Bowman, an F.T.A. advisoc, worked with Judy Foley, Tessa Martin, Debbie Brugh, and Sharon Sisson as they made plans for the club's "pot luck" supper which was held at Debbie's home.

In only the second year of re-organization, the Future Teachers of America boasted over thirty girls and a well-organized program of services and activities, as well as the office of vice-president of the state F.T.A
With such money-raising projects as selling corsages for Homecoming and Wolverine pennants, the girls prepared for a busy year.
The teacher-aid program proved to be extremely beneficial both to the practicing students and the hard-pressed faculty members. Each girl used her study hall periods to perform helpful services for the teacher to whom she was assigned-filling out records, grading homework, or typing needed information, such as study sheets. Several students were given actual teaching practice as an emergency substitute, and two spent an entire day at a local elementary school teaching the third grade.
Sponsoring the second annual Teacher Appreciation Day was an especially important activity of the F.T.A. In an assembly all were honored with a token of appreciation and the teacher of the year was named.

Vitality of Latin Club Members Revives  Activities and SPONSORS: Miss Virginia Cook and Miss Dorothy Miller conferred obout future Latin Club activities.

Although a number of people wondered that a lively interest could be maintained for a "dead language," the Latin Club accomplished just this with numerous activities and was able to sustain the regard of its 200 members for the customs of Roman life. In October the Latin Club initiated the year's program of activities with its annual picnic. Members of the faculty as well as club attended. The Thanksgiving program was presented for upperclassmen with the traditional elegant simplicity involving prayers in English and Latin. Living pictures from the life of Christ composed the moving Easter program presented on Palm Sunday afternoon. Plans were made for Latin Week, instituted in the 1963-64 school year to further increase an awareness of the practices of an earlier civilization. In addition to these activities, individual Latin classes presented entertainment at the monthly meetings.
At the beginning of the second semester the yearbook, Sodalitas Latina, was issued. It contained such information as important club dates by-laws, and the compiled membership.
"To pass on the torch of life," was more than the club's motto: it was the basis of the club's existence.

The Virgil Class, assisted by the Caesar Class, presented an original drama concerning the typical Roman life. It was presented at the regular October meeting just prior to the annual club picnic which was held in the cafeteria.

Science enthusiasts had the opportunity to extend their interest outside of the classroom by joining the Bi-Phy-Chem Club. A get-together was held prior to the opening of school at Stonegate Swim Club for both regular and prospective members; plans were outlined for the coming year.
Early money-making efforts included selling programs at sports events, sponsoring hops, and holding a bake sale in down-town Salem. The club used its profits toward the staging of the County Science Fair. Club members also participated in the annual fair by general planning, setting up projects, and guiding visitors.
Meetings included a variety of interesting and informative programs. Films from several fields of science were shown. Speakers, specialists in their area of study, presented up-to-date explanations of scientific occurrences. One such speaker was Mr. James Ogul of the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

The Bi-Phy-Chem Club as a final project for the year planned a visit to area industrial plants such as General Electric to observe modern methods of operation and production.

Distributive Education and Vocational Office Training were vocational offerings designed to train seniors for profitable employment in retailing and wholesaling or clerical and stenographic occupations. These students attended classes in the morning and worked a minimum of fifteen hours a week in the afternoon and on Saturdays. They were graded on the basis of joint observation by their employers and advisors. After graduation many of them accept permanent positions with their part-time employers.
This year thirty students in D.E. worked in Roanoke businesses such as Sidney's, Sears, Nelson-Roanoke Corporation, service stations, and drug, grocery, and furniture stores. Functioning as a club, they elected officers and sponsored an employer-employee banquet in which they paid tribute to their employers.
V.O.T. students specialized either in typing or stenography, and all were trained in the use of up-todate business machines. These twenty three white collar workers were employed at such business concerns as Farmers' National Bank, Nelson-Roanoke Corporation, and C & P Telephone Company.

As part of the V.O.T. program Joyce Crotts and Sue Eblen spent half of each school day working in the administration offices of the school board. Other V.O.T. students were employed at banks, insurance companies, and other local business concerns.

Lewis Lettermen Compose Monogram Club

OFFICERS: Bobby Archer, Treasurer; Danny Baker, Vice-President; Coach Eddie Joyce, Sponsor; Bo Southern, Secretary; Steve Cromer, President.

Set up as a club for boys excelling in athletics, the Monogram Club had fluctuating requirements for membership according to the specific sport. To receive a letter and thus be eligible for membership in the club, a boy was required to participate in the games for varying minimum periods.
A basketball player must play in one-half of the quarters, while a boy who participated in football found that the requirement varied anywhere from 20-30 quarters, depending on the size of the team. Trackmen must achieve 15 points for the coveted monogram, but usually only the top five or six runners were chosen from the Cross-Country Team. The same stipulation applied to tennis players, of which only the top five or six in the matches were selected for the award.
Wrestling, only recently becoming a major Lewis sport, was in the process of establishing permanent rules for membership.

Week and Victory Flag.

Pep Club members could always be found actively occupied with some project. In the fall of the year a membership drive was conducted as a first step in the annual organization of one of the largest clubs in the school. The result was an impressive enrollment of nearly 200 students.

As the first project, the club ordered the white-on-blue Victory Flag which proclaimed athletic victories. The flag was a lasting gift to the student body.

A month and a half before Homecoming, the Pep Club launched its planis and committees. Spirit Week was a new addition to the traditional celebration. Each day a different class was assigned a hall to decorate in relation to the season's football victories. Various committees were appointed to carry out specific responsibilities for the Homecoming Weekend.

Throughout the year, the club supported all cheerleading activities and decked the halls with posters publicizing coming sports events. Backing all athletic teams, the Pep Club led the student body in the spirit needed for winning seasons.

Future Homemakers Practice the Skills of Modern Living in Newly-Remodeled Home Economics Department.

Volunteers of the stronger sex presented the first fasion show of the season to the amusement of F.H.A. members.

OFFICERS: Mrs. Evelyn Blake, Advisor; Peggy Sipe, Corresponding Secretary; Marcella Hale, Historian; Sandy Clem, Director; Diane Garnet, Treasurer; Kitty Lynch, Second Vice-President; Brenda Clark, President.

Girls who took a particular interest in home economics were given the opportunity to further that interest through the Future Homemakers of America Club.
The three important club activities of the year included a reception for A.L.'s foreign exchange students, the adoption of a welfare child, and field trips to local business concerns. Refreshments for the reception were prepared by F.H.A. members and the entire student body and faculty were invited. Over 250 students greeted the foreign visitors with a handshake and a warm welcome.
Interesting and educational field trips were also a part of the club's activities. F.H.A. members toured Old Dominion Candy Company and attended a fashion show at Audrey's Dress Shop.
In addition to teaching girls adult responsibilities, the F.H.A. aided them in becoming better citizens and better homemakers of tomorrow.

Hungry, but slightly skeptical, boys sampled the homemade goodies from the table decorated in a gay Christmas motif.

Food before, not after the meeting was an F.H.A. innovation. Meetings always began with delectable confections to refresh the tired minds and bodies.

Efficient F.H.A. members eagerly mixed refreshments for thirsty classmates at the reception for the exchange students.

OFFICERS: SEATED: Toni Jolly, Junior Representative to District: Judy Gresham, Chaplain Sharon Hash, Recording Secretary; Frankie Mitchell, Corresponding Secrełary; Sandy Clem, President. STANDING: Theresa Yates, Historian; Kathy Richards, Vice-President; Pat Armentrout, Treasurer: Margaret Stover and Sharon Bethel, Senior Representatives to District.

Since its recent introduction at Andrew Lewis, the Key Club maintained a busy schedule fulfilling its goal in being of service to others. Boys of fine character and good grade averages composed the membership: they showed ambition and responsibility in the projects they assumed.
Key Club members sold dozens of doughnuts throughout the area to raise money for service proiects. At Christmas, the boys sponsored a campaign for collecting food and toys to be given to needy families. Springtime activities included the sponsoring of the WROV All-Star Basketball Game and the initiation for new members.
The Keyette Club, sister organization to the Key Club, was begun in mid-semester and had assumed a busy role in community life by the end of the year. Girls who applied for membership met similar standards to those of the Key Club members, with the additional rule that no member could belong to a sorority.
Club dues and a bake sale provided the money to initiate service projects. Among other activities, the girls "adopted" the school's wrestling team and sponsored a Twirp Week in which girls asked boys for dates. Numerous cartoon booklets were assembled for the enjoyment of hospital patients.

Vocal Talents in One of Three Choirs.

Students were given the opportunity to join one of the three choirs under the direction of Mr. Harris, a former Andrew Lewis student.
Forty-seven young people performed in the A Cappella Choir; most of these students had auditioned in the spring for membership. They gave a number of performances, including a special Christmas concert, a spring concert, and musical presentations in area churches.
Singing in the National Cathedral of Washington, D. C. proved to be the highlight of the year. While there, the choir also performed at President Johnson's church and various high schools. Enthusiastic choir members sold recordings of their Christmas songs and innumerable boxes of candy to finance the tour.

Mixed Choir members spent much time learning the fundamentals of music-note recognition, rhythm drills, part reading, and ear training. Their practice served as preparation for later auditioning for $A$ Cappella, and as a group they too participated in school assemblies.
For the first time since its organization four years ago, the forty members of the Eighth Grade Choir held daily practice. They, too, studied basic music and learned to write a melody played for them, using correct pitch and rhythm.

Mr. Harris directed A Cappella members as they rehearsed for the March PTA meeting. The entire music department had charge of the program.

Both in Membership and Quality.

The concert band at Andrew Lewis showed marked growth and improvement in the fall of '64. Most of the members had auditioned competitively the previous spring for positions. Moreover, the majority of the students composing the band were underclassmen with few graduating seniors to break the ranks.
In October all the band members worked diligently to sell a large supply of Halloween candy. The sale proved to be very successful, and as a result, several much-needed instruments were purchased for band use.
Early in the morning, late in the afternoon, and even at night the band held frequent and exhausting practices, in addition to their daily class periods. Formations for football half-time shows had to be mastered as well as the marching patterns for participation in such events as the Vinton and Charlottesville Dogwood Festivals and the District VI Band Festival.

Even more important than these special events was the earnest and sincere desire on the part of individual members to master a band instrument and to perfect a piece of music.

On warm, sunny afternoons, Mr. Farley, atop the stadium, could be heard shouting to band members such explicit instructions as "Step Higher," "Get in line," and "Faster tempo!"

Half-time performances by the band during football season included such routines as "Bali-Hai," and "Don't Let the Rain Come Down."

Band Keeps Busy Schedule, Frequent Practice Sessions.

Donnie Lunsford, a sophomore, played the bells as the band drilled for one of its performances.

In the $1963-64$ school year Andrew Lewis' debate team was selected to participate in a programmed learning experience with the psychology department of Hollin's College. Several students who attended that study joined this year's larger team of eight debaters. With diligent research, they prepared to debate the issue of control on nuclear weapons in local tournaments and at the district Forensic Meet.

Turntable Broadcasts Include Unusual Features.

Andrew Lewis' forty-five minute radio program, Wolverine Turntable, was broadcasted by a student staff every Saturday on station WBLU. Besides the regular presentations of sports news, club activities, and popular music, a number of new features were added, in. cluding the College of the Week, the Teacher of the Week, and birthday record dedications.

Sales deadlines, photography deadlines, advertising deadlines, photography deadlines, copy and layout deadlines, photography deadlines, and finally the publisher's deadline!
A confusion of people and ideas at work reigned in the yearbook room as the eighteen enthusiastic staff members labored day after day to meet the ever impending deadlines. Long hours were spent drawing and redrawing layouts, taking, developing. printing and reprinting pictures, writing copy and doing the hundreds of tasks necessary to compile a yearbook.
Almost two thousand portraits of students and teachers had to be identified and alphabetized. The two student photographers used about 3,000 feet of 35 mm and about 2000 finished photographs were presented to the layout staff for possible use. Thus there was always a picture to be identified and a caption to be written.
There were times when staff members believed that the job would never be completed, and comments such as "I never realized how much work went into making a yearbook," were common, especially among new staff members. A new idea, a good photo, an approved piece of copy, a finished page -the slightest happening-would bring renewed enthusiasm and a firm determination to see the job through to its completion. The greatest incentive staff members had was the fervent hope that the student body would loudly proclaim the 1965 Pioneer as the best ever

This year the enthusiastic Spokesman staff demonstrated that even a laudable new format can successfully be improved upori. The new look initiated worthwhile improvements to produce a sizeable increase in circulation.

The paper encouraged students to submit their opinions concerning the current issues of school life in letters to the editor. "Senior Impressions" and "Clublicity" were added to the feature section, which already included the popular gossip column "Lewisnoops." Two eight-page editions, exceptions to the usual four-page issues, were published for the special events of fall Homecoming and graduation of seniors in the spring.
Producing fifteen issues of the Spokesman, one every two weeks, involved writers, layout specialists, ad salesmen, and photographers. The editor and the two new faculty advisors employed a new plan for developing future leadership within the staff. They trained rising seniors for the responsibilities of the editorship and other demanding jobs.

Homecoming Festivities Are Highlighted

Members of the Pep Club employed good taste and many long hours of work to construct the Homecoming Court float with its giant gold crown.

The excitement and anticipation of a pending state championship, the surprise and pleasure surrounding the selection of a homecoming queen, and the colorful afternoon parade brought the Andrew Lewis student body to the climax of a spirited football season. Following an assembly at which the court was presented, students hurried to put the finishing touches on floats or to find a choice position for viewing the parade. Most entries clamored for a defeat of Kecoughtan by the Wolverines.

At half-time, the excitement in the stands increased as members of the court and their escorts arrived in the grandeur of shining convertibles. Again they were introduced to the admiring onlookers, and everyone settled back to watch the hex of Friday 13 triumphantly overcome.

Judy Chase and Danny Wheeling wore beaming smiles of surprise and happiness after being crowned Queen and King of Homecoming.

Steve Cromer modestly accepted the honor conveyed to him, while Pep Club President Susan Fry happily applauded his selection as Prince of Homecoming.

by Stately Court.

Donna Waggy, unaware of her selection as Princess of Homecoming, smiled happily as she and escort, Bari Neighbors, watched the court being introduced to the student body.

Members of the court and their escorts were introduced and moved around the gymnasium before the coronation. At the close of the assembly they again formed a parade of couples.

The Senior Class chose Elaine Lee to be Andrew Lewis's representative in the Holly Court of Salem and the Roanoke Snow Court. Selected from girls of all county high schools, Donna Waggy reigned as Queen of the Holly Court.

Senior Talent Show

During the Christmas assembly, the Spanish department arranged a skit of foreign festivities, climaxed by the breaking of the piñata.

Glowing candles and smiling faces captured the warmth of the holidays at the Christmas Dance.

Reading passages from the Bible relating the Christmas story, Mike Mullins conveyed the theme of the carols sung by the choirs.

Joins Other Christmas Celebrations.

Sweet Shirley Temple (Shirley Harrison) sprang into motion with other Senior "dolls" during the first presentation of the Christmas Talent Show, "Of All the Lousy Football Teams."

Pat Saul and Tom Harvey showed the typical curiosity of two ordinary little boys exploring the wonders of Christmas: so they turned on the Pat Armentrout and Sharon Hash dolls to see how they worked.

At the flip of a switch, the Rolling Rocks (Dan Oyler, Kyle Stevens, Nardie Nelson, Billy Miles, and Mike Pardue) presented "Time Is on My Mind" and "Money."

Mike Mullins, frustrated with his weighty responsibilities as Santa Claus around December 25, whirled through a zany version of "Twas the Night Before Christ-

Advertisements

One hundred four local businesses, old and new, contributed their support in the publication of the 1965 Pioneer. These concerns, located in Salem and Roanoke, proved to be the area's life, without whose existence there would have been no economic structure. Andrew Lewis students were aided by these businesses in numerous ways, including the hiring of them as part-time employees. In addition, they gave their support to Andrew Lewis clubs, publications, and athletic teams by contributions and advertisements.

An Average Capitalist Discusses FREE ENTERPRISE "I'VE THE RIGHT TO PLAN MY OWN LIFE, TO EARN A LIVING AS I SEE FIT.'
" . . . I'm limited, of course, by my ability and determination. But, overall, I call the shots. I'll be paid according to what I contribute, too. If I'm valuable, I'll earn more; if lazy, less. But there's always the thought of working up. That's because I live in a Free Enterprise economy where I have freedom of choice and opportunity."

Our management employees and stockholders are united with this student under the Free Enterprise flag. We chose this business because we like it. But like other businesses, we must give the best possible service at the lowest possible cost.

United States Leadership, in the new world economics as in the political and social confrontation, depends in the last analysis on our ability, as a nation and as individuals, to think and plan in terms of the new forces at work in the world. It is not our weapons of war. . . not our treaties and agreements. not our words. . but our ideas which must earn our place in the world. . our ideas and our ideals.
