The five minute bell rang on the first day of school. Students turned away from conversations about summer vacations, trips to the beach, jobs, and encounters with Chelsea Clinton. Upon entering homeroom, students received planners which included the entire school calendar and the school code. Students lugged around progressively heavier bookbags as the day continued. The computer lab and classrooms moved further toward the 21st century with the addition of 20 new computers to the computer lab. A wall between room 138 and 139 had been removed to accommodate the new computers.

The parking situation worsenedwith the issueing of more parking permits than ever. The problem of overcrowding forced administrators to schedule classes in the basement and to create new rooms out of existing storage areas.

With concentration, junior Jason Collins works on a computer in the computer lab. Twenty new computers were added to the school's computer lab. To accommodate this addition, a former English room was converted into a room for the computers.

Senior and junior guys donned wigs and makeup as the senior and junior girls prepared to go head to head for the annual powder puff football game. The senior male cheerleaders cheered their class to victory.

Rain caused problems early in the school year as the roof was being retiled and sealed. During one storm, a leak spilled water into the Foreign Language classroom area. Large trash cans were used to catch the"water fall". Rain also caused the administration to cancel the Homecoming parade and to move the Homecoming game from Friday night to Saturday afternoon.

Inclement weather posed even more problems as the school year continued. Record amounts of snow fell in the Roanoke area, causing schools to close for a total of fifteen days. Because of the missed time, Roanoke County decided to cancel first semester exams for students. To compensate for the lost instruction time and to ensure that spring break was maintained, the school day was extended ten minutes.

From encounters with Chelsea Clinton, rafting on the Delaware River, and soccer in Germany to first period English, cafeteria food, and senior parking: The first day of school arrived more quickly than expected. Students came to school early to see friends they hadn't seen all summer. The halls were crowded with people eagerly telling stories about their summer.

For three weeks in July, the under 15 Roanoke Stars soccer team toured Europe and competed in the Austria and Dana Cups. "We won the first game in Hamburg, Germany, but in the second game, we played on a gravel field and lost. We weren't used to the unusual playing conditions," said Greg Allen.

Yearbook students attended a week long camp in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. Also in attendence was Chelsea Clinton, the daughter of President Bill Clinton. Members caught periodic glimpses of Chelsea and her Secret Service protection throughout the week. "Carolyn Pinkerton walked up to Chelsea and said that she had a pen that squirted water and was going to squirt her, but she was afraid that her Secret Service men would get mad," said Sarah Clyburn.

Stephen Kunkle, Cathy Niedzwiecki, Kate Nettles, Chris

"Spirit Week is the best week of the whole year!" said senior Jackie Balzer

"This is the only time we are allowed to be crazy. Teachers are more flexible during Spirit Week," said junior Montgomery Drummond.

Spirit Week started off with Crazy Hat and College Sweatshirt Day. "This was the easiest day to dress up for," said sophomore Jeremy Marks. Dressing up for the rest of the week took more creativity. Students dragged their parents clothes out of the attic for 60's and 70's day. Senior Jeremy Clement teased his curly hair into a giant afro. Seniors Jonathan Shorter and Steven Kunkle molded their hair into stiff pompadours.

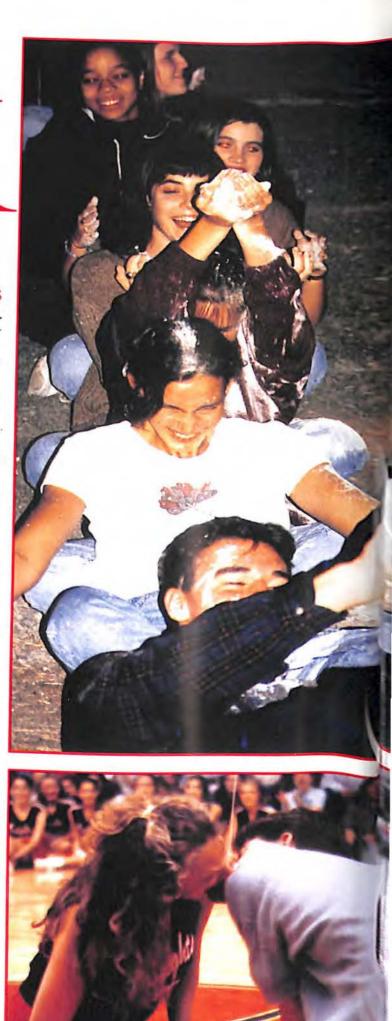

For Future Day, students wrapped themselves in saran wrap and aluminum foil. A group of students wore Tanglewood Autowash t-shirts indicating their future employers.

Dork day proved to be the most popular dress up day. Students hiked their pants up and imitated the stereotypical dork. Sophomore Annie Nash wore a pair of red glasses she had from the sixth grade. "I felt so goofy. My pants were riding up way too much," said Annie.

Other events of the week included a pep rally and a bonfire.

The SCA organized the bonfire and the games for the pep-rally. The rain caused the homecoming parade to be cancelled for yet another year, much to the disappointment of the seniors. However, the spirit of the week overshadowed the rain.

SPIRIT WEEK *. 11

Blooms Late By Anne Richardson It was eighth period on Friday, Η October 20. Hopeful students stared out the windows wishing for the rain to stop. The intercom crackled as Dr. Cobble announced that due to weather, the Homecoming parade would be next week as part of the Senior Night festivities. The Knights would play the Patriots on Saturday afternoon instead of the traditional Friday night. This left many students upset including members of the marching band. "I couldn't believe it when I heard that we were going to still go to the State Marching Festival and I was going to have to miss my senior Homecoming game," said Kelly Stewart.

After all of the bad news, students tried to find ways to still have a good Friday night. "About thirty people went to Cassie Edwards' house to pig out on food in mourning of the cancellation of the game. Brian Finucane attempted to start a bonfire; it was hilarious," said Courtney Abbitt.

Before the dance some students dined out at restaurants such as Steak and Ale and Billy's Ritz while others ate at peoples' houses. Kelly Thorne hosted thirteen couples at her house.

Some couples didn't get off to a good start like Rhett Funderburke who forgot his date's, April Faulkner, corsage. He left it in his refrigerator and his mother had to bring it to him. "I knew I'd forget something. I felt really bad when we were taking pictures and all the other girls had corsages," said Rhett.

Brooke Frazer also had trouble before the dance. "On my way to take pictures, I was so excited. I tried to change lanes and I slammed into the back of some man's car. I felt like an idiot because I was standing in the road all dressed up," said Brooke.

"14-23-43! Hut one, Hut two-Hike!" yells the quarterback as she prepares to put the play in motion. Her voice can barely be heard over the screams coming from the sidelines. As a cheerleader kicks his leg into the air, excited fans yell loudly. The third annual Powder Puff football game brought unexpected role reversals as the senior girls overpowered the junior girls, 12-6.

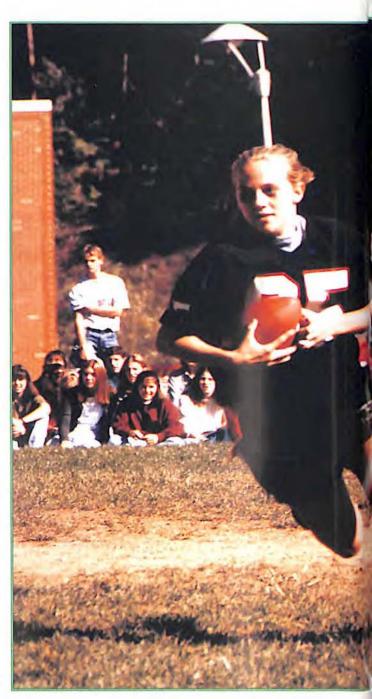

Warm, sunny weather made the opportunity to go outside for the last hour of the day an enticing offer to most students. "The best part of watching the game was the nice weather," said junior Thi Campbell.

Players practiced after school and on the weekends to perfect the plays drawn up by their coaches, who were members of the varsity football team. "At one of the practices, the girls wanted to see how far they could move the tackling dummy. We let them try, and they moved it about five inches," said senior coach Mike Mitchem.

provided entertainment for the fans. Halfway through the game, the senior cheerleaders rushed across the field and attacked the junior squad. "I thought that they took a pretty cheap shot at us," said junior cheerleader Chad Norris.

Even players who were unable to play enjoyed themselves. "I had been sick over the weekend, and I still had a cold, so I couldn't play. I still had a blast, though," said junior player Leila Kessler.

By Shana Edwards Freezing cold, knee-deep snow, and the National Guard were just some of the images of the winter of '96. Students spent weeks out of school because of the snow.

Fourteen girls spent the night at Katie Roberts' house on January 5th, and when they woke up the next morning the Blizzard of '96 was well underway.

"We were outside at about 4 am and the snow had already started to stick," said sophomore Betsy Cross. Katie Roberts said, "I was excited because we stayed up really late and I had Driver's Ed the next morning. It was cancelled because of the snow and we got to sleep in."

Cheryl McAdams and Monika Jernigan were snowed in at Katy Freeman's house. "We walked to 7-11 everyday," said Monika.

Whether they were having snowball fights or making snow angels, students found plenty of time for fun. Zack McCoy and Jeremy Hedrick insisted on going sledding on one of the coldest nights. "There was a hill at Hunting Hills Country Club we had to go on," said Zack. Other students tried to find creative ways to stay warm. Kori Roberts had 34 couples over to her house for $30 each and had a dinner catered by Sweet Shop. Kori also had parents valet park the couples' cars. "Kori's house was great because all of our friends were together for one last time all dressed up. The food was okay but the decorations were awesome. Surfing, bungee cords, karaoke, and gambling were just some of the activities that students enjoyed at After Prom. The theme for this year's event was Hollywood Knight. The P.T.A. worked hard organizing and setting up for the alcohol and drug free party. The festivities began with lots of food. Pizza, cookies, submarine sandwiches, and drinks were served along with a giant cookie cake. Students were required to check in before 1:15 if they were to be admitted to the Carter Athletic Center. After check-in, everyone headed to their favorite activity. Tatoos were extremely popular this year. People waited in line to pick out a temporary tatoo. "I had lips put on my neck. Later everyone kept asking me if it was a hickey," said sophomore Ashlin Barbe.

Karaoke was an After Prom favorite again this year. Party goers looked over lists of songs they could sing. Trying to convince your friends to sing with you was the only obstacle between would be singers and their moment in the spotlight.

Tickets cost $2.50 and were sold during lunches. Students received a free t-shirt with their ticket purchase. Ticket stubs were drawn randomly and prizes were given out during the night.

The big prizes were given out at 4:30 to encourage people to stay longer.

Another year finished packed with tons of memories to remember it by Betsy Allen

Looking back at the year, there were hundreds of unusual, fun, exciting, and crazy things that happened. From field trips to dances to sports, something memorable was always going on.

For Jeff Lang, sports were the most memorable thing about high school. "The thing I'll remember best is the ally-oop I passed to Billy Frantz during basketball season. The crowd got so loud, and it really got us moving in the game," said Jeff.

Who could forget the snow of '96? Roanoke County schools missed 15 days of school due to snow. First semester exams were cancelled, and nine-weeks tests took their place in some cases.

Spirit Week had its share of laughter as students dressed as dorks and came to school in pajamas. The fall Spirit Week was so popular among students that the SCA sponsored a second Spirit Week in the spring.

"The thing I'll remember about this year is Mr. Mahan's history class," said Mollie Strosnider. "He made us learn, but he made it fun."

"Winning the Mr/Miss Pageant is definitely my most memorable moment," said Neil Williams. "It was funny to see all these guys dressed as girls. I'm glad I could turn back into a guy, though."

As the last few weeks of school dragged on, the weather heated up and the infamous senioritis kicked in. To be eligible for exam exemptions, seniors studied extra hard to insure a B average and tried for 95% attendance. Seniors with leftover detention worked off their detention doing odd jobs around the school. Students with detention were not allowed to participate in any senior activities.

The last Friday before exams and the last full Friday of the year was Senior Day. Seniors met in the cafeteria during homeroom to eat breakfast which was catered by Chris' Catering. After munching for an hour, they boarded buses and headed for the Civic Center to practice the graduation exercises.

After practice, the seniors gathered on the gym bleachers to have a class picture taken. They disappeared for lunch, but by 1:30, they returned in decorated caps and gowns. Sporting sunglasses and college paraphernalia, seniors joined the rest of the student body in the gym.

The candy apple lab was an appropriate lab for Halloween. "It was sort of hard to get the candy on the last apple because the candy started to get hard," said Cindy. Students also participated in a Holiday lab before the winter break. Students made red and white candy and twisted the two pieces of candy together to make a candy cane.

Fragile Drop

During Physics class, Chris Obenshain and Kevin Hagie tape their egg container together. Students developed a container to hold a raw egg so that it wouldn't break when it was dropped from a certain height. Students chose between two different sets of materials. The first set included five sheets of typing paper and one meter of 3/4 inch masking tape. The second set included fifty soda straws and one meter of 3/4 inch masking tape. Each egg was dropped from a height of one meter. If it sustained the fall then it continued to a higher drop.

They were limited to 12 oz. soft drink cans, plastic drinking straws, clothes buttons, wire clothes hangers, glue, and tape for the materials to build the car. Students had to power their car using some kind of wind device. Many students used pieces of cardboard. The car had to travel one meter to receive a 90, and three meters for 94. The top six time trials in each class received grades of 100.

PIN 'EM KNIGHTS

Under a new coach and strong upperclassmen, the Knights finish with 2nd place in the RVD Tournament

"The next state champion is in this room right now," said Coach Ray Brougham at the first wrestling meeting this year. The team did not reach the goal of having a state champion, but under the new coach the Knights came out with a winning season.

"Before each match I walked around and reviewed all my moves in my head," said Adam Maneen. Although he separated his shoulder early in the season Maneen still went on to wrestle in the State Tournament. "I started to wrestle in ninth grade to help keep me in shape for soccer, and I liked it so I stuck with it," said Maneen.

"You had to be dedicated if you wanted to succeed," said Chad Norris.

"Teamwork was important, especially in practice because if the whole team didn't practice then one weight class was stronger than the others. When your teammates win it makes you want to win," said

"The coaches really didn't say much to get us motivated. Wrestling was an individual sport and there was much more self motivation involved. Before each match I tried to forget everything and just concentrate," said Matt Chirdon. The Knights finished third in the Big Orange Tournament behind Northside and William Byrd. In the Championship round of this tournament Maneen and Dan Ferris both defeated their opponents. Other team members also helped to pull in points.

Superstitiously, the Knights each hit the warmups. "Every since I was a freshman, we have always hit the goal post before games. It was understood that if we didn't follow this tradition and we lost, it would be our fault," said senior Andee Moore.

Centered around first team all district selections, Nancy Dixon, Heather Krause, Natalie Newman, and Ann Schleupner, the Knights worked to prepare for intense games in both Charlottesville and Northern Virginia.

Led by Coach Peter Lustig as well as Tony Park, the new assistant coach, Cave Spring overcame the loss of several strong players and stepped up to an upgraded schedule consisting of more challenging teams.

"The most memorable moment of the seagoal post as they take a lap around the field in son was our first game because we beat Western Albemarle and no one thought we could," said Natalie.

"We motivated each other by having positive attitudes. It is important to be confident in everyone and encourage them," said Heather.

After a season of ups and downs, Coach Lustig said,"It was a tough season, but the girls improved both individually and as a team."

A TURNING POINT

Motivated by an intense district rivalry, the Knights worked their way to a second place RVD finish

Mitchem placed first in both the shot put and discus in the district meet. Mitchem helped lead the Knights to a third place finish in the meet. Junior Josh Dowdy took fifth in shot put in the district meet. Sophomore Aaron Williams took fifth in discus in the district meet. Mitchem went on to place in the regional meet also. That qualified Mitchem to go on to the state meet where he came out with a sixth place finish in shot put.

COMING UP STRONG

Once again dominating the RVD, the J.V. teams finished their seasons with winning records

The Knights competed in four junior varsity spring sports and accomplished outstanding records. J.V. teams gave a chance for sophomores and freshmen to prepare for and gain experience for future play in varsity sports.

As a first year school sponsored sport, the J.V. girls' soccer team went 3-3-3. "One of the biggest challenges we faced was learning to work together as a team. A lot of us had never played together before and we didn't know the coaches. We all had to make a special effort to promote team unity," said co-captain Kim Barlow.

Starting off the season on the right foot, the J.V. boys' soccer team finished with a winning record of 6-2-3. "We had a great season this year.

Everyone had a chance to play and to improve their skills," said Ryan Sink. Losing most of their starters to the varsity team, the J.V. baseball team came back to finish second in the RVD to Franklin County. "We got along really well this season. I hope to move up to varsity next year, but I have great memories of J.V.," said sophomore Clint Thomas.

The J.V. softball team, made up mostly of freshman, finished its season 7-4. "Winning over William Byrd was the highlight of the season. Theywere 32-0 before we beat them. We ended their win streak. We won the games that we did not expect to win," said sophomore Hayleigh Osborne.

ITSELF

Under the guidance of Mrs. Schons, the new Drama Club director, the Drama Club members showed off their talents more than ever. They held multiple performances of THE GLASS MENAG-ERIE and THE DIARY OF ANNE FRANK. They also performed a series of one act plays.

The newly begun Camaraderie Club allowed students to express their faith with a group of peers who held similar beliefs. They shared individual experiences with one other and exchanged prayers to uplift each other. The SCA donated much of its time to events in the school and community. Members sponsored the Talent Show, the Bon Fire Rally, and the Canned Food Drive for the homeless.

At the December Huddle meeting, FCA members Bill Rawlings, Doug Kenny April Faulkner, and Buc Corcoran sing holiday songs for the crowds of students. The Huddle meetings were held once a month at Calvary Baptist Church downtown for members of area high schools.

Afterschool practices let the band march into a superior season Nervous sophomores filed into the band room for the first rehearsal of the summer. The marching band practiced for a week before band camp to learn the music and dance routines. "I never thought that I would memorize all of my music! But after playing each song over and over again, I was able to play them in my sleep," said Sarah Farris. The drum line met separately for four days to learn the cadences. Band provided students new to the high school an opportunity to make friends. ***

The marching band traveled to Ferrum College for five days in August to learn the halftime show to be performed at football games. In order to battle the 100 degree weather, students practiced early in the morning and later in the evening. Some students experienced trouble with the cafeteria food. "After eating the chicken salad, I got very sick," said Jennifer Ross, "For the rest of the week, I only ate the fruit from the cafeteria." * * *

Rain caused the Homecoming Game scheduled for Friday night to be postponed until Saturday afternoon. The marching band, drill team, and flag corps could not play at the game because of the marching band festival in Pulaski. The band, Drill Team, Flag Corps, and percussion section all received superior ratings. "Since we didn't get back until 6 o'clock, I only had 45 minutes to get ready for the dance," said Tiffany Davidson. "It was pandemonium! I did my hair while my mom painted my toe nails."

For the end of the marching season, the marching groups performed their annual Stadium Review in the auditorium. Drill Team danced to Give Me Some Lovin and the Flag Corps performed a dance to Wild Thing. Majorette Kristen Dalton twirled to Eye of The Tiger. "During our flag routine, one of my friends in the audience was staring directly at me and made me so nervous that I dropped my flag. The flag made such a loud clanging noise that I wanted to run off the stage in embarrasment," said Jennifer Reed.

After 45 minutes of intense discussion about the student planned menu, the verdict was in, steak-ums would not be served that month. "Every time we have to pick the student planned menu C. J. wants to have steak-ums, but nobody else likes them," said Jessica Radecke. The Cafeteria Advisory Committee met the last Wednesday of every month during eighth period. The students tested new kinds of breadsticks, milkshakes, and breakfast foods. They reported student complaints about the cafeteria food to Ms. Annabell Barnes and looked for solutions to the problems. Members hope to create more of a variety for lunch. * * *

DECA members travelled to Tanglewood Mall two weeks before Christmas to participate in the Christmas Cheer program. They helped Norfolk & Southern and Legget employees distribute clothes to needy children. DECA members helped run the fitting stations and acted as guides. The children received pants, sweaters, socks, and underwear. After they chose their clothing, students wrapped them up, put a toy into each package, and sent them to their homes for Christmas. * * *

Getting up at 5:00 in the morning seems early to some, but for FCA members it was a way to get together and share their religious beliefs with others. Meetings took place each month and each chapter was responsible for leading them at least once. Students participated in a skit where Stephen Kunkle acted like an old man in a nursing home. Angela McClung sang I'm Praying for You, and Jessica Radecke closed the session with a prayer. "Everyone there has something in common, and that is what makes us one," said Jessica Altizer.

Appearing on television was an exciting event that Class Room Quiz contestants Kevin Ventura, Brian Finucane, Peter Nevin, and Maneesh Jain got to experience by competing in the educational game show. Staunton River proved to be no match for Cave Spring, who won their first round, but when students went up against Blacksburg for the second round they lost. A CONNECTION

MAKING

By listening to students, joining for Bible study, and performing on stage, students were able to make a connection.

While some students lounged at the pool or traveled around the world during the summer, PALS volunteered their time at the guidance office. Students answered phones, mailed letters, shredded detention slips and showed around new students to help guidance prepare for the beginning of the school year. "I was showing around this new guy and he went into the bathroom. After waiting outside for 20 minutes, I finally decided to leave," said Kristen Grunewald.

At the end of August, Brian Sharp, Kelly Thorne, Ms. Toni Tillman, Mrs. Amy Barnhart, and Whitney Freeman traveled to Richmond for the Governor Conference on Education. After applying to speak at the conference, the Natural Helpers received their invitation to attend the event. Brian and Kelly, the youngest speakers at the conference, answered questions about the Natural Helper program.

Natural Helpers went to the annual meeting at Arnold R. Burton to practice their peer listening skills and discuss how to handle common problems among students. "This is a great time-you talk to nice people from other schools and get a free lunch," said Alex Phillips. After transforming the stage into a hideaway attic for Jews from World War II, the Drama Club performed The Diary of Anne Frank. "We rented furniture from a store and were surprised to get a pink couch. Ziyhad said that we would have to return it because it clashed with his clothes," said Marci Radike.

Teaming up with the William Byrd High School Drama Club, the two groups performed one act plays during the evening on Saturday, March 23. Members performed Take Five, a comedy play. They acted out the play for competition. Carrie Shelton received the best actress award. Tickets cost $5 and $3 for seniors.

For the first year, students could participate in a more in depth Bible study with the Camaraderie Club. Formed by students, the Camaraderie Club met every Tuesday at 7:30 a.m. Students discussed issues relating to their lives, prayed for each other, and sang praise songs. "Since Camaraderie is a smaller group, everyone has a chance to discuss how they feel about things," said Lisa Mayhue. Is it a plane? Is it a bird? No, it's Santa Claus! Art Club members constructed a six foot Santa out of paper, stuffing, and wooden rods. Members hung Santa from the lobby with clear fishing wire.

"It took us so long to keep Santa from falling apart and it was really hard to get him from the art room to the lobby," said Ritu Maghera. The Santa took two days to make and three hours to hang. Members also wrapped packages to be displayed in the lobby and drew Christmas elves that they hung on the walls. Flowers, formal dresses, tuxedos, and Prom Promise were all a part of Prom this year. SADD sponsored Prom Promise and members passed out slips at lunches.

"I'm really glad that they have the promise because I want to remember the fun I had- not who died," said Monty Drummond. * * *

The Art Show this year wasn't just for entertainment; it was also an exam. Art students picked a theme and created their own gallery on paper. OF THEIR TRADES

For the first year ever Cave Spring girls had a chance to compete in lacrosse with schools around the valley. The girls may not have had many victories but the amount that the team learned was great. Lauren McCann and Brooke Frazer were the captains of the team. The team was made up of mostly beginners but some had played from three to five years.

The boy's lacrosse season this year was not only outstanding but full of injuries too. There fortunately weren't any broken bones but there were blood clots, bruises to the bones, and sprained ankles. Eric Walrond was among the injured with the bruise to the bone. "No one believed that we would ever get our own team," said Michelle Altic. The lacrosse team beat the odds and found a coach and competition. "We've been trying for two years to get enough girls to play and finally we got them all," said Nicole Proffitt. Donna Galligan, a teacher at Madison, became the girl's coach. "I'm really proud of all of the girls, they all tried their hardest and I hope that next year we can get more girls to come out," said Galligan. The shrill sound of the referee's whistle could be heard often during the girl's lacrosse games. Contrary to what some people think the girl's game of lacrosse is very different from the boy's and there are many penalties. "We didn't have any contact in our games so both of the teams playing got called a lot on illegal body contact," said Michelle Lancaster.

Returning with giant smiles on their faces, the girl's lacrosse team won its first victory. The team had travelled to Chapel Hill and the fifteen member team beat the thirty member Chapel Hill team. Yearbook and newspaper staff members got to experience college life early when they attended publication camps at Gettysburg College and Ball State over the summer. They learned more about creating designs and how to make their writing more interesting. Yearbook editors, Sarah Clyburn and Keith Holland created the theme for this year's yearbook and received superior ratings for their ideas. "A boy's baseball camp was there at the same time we were and they would always sit in the window and moon us from their dorm room," said Carolyn Pinkerton.

ALL TOGETHER

Sophomore class picked up shampoos, soaps, deodorants, and razors during the toiletries drive. The toiletries were given to local charities. Annie Nash said, "We felt like we needed to help people get the necessities of life. We take toiletries for granted and we don't realize that some people may not be able to buy them." Annie ran the drive for sophomore council.

Senior council carried on the great Knights' tradition for graduation. The senior class set up the annual senior breakfast which was followed by Senior Day. " I really loved Senior Day because we were the center of attention for the whole school," said Patrick Sparks. "The breakfast was really good. They had so much food for us all to eat," said Marci Archuleta. The Senior Breakfast was catered by Chris' Catering.

Most seniors couldn't look toward the next week, much less the end of the year. senior council members had to look towards graduation at the beginning of the year. They planned all senior activities and had to find caterers, musicians and labor. The Prom Committee cut, pasted, hung, and climbed ladders for Prom. Most people were doing their nails or hair but not these few committed Juniors. "We worked really hard to make Prom as wonderful as we could this year," said Sarah Hopkins. The decorations were mostly of black streamers and silver and black balloons.

Shaking with fear, the sophomores stepped up to the library podium. They were getting ready to do their sophomore class election speeches. "I wasn't really scared because it was only a camera and it wasn't like we were talking to the whole student body," said Molly Henderson. "I really hoped that I wouldn't mess up my speech because it actually took me a while to write it," said Daniel Penn. " My speech was a little cheesy," said Spencer.

Hanging posters, making stickers, and giving out candy were a few of the candidates' tactics for winning a seat in the sophomore council. David Crisafi handed out buckets of Jolly Ranchers with his name taped on the sides. "I guess it must have worked if I won," he said.

The SCA started off the new school year by sponsoring the teacher luncheon. Each officer brought in a different food dish. As a tradition, the new teachers received an apple with their names on it.

With the bonfire, spirit week, and the Homecoming Court, SCA kept busy during October. In preparation for the bonfire, the SCA contacted the Fire Marshall, held auditions for bands, and organized games.

The SCA organized a Spirit Week for fall and for spring. Students dressed up in the fall for hat day, hippie day, dork day, future day, and black and red day. In the spring, students created outfits for just got out of bed day, twin day, and hat and college t-shirt day. "A lot of the teachers didn't want a Spirit Week at all in the spring, so we had to compromise on three days," said Lynn Moore.

"The crowns looked expensive, but we bought them at Captain Party!" said Julie Ann Sgori. Tolerating the stench of rotting garbage, SCA members took turns recycling the aluminum cans. Coca-cola donated white recycling bins for the school. "Mr. Myers would get in his old clothes and wade through the cans to separate the garbage before taking it off to be recycled," said Mrs. Julie Myers. "He would smell so bad afterwards that he had to take his clothes off in the garage before coming in the house."

In the fall, SCA members Nancy Dixon and Stephen Kunkle started the spirit club Medieval Maniacs for the first year. The Medieval Maniacs had t-shirts and noise makers. Through the Booster Club, they received a special admission rate for sports games.

For a fundraiser, the SCA held its annual peanut sale in the fall. Each SCA member was asked to sell at least two to three tins of peanuts.

The SCA had the school nominate students for Boys and Girls State, a mock government camp. The SCA tallied the votes and sponsored the students who were elected to go to the camp over the summer.

The drama club acted out an exerpt from the play The Diary of Anne Frank and the band and choir performed holiday songs. A police officer spoke to the students on the dangers of drinking and driving. "I'm glad a police officer spoke to us," said Ryan Boitnott. "The holidays are such a dangerous time to drive."

Not only did the snow cancel exams for students this winter, but is also canceled the annual cystic fibrosis program sponsored by the SCA. The SCA did get to sponsor Save a Sweetheart for the American Heart and Lung Association in February. They put up posters warning about the hazards of smoking and helped take a poll for the American Heart Association on teenagers and smoking. Students donated 56 pints of blood in the annual blood drive for the Red Cross. "I didn't eat enough for breakfast," said Rebecca Phoenix, "so after I gave blood I got very light headed. They wheeled me over to a special cot and I had to lay back with my feet in the air!"

After debating on the design for the next year's handbook, the SCA had the art classes design a cover for next year. Students used the handbook to write down their homework assignments and look up school events. Hilari Wetzel's design for the cover won.

After a fire destroyed the Leftwich's house and killed five of their family members, the SCA took up donations from the each of the homerooms. In only two days, the students contributed over $650 for the family.

A DIFFERENCE

Every Wednesday Key Club members went to West End Center to tutor elementary school children from the city. Students spent an hour with the children and helped them with math and reading. "Sometimes they are hard to control, but working with the kids makes me feel fortunate for the childhood I've been given and the environment in which I learn," said Laura Phipps.

Just before the holidays Key Club officers got a notice that a handicap student in the area wasn't going to have a Christmas because his family didn't have a lot of money. They donated $50 to him and gave his family canned food. They also prepared over 300 stockings for the Salvation Army and took two cars full of cans to the Rescue Mission for needy families.

For the biggest fundraiser of the year Key Club sold environmental tee shirts to raise money for wildlife organizations, and to send their officers to the annual convention. "It's a good compromise because we get some of the profit and the rest goes towards environmental groups like Greenpeace," said senior representative Sara Reid. They sold over 300 tee shirts.

The big snow left many cats homeless so Key Club members decided to work at the animal shelter since they were short-handed. They donated food and cat litter that students brought in. "There are so many animals that need homes especially adult cats. I'm glad that we could help out," said April Plott.

As students crowded into the gym for the first meeting of the year, Key Club officers led them in a cheer called Cave Spring in the Stands. They learned the cheer at a conference in Richmond over the summer. "We decided to use the cheer to get peoples' attention and boost Key Club's membership." said Kelly Stewart. This meeting had one of the biggest turnouts of the year.

To show teacher appreciation, Key Club members decorated small pumpkins and placed them in teachers' boxes. Members received 25 points for designing the pumpkins which teachers placed on their desks at Halloween. "This was our first project of the year, and we had lots of people participate. I'm glad we did something to show the teachers we appreciate them," said Montgomery Drummond.

Key Club challenged Salem High School to a coat drive competition in November. Members brought in coats to help the Salvation Army. The coats were laid out across Salem's football field and judges counted them during half-time at the Salem-Cave Spring football game. Key Club brought in over two hundred coats, but couldn't beat Salem who had almost four hundred coats.

Spending Saturday afternoons picking up trash kept Key Club members busy during the fall. They were responsible for keeping the area from Penn Forest Elementary to Cave Spring Junior clean. Members split up into groups and each group worked on a certain section of the road. They picked up everything from bottles to cigarette butts. "I hated wearing those orange vests because whenever a car passed you could see them laughing at us," said Ashley Chapman.

Building homes for Habitat for Humanity gave Key Club members a way to help those less fortunate. They built homes and cleared away bushes at Habitat headquarters. "One Saturday we had to cut down bushes along a fence so that the police could keep an eye out because people were stealing things from Habitat.," said Josh Holmes. Students hammered nails, cut boards, and put up walls to help finish the homes quickly.

The time between 8:25 am and 3:10 pm was not a fair measure of the complexity of students' lives. After school, students headed to work, sports practice, tutoring, and club activities. Others headed home or to the library to tackle challenging homework or to complete projects. Throughout the year, students tested out new experiences and freedoms by attaining driving licences or getting body piercings.

Seniors planned their future while the juniors took the SAT's and dealt with increasing workloads. The senior officers organized graduation activities while junior officers organized prom.

The diversity of the school population contributed to many interesting experiences. All of the creative characters in the school played an important part in creating the story of the school year. THE GAVEL BANGS ON THE TABLE AS they call order to the meeting.

Students reps from schools all over the state met over the summer for Boys' and Girls' State. Boys' State was held at Liberty College in Lynchburg and Girls' State was at Longwood College in Farmville.

The students had to work together to make a mock government to run cities. Then the cities had to come together to form a state government. The students had to come up with government positions and responsibilities and then run for office.

"Working on the mock election opened my mind and gave me a different aspect of the state and the people in it," said senior April Faulkner.

Happily EXEMPT

SENIORS WORK TO BE EXEMPT FROM EXAMS

YOUR SENIOR YEAR IS FINALLY HERE. You have senior privileges, your senior prom, and graduation to enjoy. One thing that students sometimes forgot to look forward to was senior exemptions.

Senior exam exemptions not only made things easier for students but also helped out teachers. Mrs. Sherry Richardson said, "Exemptions are a great way to reward students who have worked to maintain an A or B during the second semester."

"I'm exempt from all but two of my exams. Exemptions make you want to get better grades so you don't have to take exams," said Robert Clark.

Rachael Perrott was excited to be exempt from all her exams. "It gave me a lot more free time out of school to concentrate on other things," said Rachael.

BEFORE CLASS STARTS, CJ JOHNSTON AND Tiffanie Jackson hand attendance slips to Ms. Liz Schons. One of the requirements for being exempt from exams was to miss no more than five days of school in the second semester.

"I think exemptions are a good policy, but we have so much to get done the last few days of school to keep our grades up for exemptions, it might be easier just to take the exams," said Buc Corcoran.

Each year, teachers talk about the possibility of exemptions being taken away. "I don't think they'll take them away because the students would complain too much," said Robert.

CHOICES THAT AFFECT THE REST OF YOUR LIFE ARE SCARY

WHILE OTHER STUDENTS ARE ENJOYing a day at school, some seniors took a day off to visit prospective colleges.

"I went to visit four colleges to see what their campus looked like, how the people interacted with each other, and what there was around the campus to do," said senior Julie Hartman.

"I went to the schools expecting to find a nice campus and an open atmosphere. I looked more at the academics because I wanted to go into business," said senior Chad Wendorf.

Different schools could offer the appropriate classes depending upon the students' planned majors.

Students' experiences at the school gave them a better idea of college life and helped them determine if the school lived up to the college brochures.

Personal Touch

INDIVIDUALITY IS EXPRESSED THROUGH STUDENTS' CARS

ON SUNDAY, OCTOBER 1, THE APpearance of senior Chris "Obie" Obenshain's 1980 Honda Civic forever metamorphosed from metallic blue to the "Happy Fun Mobile." Random at first, the spray painting set into a neat plan: the gas cap became a smiley face, the front right panel turned into a safari camouflage, a compass rose was on the roof, Calvin the cartoon character was there with a crazed expression on his face, and rasta stripes were on the bumper.

"It's just nifty. It has its own sense of humor, and it doesn't fit into one category, just like me," said Obie.

Though most students didn't go to the extreme of spray painting, they did find ways to exhibit their individuality. Se-

Finding the Time A JOB AND A LIFE...SO THAT'S WHY STUDENTS DON'T DO WORK

BALANCING WORK, SCHOOL, SPORTS, and a social life takes up so much of a student's time who has time for homework? While some students were able to find time in between activities for assignments, others had to struggle to find time.

"I worked at Holiday Inn 16 to 24 hours a week, along with band, youth symphony, flute lessons, church activities, and trying to find time to go out with friends," said senior Anna Rae. "Luckily, I could do some of my homework at work," said Anna.

Senior Natalie Newman didn't have it so easy. "I worked at the Roanoke Athletic Club. I tried not to take too many hours during the week, but I couldn't do my assignments at work," said Natalie.

Some students participated in the marketing program which required them to work for a grade.

"I worked at Leggett where I was graded on how well I work. My teacher got a review from my employer," said senior Shaneque Perkins.

"You need to make free time for yourself. If you don't, you'll get burned out quickly," said Shaneque.

Slacking off

AS THE YEAR COMES TO AN END, STUDYING GETS HARDER

It's A DISEASE THAT MOST STUDENTS can't avoid. It is spread easily and can affect friends, family, and the whole class. Most seniors get it. It's known as SENIORITIS.

"Senioritis caused my grades to drop because everytime I tried to study I would get sick and fall asleep. I started to think "Who cares anymore?" said senior Stephanie Lee.

Senioritis struck at anytime in the year and for some students it struck before the year even started.

"Just the thought of leaving Roanoke, going to Texas, and school being over soon started my senioritis," said senior Brandy Dickson.

"It set in half way through the year for me. I knew I had made it half way when it hit me," said senior Kayleen English.

RELAXING ON A FLOAT AT THE LAKE, SENIORS Chris Johnston and Emily Benfield take a day to relax. Senioritis had effects on grades, projects, papers, and the chance for exam exemptions when seniors got it.

There is no real cure for this disease that can strike anyone at any given moment but some students found ways to hold off until the year ended.

"I kept telling myself it was the very last test and it was the last time I would have to study and it finally happened. I took my last test and I didn't have to take any exams," said Stephanie.

Celebrations

TIME TO KICK BACK, RELAX, AND ENJOY THE NIGHT OFF

"I JUST LIKE CHILLING, HANGING OUT, and having hardcore fun," as sophomore Patrick Welch summed up Friday nights. When the stands emptied after football games, students still had plenty of time to be with friends.

Students met in the parking lot to plan the rest of their evening. Downtown became a favorite hangout while other groups gathered outside Burger King and Katie's Ice Cream.

"My friends and I often went to Mill Mountain Coffee and Tea," said junior Susan Phipps. Students found that being downtown meant enduring confrontations with the police.

"It seems that it's okay for adults to stand in front of the Coffee Shop, but it's wrong for us to stand in front of the book store," said junior Julie Manuel.

AFTER THE FRIDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL GAME, students got together at senior Scott Scheuer's house. Band members Chris Obenshain, Scott Scheuer, Scott Aday, Kelly Patton, and Maria Harstine gather in the Scheuer's living room to watch and critique a tape of their performance.

Relaxing at a friend's house was another way to top off an evening. "All of the Marching Band goes to Scott Scheuer's house," said sophomore Robby Sinclair.

Senior Jon Saunders said, "I just go wherever. As long as my friends are there, I know I'll be having as much fun as possible."

SENIORPAPERS TOOK NOT ONLY A LOT OF TIME BUT TONS OF PATIENCE

JUNIORS HEAR THE WORDS AND SHUDder. It had become a terror for just about all students; senior research papers.

All seniors were required to write a research paper, and although some teachers limited the topic, the ideas to write about seemed intimidating.

Although the work was long and tedious, many students admitted that it was a good way to prepare for college.

"I thought it was a good idea to prepare us for the papers we'll have to write in college. We'll have to go by strict MLA grammar rules and get out point across without wandering in and out," said senior Danielle Ritter.

"Our paper went from being seven to ten pages to five to seven. I guess it was important; it gave us a good background," said senior Julie Thompson.

SENIOR BEN JOHNSTON STANDS BEFORE HIS English class presenting his senior research paper on alcohol while senior Anthony Maneen holds Johnston's poster. All seniors were required to write a paper although only a few English classes gave formal presentations.

Some students didn't seem to care how it benefited them. "I think we were babied too much. In college we won't be required to turn in note cards and outlines. It'll be completely our responsibility," said senior Eric Walrond.

"If senior papers are the worst we have to face in high school, I won't complain," said Danielle.

PREDICTIONS ARE MADE FOR LIFE AFTER HIGH SCHOOL

TEN YEARS FROM NOW, SOME PEOPLE may be finishing law school, starting their own families, or just deciding exactly what they want to do for the rest of their lives.

Junior Holly Adams hopes to be a happily married musical therapist. "I want to marry a kind man, and live anywhere but Roanoke," said Holly.

Sophomore Jacquelyn Martin wants to do something unique. "I want to study archaeology and Egyptology in college so I can become an Egyptologist. It would be an interesting career and I'd get to travel," Jacquelyn said.

"In the year 2006, I plan on living in a major city and working in a big law firm," said junior Dana Lazzuri. "I also want to have a family by then, too,"she said.

POSSIBLY AS PREPARATION FOR A CAREER IN acting, senior Cathy Niedzwiecki portrays Anne in the play, The Diary of Anne Frank. Leaning over Mrs. Frank, who is played by senior Marcy Radike, Anne rereads a poem she gave her mother for a Hannukah present.

Robbins both plan on receiving their veterinary degrees fom Virginia Tech. They want to establish their own practices, and Julie also hopes to breed American Saddlebred horses.

"I don't know exactly what I want to do after college, but I'm sure that whatever it is, it will be fun and exciting," senior Chris Jimeson concluded.

PROPER ATTIRE

STUDENTS DON'T SEE THE IMPORTANCE OF A DRESS CODE

"IT WAS ONLY THE SIZE OF A NICKEL," complained sophomore Lindsay Markey, when referring to the hole in her jeans that school personnel made her sew up.

Lindsay was not the only student who found the dress code unreasonable. Sophomore Justin Dowdy ran into the same problem. "My jeans had a tiny hole in them and I got sent home," he said.

Junior Luke Brown did not think he would be punished when he wore a shirt with an objectionable word on it, but administrators confiscated the shirt.

Dr. Martha Cobble's ideas about the necessity of a dress code differed from the students'. Her opinion was that "a code is necessary to prevent distractions in the classroom."

She found that the main problems were with students who wore t-shirts with obscene words or pictures, clothes with holes in them, and clothing that was too revealing.

When a student wore clothes that went against the dress code, the usual punishment for the student was to change clothes or to go ISD for the rest of the day. In the case of an obscene t-shirt, Dr. Cobble took the shirt and returned it to the student's parents.

Higher Altitudes WHERE BIRDS FLY AND STARS SHINES, LIFE IS AN ADVENTURE

REACHING TOP IS THE CHALLENGE many people face when it comes to rock climbing. This sport takes place as close as the Roanoke Park and Recreation building next to Victory Stadium to as far as Colorado. Many have joined the sport just to be with friends and have some fun.

Rock climbing has had a positive effect on its participants. "The challenge of climbing is cool. It makes you realize your fears as well as your strengths," said sophomore Dionne Waugh, "The good thing about climbing is that the person can go at his own pace. NEW FASHIONS WERE OB-SERVED DAILY IN THE HALLS

SCHOOL IS OFTEN REFERRED TO AS A fashion show. Here it was no different. While walking through the halls, a student could see many different types and styles of fashion. Some were outstanding and some were unique.

This year brought up many new fashions. These included body piercing, jelly shoes, and overalls. Some of the new fashions were not allowed in school due to the dress code.

Clothing like short shorts or cut offs were not allowed. Tank tops and midriff tops were also not allowed.

Junior Crystal Cobb said, "I think jelly shoes are comfortable and they are cute."

Girls returned to their childhood by wearing the sparkly shoes. Jelly shoes were made in a rainbow of colors.

"I wear my overalls on the days I want to be comfortable at school. The good thing is they go with anything so no matter what they always look fine," said junior Shannon Cox.

By wearing their own clothes students could easily express their innerselves and personalities. Clothing is a unique part of each person.

Taking command

LOCKERS SLAMMED, PAPERS RUSTLED, and voices chattered; the school year had begun. In the massive crowd, there were five students who stood out from the rest. They had been the "new" kids on the block for a whole year, but were now ready to take on the role of being old pros. They were determined to make their second year as successful as possible. They had been elected to serve as the leaders of their class: the Junior class officers. The officers started the year with new ideas and enthusiasm. President Montgomery Drummond said, "I knew when we had gotten the fundraiser started in early October, things would go well."

Junior Scott Shirley made car care a routine chore. "I tried to wash and vacuum my car every other weekend. I liked to pay special attention to cleaning out the front and back seats of my car," said Scott.

For junior Tommy Boothe, car cleanliness was not on the top of his priority list. "When I would get back from a drive in the country, I usually took time to wash the windows because I could hardly see out of them. Cleaning the whole car took too long, so I only cleaned it when it got

THIS IS MARY AND THIS IS JOHN. WE can't come to the phone right now, but if you leave a message we will get back

When attempting to get in touch with a friend and the answering machine picks up, the decision to leave a message or hang up was always hard to make.

Sophomore Julie Mullins said, "I only chines. Once, I called Betsy Allen about leave a message if it's really important because I think answering machines are annoying to talk to."

WHILE CALLING HER BOYFRIEND JEFF LANG, Tiffany Jackson waits to see if his answering machine will pick up or if he is at home. "I usually leave messages for my friends so that way they will call me back so I can talk to them about whatever I called them for," said Tiffany.

AFTER COMING HOME FROM BEING OUT ALL day, Lee Willard checks his answering machine to see if he has any messages. Students often came home and found messages from their friends asking them to return their call because they have good news or they want to go out.

Local sounds

IN EVERY LARGE BAND THERE WAS A playing, but after a while they got into it, small start. Just as Liverpool was to the Beatles, Roanoke was to Flip Flop, Monkey Trick, Quell, Equity and many other local bands. These bands got their starts at the Iroquois, the Teen Center, and friend's parties. Many of them played to get aggression out, express themselves artistically, or to just have fun.

Senior Maurice Strausbaugh of Flip Flop said, "I sing how I feel. If at the time I wrote the song I felt like rapping something out I'd do it. So if I felt like screaming that's how I'd sing."

"The bonfire was a fair amount of fun. The crowd took a while to respond to our which was a big plus," said Shawn.

To some band members, music was a future for them and not just a way to spend time. It was also an outlet to express a side of them that no one saw.

Billy Chase said, "It was good to see people play when you knew they were putting all of their souls into it.'

For those thinking about joining a band Shawn said, "Don't step on anyone else and watch out for the underdogs because that's what you'll be when you start out."

Billy said, "Play around with your friends and have fun, somethings bound to happen. If that doesn't work, make a lot of flyers and give them to all of your friends."

FOR SOME

"I THINK OUR school MOTTO IS good because having honor encourages good behavior," s o p h o m o r e Kerry Fair. 'HONOR - SCIENTIA, SED MAIOR EST Honor' is the motto printed on the shield of Cave Spring High School. Translated as 'Honor - Knowledge, but greater is honor,' the phrase has survived many decades at the school. Students have expressed different interpretations and thoughts concerning this motto.

Sophomore Catie Harmon related the motto to cheating. "Some kids thought that unless they got an A, they weren't smart, so they'd cheat to look smart. The motto reminded that both were important, but being truthful was more important," said Catie. Charlotte Horan, a sophomore, said that the motto was right in that honor was greater than knowledge. "Knowledge was a great thing, but before that, you had to have honor to show that you could be trusted," said Charlotte. Senior Adrian Wray disagreed saying, "Knowledge was greater than honor. You could have all the honor in the world and not get anywhere. Not having knowledge would be like having a car without keys."

Sophomore Kerry Fair related the motto to sports activities because, "You have to have knowledge of rules and skills for a sport but first you would need to have honor and trust in your teammates and in the players on the other teams. It contributes to good sportsmanship."

Sophomore Susan Doyle suggested a new motto, 'Be True to Yourself,' from Shakespeare's Hamlet. Trish Reed, a sophomore, said she thought, "School mottoes were important, but it was the personal mottoes that really mattered.

Alexa Thacker

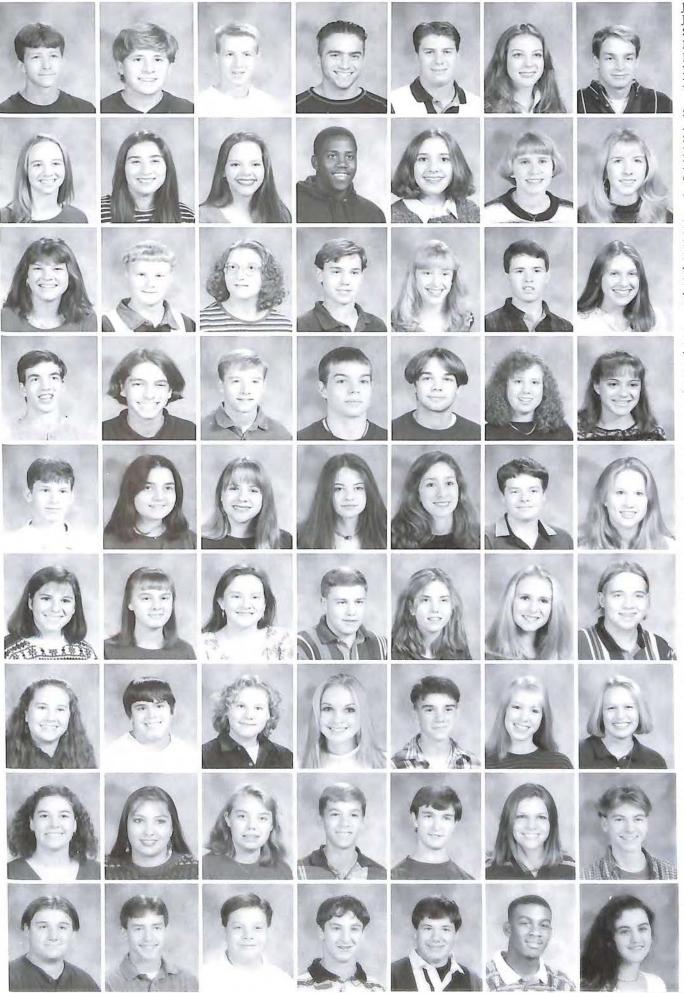

TAKING A TEST IN MS. LINDA LONG'S THIRD period class, senior Allison LaCombe uses one of the cover sheets provided by the teacher to help prevent cheating. "The cover sheets are good to have in case someone 'accidentally' looks on your paper," said sophomore Susan Doyle.

"Writing letters gives you something to do when you're bored. It's nice to know you have a place to visit," said Nikki.

Writing proved to be beneficial for students as well as a way to keep in touch. "It's a way to openly express what you feel. It's an inexpensive way to stay close to people. Some things you can write in a letter you just can't call up and say on the phone," said Mandi.

It became hard for people to find time to write which often resulted in late nights. "I always write at night around twelve or one, long after I've finished my homework," said Kelly.

YOUNG LOVE

"I realized that I liked him a lot when he went away to college and I really missed him," Mrs. Pat Carr. SOME OF THE FONDEST MEMORIES teachers ever had were those of their first loves. Whether it was a obsession with a teen idle or a steady girl or boyfriend, one of the main things that teachers always seemed to remember from high school were their first crushes.

For Mrs. Pat Carr, her husband was her first love. They met in high school when she was an outgoing sophomore and he was a shy senior. "He remembered the first outfit he ever saw me wear," said Mrs. Carr.

"While we were in high school, we didn't really date, but we knew each other. When he came home after his freshman year in college, he called and we began dating. We've been married 27 years," said Mrs. Carr.

Mrs. Marilyn Hammes's boyfriend in high school was her first love. "We did everything together," said Mrs. Hammes.

That relationship ended and eight years ago Mrs. Hammes met her husband, Mr. Charles Hammes when they were sharing a classroom. "We dated in high school and decided to go to college together," she said.

Mrs. Claudia Geiger's first love was named Johnny. "He gave me my first kiss in eighth grade in the back seat of a car," she said. "We didn't date steadily through high school, but we could always use each other for a date when we needed one," she said.

"He's living in New York now," said Mrs. Geiger. She always knew where he was and what he was doing after high school.

Emily Finton

INTHEIR LAST YEAR OF TEACHING TOGETHER before they both retire, Mr. Mike and Mrs. Sherry Stevens help each other out in a science room. Like the other teachers who work with their spouses, they didn't see each other much during the school day.

HAVING A RARE MOMENT TOGETHER BEFORE homeroom, Mr. Charles and Mrs. Marilyn Hammes talk as they start their day. "We're on opposite ends of the building, so we don't usually see each other during school," said Mrs. Hammes.

THE STUDENT THAT LENDED A HELPING HAND COULDN'T BE THE

"I HAVE HAD former students ask me if they could be an aide to get out of their study Hall. If no one else asked and they were responsible then I let them be my aide," Mrs. Linda George. TEACHER'S DET

As THE TEACHER PASSES THE PAPERS back, there is one thing that every student in the room notices . . . the handwriting on the paper is one they have never seen. It's the handwriting of the teacher's aide.

Many teachers had their students or former students come in during their study halls to lend a helping hand. Doing busy work, helping the class, or running errands, students could be found helping teachers in many ways.

"My aide helped me with lab set up and clean ups. I couldn't have survived without my aide. They helped me grade labs when there was just one correct answer and they helped with busy work," said Mrs. Linda George.

Not all Student aides worked directly with teachers. Students were also Office, Guidance, Library, Career Lab, or I.S.D. aides where they ran errands and did their homework.

"Mrs. [Roberta] Ventura asked me to be a Guidance aide last year so I decided to do it again. It's a whole lot better then study hall because you can talk," said senior Eric Walrond.

Planning sessions were a good time for teachers to become better acquainted with their students.

As the year went on, teachers found the help more useful and were grateful that the students had given up their study halls to help them.

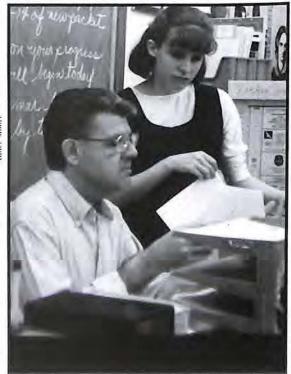

Being a teacher's aide also helped the students in the long run. It taught them responsibility and how to manage their time to get everything done.

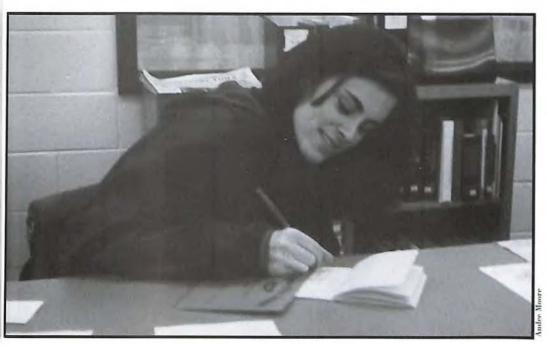

ANDEE MOORE

DURING HER EIGHTH PERIOD STUDY HALL, senior editor-in-chief Courtney Wimberley consults with the newspaper sponsor Mr. Gene Osborn about the layout she is working on. Editors of newspaper and yearbook became teacher's aide to finish their work.

WRITING OUT LIBRARY PASSES FOR STUDENTS to do research during their study halls, sophomore Elizabeth Barrett helps out the librarians. Library aides checked out books, handed out and collected newspapers in study halls, and ran errands for the librarians.

"In the sixties, people were more ambitious and realistic. They also had stronger values, such as honesty and respect," Mrs. Sarah Sink.

KIDS GROWING UP WITH TYE-DYE AND BELL BOTTOMS ARE FOWER CHILDREN

EACH GENERATION OF PEOPLE HAS developed their own style of clothing, music, and values. Over the years, lifestyles have changed, but people have kept old memories alive.

"The popular style of clothing for girls in the sixties was white bobbi socks, sweaters, and straight skirts. Boys wore white socks, loafers, and nice pants," said Mrs. Sarah Sink.

In the late sixties and early seventies, long hair became trendy for both boys and girls, and bell bottoms, tye-dyed shirts, and platform shoes were brought onto the scene.

Mrs. Sink believed that schoolwork was a little less difficult in the sixties than today. "Schools now have more choices of classes. There are also better opportunities for gifted students today," said Mrs. Sink.

Mr. Wayne Hyatt said, "When I was a teen, I used to enjoy hanging out at the drugstore or at a friend's house after school. It was fun to go picnicing and hiking, too. Dances were also big events that most people liked," said Mr. Hyatt.

Wishing she could have lived back in those times, sophomore Liz Kiser said, "I was born in the wrong decade. Back then, people had more freedom, and, since there was a war going on, everyone was into making the world peaceful. I'd love to travel back to that time of peace, love, and war."

BEFORE THE BELL RINGS FOR CLASS, Sophomores Lindsay Higginbotham and Rhonada Rusmisel take time to talk. As a flashback from the seventies, they wear the fashion some teachers may have worn back in that time.

DECKED OUT IN HER SIXTIES TYE-DYE, SENIOR Cassie Edwards was just one of the many people who dressed up for Hippie Day. "It's kind of fun to dress in the old styles every once in a while. It's also a neat way to show school spirit," said sophomore Amber Neil.

SETTING The Stage

The Key Club helped the community in many ways. Club members donated some of their time in the Adopt -a -Highway program cleaning up the trash on the roads. They also tutored children at the West End Center for underprivileged students. Helping collect food for the local RAM, SCA sponsored a Canned Food Drive.

Along with holding monthly meetings, SADD sponsored assemblies such as the Motivational Media Assembly and had informational weeks filled with statistics to keep students informed of the effects of drinking and driving.

Working at the Teen Line, students volunteered their time to listen to the problems of troubled teens. Students worked monthly shifts to help others.

Getting his face painted by Josh Crane acting as the Grim Reaper. junior Josh Casker "died" during the SADD sponsored week. The week was held to make students aware of the effects of drinking and driving.

Handing out plates for the Pancake Breakfast sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, Karen Rouse and Chistina Childress volunteer their time with the Key Club. The breakfast was held in the Towers parking lot for anyone who was hungry.

"Stranger than Fiction," volume 40 of the Cave Spring High School Accolade, was printed by Jostens Publishing Company in Winston Salem, North Carolina with a press run of 850 copies.

The theme and design was developed by Keith Holland and Sarah Clyburn at the Gettysburg Yearbook Experience. The endsheets, title page, opening, dividers, and closing pages were designed by Sara and Keith. Section editors developed section styles.

The 1995 Accolade, "A Natural Wonder," won the Virginia High School League Trophy award for the sixteenth year in a row.

Sara and Keith extend their thanks to Sharon Deibel for her help and constructive criticism at GYE that helped them to win the award for best theme design and development. Jeff Cannon, the Jostens printer representative, helped tremendously when things got confusing and complicated. The staff would also like to thank Jeff for bringing tasty treats to enjoy after deadlines.

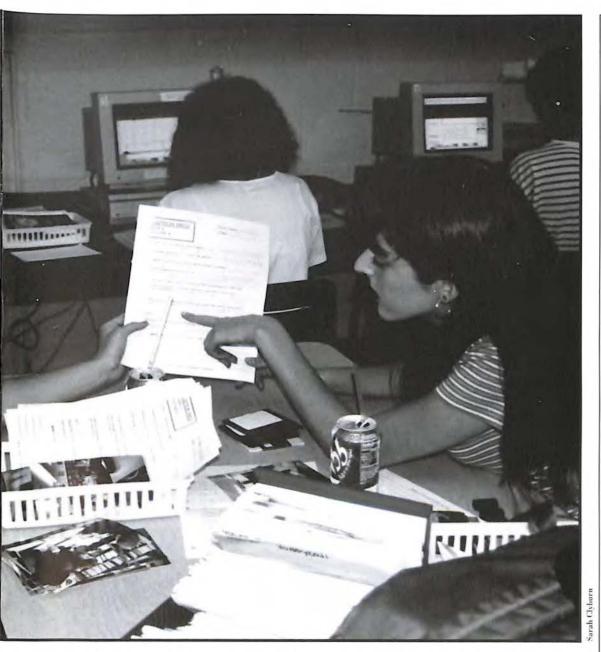

In order to uphold the Accolade tradition, a numerous amount of fonts were used in the production of the book. If you would like to know about our designs, call the school at (540) 772-7550.

To the 1996 yearbook staff- the editors would like to thank everyone for all of their cooperation, dedication, and hard work. Only staffers know how much work is involved in yearbook production.

To the graduating staff members- We hope that life will treat you well and your future will be full of joy. Kristen and Missy-Keith and Sarah trust that you will continue to uphold the tradition of the Accolade. The lone blue cropper will be left behind for you. Please take care of it!

Discussing information on a caption info sheet, Jennifer Perfater and Carolyn Pinkerton decide what to write in a caption. Carolyn, the editor of the clubs section, designed the section at GYE.

Pinting to the computer screen, section editorAndee Moore helps staff member Emily Finton with her spread design for the People section. Section editors helped new staff members learn principles of yearbook design and how to produce the publication using Aldus Pagemaker 5.0.

On Our Way

Maintaining a B average and to be exempt from exams were all that were on the minds of seniors during second semester. Preparing for the summer took over the minds of students as the year came to an end.

Anxious seniors huddled in the Civic Center bathrooms to give one last check to their caps before making an entrance on stage.

The audience recognized Mr. McClellan by giving him a round of applause for his years of service. Being congratulated by faculty, Carol Rolley leads the graduates out of the auditorium during the exit march. The band played Procession of the Knights written by Mr. Marvin Bentley during the march.
