November of 2011, I stood on the Siegel Center court in Richmond, embracing my team. One hand held a medal and one hand reached above my head, resting on a trophy for the state volleyball championship. I was blissfully happy. My team had just conquered the dream of every school in the state, and I was so happy for them. The huddle broke, and as we lined up on the court with our new golden cup, a hundred cameras catching our smiles, tears and disbelief, something hit me. This was it. We ended our season in the best way possible and imaginable, but we were finished. Volleyball was done forever. That particular team would never play another game together again. Or so I thought.

THZ TRIP

On the day we left, I woke up after about two hours of sleep. That was the day I had been awaiting for over six months. Nicaragua. I had written a bucket list of " 100 Things to do Before IDie" in the 9th grade, and going on a mission trip to a third world country was right at the top. That day was the start of a new journey.

Our coach Tamalyn Tanis had told us that if we wished, we could share the story of our faith while we were there. That meant that we could preach our life story to villagers.

Before I knew it, we were in Nicaragua. That first day, some of us found ourselves riding in the back seat of a pickup truck with Don, the organizer and founder of Because We Care Ministries, and our translator Nidia. As we pulled out of the hotel parking lot. a pickup truck drove by with three men sitting in the truck bed, infront of a soup they prepared. alumnae Morgan Shannon and Shannon Craighead and junior Olivia Sass ladle soup for villagers. The girls prepared a soup made of rice, chicken and vegetables for the village. "The look of desperation in their eyes for the food that we take for granted every day really broke my heart." Shannon said. coloring withlocal children, seniors Alyssa McKinley, Kendall Scott and Erin Holsinger relax after hiking to the top of Cacao Mountain, which amounts to a fourmile hike at a 4,000-feet elevation incline. "While the hike was really humid, extremely hot and on an unstable road, what we got to experience at the top of the mountain was totally worth it." Scott said. as children swarmher, alumna Shannon Craighead enjoys her new best friends while visiting Jinocuao. When the group arrived in this village, the children ran out of their school to see their visitors. "It was amazing to see the amount of joy a simple bubble could give them," Craighead said. pintar tusunas. or painting nails, senior Sarah Smith shares beauty tips with friends in Rodeo Grande. The group brought nail polish, bubbles, sports equipment, coloring books, crayons and other toys and games to share with children they met. "We brought a huge suitcase full of clothes shoes and toys. The kids would run out of their villages and the forest, trying to follow our bus and catch the items we would throw to them." Smith said.

passing out bracelets, Coach Tamalyn Tanis shows compassion through a small gesture. "Most American children would not get the same joy from the little, homemade bracelet but the Nicaraguan kids did and it was extremely rewarding being able to make them happy," senior Alyssa McKinley said. seatedina CIRCLE, players remove their knee pads and shoes and offer them to the Nicaraguan Junior National team. Coach Tamalyn Tanis then spoke about the importance of teamwork, not only on the court, but also in faith. "We were able to share our faith and story if we wanted to," senior Kendall Scott said. the teamis all smiles as they prepare to visit their first village, Villa Esperanza. Transportation was handled very differently in Nicaragua. "No one really observed a speed limit. Old schools buses were used for city buses. and they were crammed full. People even rode on top of the buses," senior Erin Holsinger said. dancing with thecrowd, alumna Shannon Craighead, senior Kendall Scott and junior Kallie Wilkes entertain village children while their families are being treated by the missionary doctor. "The kids were so sweet. wanting to play with you and receive attention and love," Wilkes said throwing candy from thebus window, Seniors Kendall Scott and Sarah Smith wait in anticipation to see the smiles of the kids who will run after the bus hoping for a treat "The best part was looking back after the bus had passed them. The kids would be dancing over a little piece of candy." Smith said. wading into the ocean, alumnae Shannon Craighead and Morgan Shannon, seniors Sarah Smith and Annice Link, and junior Kallie Wilkes coo off and get ready to witness their teammates' baptisms. "Getting baptized there was very special. It changed the trip and made it more meaningful." Sass said AHERD OF 40 VACAS make hiking down a mountain nearly impossible. A sudden rainstorm caused the animais to scatter and block the trail, "All l kept thinking was. 'Nothing like this has ever happened to me before," senior Annice L.ink said

"THEY'Dbe pulled over in a heartbeat if they were in the States," I joked, trying to break the silence. Then, as the pickup truck puttered away, a construction dump truck sped by in the opposite direction. It must have had 30 people in the back of it. At that moment I realized all safety and comfort I found at home in America had been stripped away from me. I couldn't stop staring with my mouth open, and watched the men casually hold on for their lives to the back and sides of a dump truck bed simply to get a ride somewhere.
"The rule for passengers in Nicaragua is this," Don said after noticing my eyes follow the dump truck down the road, "How many people can fit? One more."

OFFIGIALKYINGULTURESHOCK

In Villa Esparanza, one of our many stops, we were surrounded by smiling children before we stopped the truck. We hopped out and began to set up a volleyball net in their cow pasture. As we finished, I talked to two little girls in very bad Spanish, and got them to join a pepper circle that we had made. The kids hit the volleyball maybe three or four times before somebody would hit it out, but they had so much fun. We taught them techniques to dig, set and hit the ball. When I asked one of the girls if she liked to play volleyball, she said, "No puedo." (I can't). I was about to ask her what she meant, but her father called her from across the pasture. "Come take care of your brother." Her friend left, and the girl looked at me sadly, and said, "Tengo ayudar" (I have to help), before turning away.

We played with so many children while we were there, making them laugh and smile. In Rodeo Grande, we blew bubbles and painted nails. I played with the boys for a long time, until I saw a girl sitting in the center of the park by herself. I asked her, "Puedo pintar tus unas?" (Can I paint your fingernails?). She smiled and nodded. She already had the remains of green fingernail polish on her nails, so I had to paint the purple polish she had chosen over the green. When I painted the last of her nails, she said something to me I couldn't understand. I asked someone to translate. "She said, 'They're not painted." At first I thought she was criticizing the mediocre manicure, but when Ilooked back to her, she pointed to my own unpainted nails. Here I was, supposed to be serving her, and she wanted me to feel pampered too.

THE MORNHNG AFTER

The morning after I returned from Nicaragua, I couldn't seem to pull myself out from under the covers. Eventually, I got up and walked to my kitchen, where I re-heated a few pancakes in the microwave. I sat down and watched the news on our flat-screen TV. I began to eat my breakfast without washing my hands. I picked up a glass and filled it with water from the refrigerator without worrying about checking to see if it was safe to drink. I sat back down, and thought, "This feels so wrong."

I realized when we left the Dulles Airport, our car trip was the first one in a week I had used a seat belt in. I was back in my comfort zone now, and so was the rest of my team.

"THEone thing which really stood out to me in the past week was the smiles. The smiles of the children as we played catch with them, painted their nails and braided their hair. The smiles of their parents seeing their kids so happy, and seeing them go to sleep for just one night with a full belly. The smiles of my teammates and coaches. laughing and singing and loving like they never had before. Everyone was so happy there, even though they had nothing.

globe trotters STUDENTS EXPLORE THE WORLD AROUND THEM DURING SUMMER ADVENTURES

The thrill of visiting a foreign county, living in a different culture and escaping the tediousness of a repetitive schedule was hard to resist for travelers with curiosity and adventurous spirits.

Some students visited foreign countries as part of a fun vacation, such as senior Ebony Ruffin and her family.
"I went to Mexico with my family for relaxation and fun times away from the United States," she said.

Others traveled due to family obligations or exchange opportunities, but enjoyed themselves just as much. Junior Kallie Wilkes had the opportunity to live in New Zealand for a few months because of her dad's job. Senior Lisa Istad traveled abroad during the school year as well. However, she traveled from her homeland of Norway to the United States as an exchange student.

Also spending some time as exchange students were senior sisters Kathryn and Lauren Butler. They traveled to Normandy, one of Roanoke's Sister Cities.
"I learned how important knowing a foreign language is. There are many beautiful places in the world that can only be seen by learning a language." Kathryn Butler said.

the doctor is in A JUNIOR GETS THE CHANCE TO EXPLORE THE BODY, BOTH INSIDE AND OUT

Nominated by the National Youth Leadership Forum (NYLF) and teachers, junior Mehgan Giammona attended a summer session of the medicinal branch of the NYLF in Washington, DC. The forum was broken into three parts. Giammona was nominated and accepted in the NYLF on Medicine and was invited to participate in a two-week program, where she met other students from all over the country who shared the same goals and wanted to gain more knowledge about the medical field. The program took place in Washington, D.C., and was very close to the White House.
"I am very interested in the field of medicine and thought it would be a great experience. I was around some of the most influential doctors in the United States. Meeting doctors of all nationalities was an awesome part of NYLF, and I would never trade this experience for anything," she said.

One of the most fascinating experiences during the duration of the NYLF was being able to handle and examine cadavers. While at the Medical School of Maryland, the students went to the morgue and were able to touch body parts and organs.
"At first I thought it was pretty gross, but later on I got used to the idea," she said.

Students had fun as tourists too, visiting museums and The White House.
"I recommend National Youth Leadership Forum on Medicine for students who aspire to pursue the medical field. The ten-day experience really opened my eyes to a career in the medical industry," she said.

BEACH BUDS.
Every summer, siblings sophomore Ryan Smith and senior Sarah Smith spend a week at Oak Island, North Carolina with their family. "We've been going to this beach since I was two, and it's my favorite part of the summer," R. Smith said.

Siblings Colleen and Patrick
Truskey and their family traveled to Guatemala over the summer as part of a churh mission trip suggested by a family friend. Colleen, a senior, shared her journal from the journey.

SAYING GOODBYE.
A little girl named Ofi hugs senior Colleen Truskey to say goodbye on the last day of her mission trip. On this day, the Truskeys and their group visited the Kairos House, located in Guatemala City, where families can get food, shelter and medical treatment. "Ofi was staying there because she had a severe illness and needed medical attention," the senior said. "She was one of the sweetest children 1 met while staying in Guatemala."

Guatemala cannot be summed up in a word or phrase. It was a place of contrast and clash. The disparities were inescapable no matter where we went.

For example, Guatemala City during the day was a city of claustrophobia. The traffic crawled around us, the signs and buildings jammed together in a disorienting array of conflicting color, the whole metropolis murmured with the heat and day-to-day lives of millions of people. At night, however, when the air cooled and the streets cleared, the city was a sprawling expanse of lights. Homes, slums and skyscrapers alike glimmered for miles, swallowed only by the darkness of high volcanoes.

The cities and towns weren't the only manifestation of Guatemala's incongruences though. The trip was my first real exposure to legitimate poverty. Not just the need that goes along with temporary joblessness, natural disaster or other transient circumstances, but poverty that had become a way of life, a perpetual existence.

Seeing such circumstances framed by the hospitality, kindness and welcoming nature of the people experiencing it was astonishing. I still can't fully wrap my mind around what $I$ experienced there, and probably never will, but I remain ever grateful and appreciative of the trip.

ON THE LAST DAY OF THE TRIP, the volunteers take plenty of pictures together so they remember their life-changing experience. The Truskey family went to Guatemala with a church group from Pennsylvania after a long-time family friend contacted them and suggested the mission trip would be a worthwhile experience.
"From this trip, I learned we are all blessed beyond what we know and we should not take anything for granted," sophomore Patrick Truskey said.

AMa normal high-school student during the day, one who worries about tests, what's for lunch and any other normal and random thought that enters a teenager's mind. But, after school, I turn into something else. Most students head home when they hear that $3: 20$ bell. For me, however, that bell signifies the start of my other life: the life of a firefighter. Ijuggle school and the duties of a volunteer firefighter. While I'm not a full-fledged firefighter yet, when I'm not in school I act as one. Currently, I'm stationed at Back Creek Company 11.

I've been running calls with Back Creek for about nine months now and I love it. I've always wanted to help people and now I am. Also, Ilove the rush of adrenaline you get when responding to a call. You never know exactly what you're getting into when you respond to an emergency. Any time I can help someone and get a "thank you," Ifeel pride. Even that little "thank you" feels like a million thanks at all once. Basically, helping others makes me feel amazing.

A lot of hard work goes into my volunteer work and firefighter training. On Monday and Wednesday nights we have something called academy training. Then I'm on duty Tuesday, Thursday and the weekends. Some of the training involves being in simulated fire situations. While in these trainings, we'll black out our masks so we can't see a thing. It's as if we're in a real fire. You can't see anything because of the smoke. You better make sure that being in enclosed areas doesn't scare you any because you have to crawl and work your way through some tight and dark spaces.

Even though all of my outside-of-school life is spent at Station 11 and some may feel like I'm missing out on other teenage stuff, Ilove it. At the station there's a sense of brotherhood that's like nothing else. We are all just one happy family, and I know they have my back, just like I'm always there for them. Plus, when we're not running a call, we have so much fun together. You can usually find us hanging out, playing some X -Box or watching television.

CLIPPERsinhand,junior Kendall Bayne shaves principal Mr. Steve Spangler's head during the fundraising event held in her name as WSLS camera crew films the trim. "Kendall's Karnival," as the event was known, raised money for Bayne's medical expenses. "I have no problem doing whatever it takes to get Kendall's story out to the student body and community," Spangler said. "Even if it means losing my hair every year until she's in recovery." ASFACE PAINTIS APPLIED, senior Sarah Smith keeps still so the paint will not smudge. Event goers could also get their nails painted and participate in events such as a cake walk, or eat breakfast. "Even though painting my face and attending the Karnival were both small things," she said, "I was happy to help Kendall in any way I could." Infront of the bleachers, science teacher Mr. Steve Biscotte checks out his buzzed head halfway through the cut. Local hairstylists donated their time and clippers to the cause. "l've shaved my head each year for Kendall and have been very happy to do so," Biscotte said. Braiding Hair, senior Lauren Fariss does her part at the Karnival. Fariss and other Beta Club members were among the hundreds of students who participated in the event. "I really wanted to help out and do whatever I could do to be a part of the fundraiser, sol could show Kendall how much we care about her. Students have come together through so many events," Fariss said.

KENDALL'S KARNIVAL RAISES MONEY TO HELP JUNIOR FIGHT CANCER

On Septmeber 20th, the second annual "Kendall's Karnival" took place so community members could raise money for Kendall Bayne, a junior who battled a rare cancer called Adrenal Corical Carcinoma.

Almost 500 people attended the event, which raised more than ${ }^{\text {s }} 3,400$. Attendees paid a ${ }^{\text {s }} 7$ donation, which went directly to the Bayne family.

Neighboring schools showed their support as well, as William Byrd, Patrick Henry and Hidden Valley High Schools all held events to contribute to the cause.

The Karnival offered a cake walk, hair cuts, manicures, hair braiding and face painting to those who participated in the gym.
"It was cool coming to a new school and seeing everyone come together to show support for Kendall and to cheer her on during her battle," junior Austin Beeker, a recent transplant from Alabama, said.

To show solidarity for Bayne, any event-goer could sit for a clippered buzz cut.
"The whole Karnival was a good experience for our school and the community," math teacher Mr. Alan Moore said. "I would never put my hair in that situation normally, but I did for Kendall."

PAINTING UP.

Using a face as a canvas. freshman Joe Wells paints faces during the Karnival. "I'm in the Center of Visual Arts program at Arnold R. Burton," he said. "My teacher. Mrs. Pfeiffer, is always keeping me updated on artrelated volunteer opportunities. I had lots of fun at the Karnival, but I'll admit I was nervous. After all, it wasn't painting on canvases. It's a strange and bumpy surface to me. My nerves were okay after I got the hang of it, though."

conquering the cougar, senior Connor Baker gets the student body pumped before the homecoming football game when he slays the Pulaski County Cougar. Each year, the Knight fights the opponent's team mascot. Later that night, the team defeated the Cougars for a homecoming win. "It was a little awkward at first, but you just have fun and go with it. All the cheering made me feel good and that the students were on my side." Baker said. representing the senior class, senior Matt Webb encourages the crowd to cheer him on in the pep rally candy challenge. The seniors wound up dominating all other classes in the challenge that involved being wrapped up like a mummy and having to eat a certain amount of candy in a timed face off. "Being chosen to be the face of the seniors was pretty cool because that's just what I wanted to be this year," said Webb.

"Lifeis good at cave spring," according to the spirt week shirt modeled by senior Grace Holley. Spirit shirt designs were revealed to the student body during the pep rally and were available for purchase during the following Spirit Week. "I liked the fashion show best because the school got excited to see our outfits for spirit week," Holley said. ready to get THE cROWD ExcITED, sophomore Kayla Carver and the competition cheerleading squad runs to their mat to greet the student body. The competition team took their routine Richmond, where they placed 14th in state competition. "The weekend at states was absolutely incredible," Carver said.

SPRIT WEEK KICKED OFF HOMECOMING FESTIVITIES, FOLLOWED BY THE PARADE, FOOTBALL GAME AND DANCE. SUNNY WEATHER MADE FOR A SUCCESSFUL PARADE, WHERE DOZENS OF TREATS WERE THROWN TO THE GATHERED CROWD. FLOATS CARRYING CLASS REPRESENTATIVES, THE HOMECOMING COURT AND RECREATIONAL TEAMS DROVE DOWN Chaparral drive.
"My favorite part of the parade was riding on the float and throwing candy," sophomore Melissa Mortellaro said.

At Friday's game, school spirit rose to a deafening roar when we were the first to score. During halftime, the marching band played "Canon" while the homecoming court walked onto the field.
"I loved halftime and seeing my sister walk for the court," freshman Chris Weston said.
Ultimately, seniors Jordan Bryant and Marta Timmerman were named prince and princess, while seniors Connor Baker and Marsha Line, king and queen.
"I was like wowza. No, but really, it was a surprise. I would have never guessed that I would have won. If you asked me four years ago if I thought I would be homecoming queen, I would probably would have said 'No

The game ended with a 21 to 14 victory over Pulaski County.
"I knew that a win would make the weekend that much better," senior Jon Evans said.
"After a win we always do the dirty bird. The students storm the field, so we can celebrate with them," senior Jack Woody said.

The theme for Saturday's dance was "Knightmare." Spider webs and fake blood greeted students when they entered the lobby.

The dance was located in the main gym. For those who weren't the dancing type, they could watch "Sleepy Hollow" in the main lobby.

Most students said they enjoyed some part of the evening.
"The dance was a lot of fun," junior Heather Vandergrift said.
"The music was really good," sophomore Haley Zielinski said.

PREDICTING THEFUTURE, senior Jenny Frank acted as a fortune teller in the Halloween-themed senior lobby. Frank predicted love lives, financial outcomes and life expectancy during her free palm-reading sessions. "When we were planning the senior day I said that I would read palms. I went home and looked up online how to read palms and fingers," she said. JUST AFTER BEING ANNOUNCEDHOMECOMING COURT WINNERS, seniors Connor Baker, Marsha Line, Marta Timmerman and Jordan Bryant pose for a photo. Bryant and Timmerman were named prince and princess. Baker and Line were named king and queen. "When they called my name for queen I honestly did not believe it! I was amazed and hugged my mom and friends." Line said.

The band won second place and was asked to return for the second round of Battle of The Bands. "It's like singing in the shower with a bunch of people," Tryal said. "I'm not really comfortable in ront of crowds, so I wasn't expecting us to do as well as we did." headsbanging. members of "We Burned The Skyline" perform "Dirty Johns" before other touring bands at Rainbow Forest Baptist Church. Guitarist and backup vocalist, senior Tim Rindorf received a blow while in the pit and obtained a scar above his right eye while encouraging his fellow musicians."Tim got a souvenir during that show." junior Colin Ensor said. "Large rooms filled with an audience often cause a lot of pain. It's physically demanding to squat when there's a breakdown.

"Our practices are ereally lond, and theyre fun becausel $m$ with wy friends. Weget in fishts sometimes, but they usually don't last toolong. Usually Stuart will signal the stait of practice by playing a plece. We have agood time although sometimes it's hard to keep up with Stuart."

"We practice as often as possible, probably about three times a week on average. We meet in my basement, and the practices are pretty informal. Etwart Burkn, 12

"Honest" had unassuming beginnings, with a drum set from Toys R Us and no vocalist.

For another band, a musical retelling of Jack and the Beanstalk led to the formation of an inseparable bond between juniors Zach Williamson, Ben Roberts, Nate Axt, Jonathan Ribbe, Drew Maczugowski and freshman Kevin Moody. They formed the band "Bon Qui Qui And The Dawg House."

Axt also fronted the acoustic pop rock band "Empress." He had also performed in the band "Collateral" with junior Zach Williamson, who also played the guitar for "Empress" and bass for "Dying Ohio," a band who cited "Four Year Strong" and "Fall Out Boy" among its inspirations.

Sophomore Adam Sulkin contributed to both "Dying Ohio" and "Continuum," which was formerly known as "p-Noise." Starting out as an entirely Asian band, "P-Noise," saw serious changes and obtained their only non-Asian band member and guitarist, Sulkin. "Continuum" changed its name to describe their "changes in style, personnel and practice locations."

Progress was also the key to keeping the heavy metal band "We Burned The Skyline" together when it experienced various changes in its lineup.
"Knockout" member Kyle Westlake described its style as hardcore punk. He and classmate, senior Nathan Morrison became intrigued with music in sixth grade in different ways. While Morrison said he was hooked on rock, inspiring him take up the drums, Westlake began his career in choir, which he continued throughout middle and high school.

acting the part ENGLISH STUDENTS PLAY A ROLE TO HELP OTHERS UNDERSTAND BEOWULF

Battles unfolded in front in an audience of spectators. Swords flew and monsters were slain as the reenactments rolled on. The hero journeyed over rapid waters and past countless obstacles. Once the final battle ceased and the conflict resolved, portrayers took their bows, and all was right in the story of "Beowulf."

Ms. Harry Mills' 12 th grade English classes reenacted scenes from the British epic, in which the character Beowulf must battle three monsters to help different individuals. Students read the work in class, and then worked in assigned groups to recreate scenes with props and costumes of their own making.
"I loved creating our own props and working on the project," senior Sarah Smith said. "At first I was scared to perform in front of everyone, but once I got up there it wasn't bad at all."

Before performing, her classmates spent time practicing and working out all the rough edges, using their creativity to put their own twists on the scenes. The performances weren't just for fun, senior Jennifer Vigh said. Instead, the skits gave students a way to visualize the epic's events.
"We did skits to remember the events in the story more clearly," Vigh said.

MAKING PREPARATIONS.
Before students could perform their "Beowulf" skits in front of the class, students spent two full blocks making preparations. A narrator had to choose and write down a section of the epic, actors had to figure out a way to convey the scene and props had to be constructed. "It was an exciting experience, definitely better than reading about. It was hilarious to watch others acting out," senior Harrison Russell said.

Fire ablaze, seniors Mary Beth Balzer, Ian Glenney and Kaila Carter perform their scene for the class. Glenney held up a shield to defend himself against Balzer during the group's battle scene. "We acted out one of the scenes from 'Beowulf.' It was really fun and a different way to understand the play." Balzer said. pRACTICE, pRACTICE, pRACTICE was the mantra for seniors Jennifer Vigh, Shelby Smith, Marta Timmerman and Harrison Russell while perfecting their scene. Students had to write out a re-enactment of their assigned scenese before performing in front of classmates. "Acting out the scenes of that play was fun, but at the same time challenging. I'm not used to acting in English class, so it made me nervous at first. But it got easier and even helped me to calm my fright of doing presentations," Smith said. attempting to slay his enemy, senior Sam McCray swings his sword at senior Jack Woody in an attempt to end their drawn-out battle. Woody said he believed the skits helped the students learn more about the epic. "We read 'Beowulf," and then I was assigned to play Grendel's mother. My favorite part was when I, the mother. got to fight Beowulf," Woody said.

during their battle's climax, senior Julia Lowen attacks senior Coty Love before fellow classmates. Lowen was assigned the part of Grendel's mother in her class period. "Our skit was in the middle of part two of another group's skit. The whole piece was an action scene, an intense battle. We performed so that we were able to be interactive with other students and learn the long poem," Lowen said. A LONG-DESERVED REST is allowed for senior Sam McCray as he takes a breath before confronting his next enemy. McCray. who played the main protagonist Beowulf, said he believed completing the project would help him with a future career goal. "The whole experience was great. It will help me with my future acting down the road," he said

DANGLING FROMBLEACHERS, seniors Steve Kim and Jackson Doyle drop tennis balls down onto the field. Senior Bryan Kolozvary then measured the ball's drop and time in freefall. The mostly senior class in Advanced Placement Physics AB enjoyed hands on experiments similar to this one throughout the year. "Completing labs in Physics helps me learn the concepts," Kolozvary said. tossing a tennis ball, senior Marsha Line attempts to measure a ball in freefall. One of the perks of labwork in AP Physics was being about to enjoy outdoor labs during nice weather. "It was so gravitational! We learned a lot about physics in this tennis ball experiment. Labs are basically our physics class. That's how we learn," senior Marsha Line said. markerinhand, seniors Caleb Fischer, Ebony Ruffin and Marwa Eltaib take part in an AP Biology lab in which they mapped what they had eaten in the past 24 hours. The lab was used to show the transfer of energy through ecosystems "Biology is a great way to get hands-on experiences through group projects, " Fischer said. lit matches are acceptable while being used in lab work. Seniors Ana Silva and Madeleine Lerch lit the matches necessary to launch tennis balls across the classroom. "Physics is an extremely challenging, ye rewarding subject," Lerch said.

NERF GUNS, CANNONS AND ROLLER COASTERS REPLACE BOOKS FOR STUDENTS

AP Physics always provided many unique opportunities, but students weren't sure what to expect with the arrival of new teacher Mr. James Winterer.
What they found, however, was a class filled with labs where equations learned throughout the year and the variables involved were demonstrated in more concrete terms.
"Physics is very different from any other science. It's such an applicable subject that is very much like a puzzle. Somehow it all fits together," senior Victoria Thomas said.

Students learned momentum by shooting tennis balls from can cannons, kinematics from shooting targets with Nerf guns, and kinetic and potential energy from toy roller coasters.
"It's been interesting to learn how math concepts relate to real world applications," senior Lauren Farris said.

As a double-block AP Science class, the students had more time to conduct hands-on research. With plenty of time to discuss and practice AP style questions in order to prepare for the AP Physics exam in May, students always found work to be done.

BURNING UP.
Turning up the heat, junior Mason Early demonstrates proper safety procedures in Pre-AP Chemistry. Using rubber pot holders and safety goggles, Early heated up chemicals on a Bunsen burner. "Chemistry is Sodium fun," he said. "There are always interesting labs to do. You get something out of each experiment, whether it be knowledge or a golden penny. There's always something to learn from the experience."

building blocks CLAD IN SAFETY GOGGLES, THEY DRILL, SAW AND SAND TO FORM GADGETS

Technology Education featured classes that proved to be different than traditional ones, with students using heavy machinery and wearing protective safety glasses during a class that could sometimes be looked at as dangerous.

Fortunately, Mr. Stuart Rawlings knew how to keep students safe at all times, so they could enjoy being on the edge of danger while competing fun and interesting projects.
"The most important part of Tech-Ed [classes] is teaching students how to problem solve using technolgy. Every project we do has that goal: utilizing skills in pursuit of solving a given problem," Mr. Rawlings said.

Woods Technolgy was one of the Tech Ed classes that was a popular choice among students.
"I plan on taking Woods at some point in high school. As long as no one has cut off a finger or anything, I'm good," freshman Tyler Bradley.

Students in classes like Woods Technology got to make projects such as turkey calls, clocks and wooden glue sticks.
"My favorite part of Tech Ed was seeing all the finished projects. My favorite project was constructing the turkey call," freshman Aaron Tate said.
"We get to use different kinds of instruments. My favorite project was constructing a car. Tech Ed is more unique than other classes I have ever taken," sophomore Dalton Craighead said.

it's all about me STUDENTS USED ELECTIVES TO EXPLORE WHAT THEY REALLY WANTED

From Sports Marketing to Fashion and Interior Design, electives gave students the opportunity to study subjects using a more hands-on approach than just reading a textbook.
"Food has always been big thing with my family and at any of our celebrations or get togethers. I want the same experiences with my future family, so that's why I decided to take both Culinary Arts and Nutrition and Wellness," senior A.J. Hill said.

Others chose their particular electives to learn about concepts and subjects completely new and different to them.
"I took Fashion and Interior design to explore the different aspects of clothing and fashion and how we base those choices off our daily lives," junior Mindy Boyd said.

Some students even got the opportunity to broadcast their talents. The annual art show allowed students to display and even sell their art.
"The school art show gives students a chance to come out of their shells and show other classmates and people their talents," senior Melody Makoui said. "The art show is a gateway for students to build confidence and open opportunities that they may not realize they had."

MAKING

 helping others is my ultimate goal in life. My brother joining the Marines when I was in fifth grade made a big impression on me, considering I've always looked up to him. His choice and success encouraged me to join the Navy and complete medic training. Air Force Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps, or AFJROTC, teaches me the basic military conduct and leadership skills I'll need when in the Navy.There are more girls in the program than most think. As the second female and senior cadet, I feel like I'm sending a positive message, one that says girls don't have to fall into the "girly" stereotype. A message to girls: Don't think just because you put on the uniform you instantly become "one of the guys." As a group leader in my class, I've gained a voice. You can rock the look and still surprise people with your shining confidence.

I had to get gas the first day of wearing my full uniform to school.

As I walked into the gas station, I immediately took off my flight cap (one rule of the uniform code is no wearing of hats indoors), and I gave the cashier my money. She looked at me, smiled and asked, "Will that be all for you ma'am?" I was stunned. She could have just said 'ma'am' out of habit, but that one word gave me this gut feeling I was doing what I was meant to.

That small sign of respect and my freshly ironed uniform encouraged me to follow my dreams of serving my country even further.

The military is not an easy choice, or just a simple substitution for college. For me, this path will get me to college and provide me with a better life. Just because I don't fall into the same category as most graduating seniors does not mean I 'm any less capable.

One of my greatest wishes is the program continues strong after I graduate. I've met friends and mentors through this opportunity. and Ifeel like a leader now, as opposed to the shy girl who moved just under the radar.

Open only to William Byrd High School students for the past six years, the Air Force Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps (or AFJROTC) finally allowed students from all county schools to partake in the program. Some took the classes to gain new experiences, while others signed up for the program because they planned on joining the armed forces.

In the classroom, students learned and performed basic military drills and were required to partake in physical training, which ranged from participating in a variety of sports and even making up their own games. Other times, the class could be found in deep discussions about varying topics, from combat to sociology. Class would also meet outside to participate in volunteer work, attend field trips and conduct experiments.

The AFJROTC required students to wear their uniforms every Wednesday or Thursday, depending on which day was an A day.
"Wearing the uniforms is my favorite part," senior Zanebia Brown-Saunders said.

This uniform served as a reminder to students of their duty. They always remembered the Core Values of the Air Force: Integrity First, Service Before Self and Excellence in All We Do.

SERVING THE COMMUNITY.
The end of the Drumstick Dash was a rewarding time for students in the AFJROTC program. They had served their community and earned the respect of runners. An added bonus was getting turkey hats at the end. It was a cold day as well, and participants had to arrive downtown extremely early. This was just one of the many volunteer opportunities students had, but one of junior Mikael Diaz-Perdue's favorites. "I had fun hanging out with my friends and helping a good cause," Diaz-Perdue said.

 CLUBS LIKE SCIFI ALLOWED STUDENTS THE CHANCE TO GET THEIR INNER GEEK ON

Having a strong passion for all things Science Fiction, Ana Silva, a senior, decided to found the Science Fiction Club, which served as a forum for discussions on video games (a popular one was Dead Space), TV series (they couldn't get enough of "Dr. Who"). movies (such as Star Wars: Revenge of the Sith) and literature (such as "The Hitch Hiker's Guide to the Galaxy"). Other popular topics that came up during meetings included everything from time travel to alternate dimensions, the Death Star to Deep Space 9, telekinesis to telepathy, empaths to dragons, and Vulcans to Weeping Angels.
"Sci-Fi is one of the most involved clubs I have ever been in. We're a bit disorganized since nothing is set in stone," senior Caroline Whisnant said. "It's very dependent on suggestions from members. We tend to have movie nights that usually turn into game nights and hangouts."

When they weren't debating the depths of the universe, club members partook in outdoor games, like The Duel of the Fates. Members dressed up as their favorite science fiction characters and dueled with lightsabers and Nerf guns.
"It's a great bonding experience for people in our school with common interests. We really have every grade represented and its a great way to meet new people. It was definitely a learning experience and a great way to meet people I wouldn't have known otherwise," senior Emily Chrisman said.

"Istarted Latin Club to help peoplesee Latinis fun. We learn about Roman history and their way of life and see how we apply them today." Weston Dean, 12

It's rewarding and you get to meet new people while serving them. I plan on volunteering throughout college as well," she said. Lining up watercups, BETA club member and senior Olivia Allen prepares to serve thirsty runners at the Knight's Crossing. Allen served as treasurer of the club. "I have a few extra hours to fill as treasurer, and the Crossing was just one way to do it. The track meets are usually the most fun." Allen said

NOTED PERFORMANCES.
After joining the Knight Notes, students rehearsed incessantly for the Spring Concert in May. Though not all members of the Notes were in an actual choir class, they shared a mutual passion for singing. The pieces they sang varied from "Taylor the Latte Boy" to "Requiem" to Ray Charles' "Georgia on My Mind." "Knight Notes is something I look forward to at the end of the day. We learn how to read and sing the music we've picked while having a great amount of fun," freshman Olivia Cameron said.

"Like most teenagers, Ilike to hang out with my good friends on the weekends. We mainly play basketball and video games. One of the best times I've had with my friends on the weekend was when I went up to my friend Victor's mountain house. We rode ATVs and shot guns. We camped out in the woods and made a huge bon fire. Hanging out with my friends is very important to me, and so I try to make a lot of time for them. This is why I always am in contact with or actually hanging with my friends during every weekend."
Trey Mills, 12

Students' weekdays were busy and exhausting, filled with tests, homework and practice. When the weekend finally rolled around, students experienced the freedom they had wished for since Monday morning. "On the weekends I can never pass up a bike ride on a pretty day. I also spend time with friends and work out," senior Jenn Vigh said.

Young Life made three promises if you came to their club on Monday nights: One, you would have a ton of fun; two, you would meet new people; and three, you would get to experience and find out what life is all about.
"Young Life is a party on a week night," senior Ryan Flora said.

All of the students danced, sang and played games in an environment where they had fun and felt accepted. The group also organized fun activities like a dodgeball tournament, Campaigners, Summer Camp and Fall Weekend. The summer camp was guaranteed to be the best week of your life or a participant could get a full refund. Even with this guarantee, though, students who led Young Life believed a person only had to come one time to fall in love with the organization.
"It was something fun to do with your friends and you got to learn about something new," sophomore Cager Hicks said.

For others, the experiences even changed their lives.
"Young Life provided me with an opportunity to see Jesus in a way that I never had before. Religion had never been a part of my life untill was shown what it truly meant to follow Jesus," senior Kendall Scott said.

"NO

 word is powerful enoughto describe riding horses," freshman Kaitlyn Creekmore said, "but it's just pure exhilaration and excitement. Whenever I get on a horse, my mind shuts off everything that doesn't have to do with my horse.
"The first time I sat on a horse I wasn't even two years old yet. I began lessons and started showing in a competitive barn, Hollow Haven, in 2007.
"No matter how many times I compete, I still get that flip in my stomach in hopes I become the winner. I am a three-time world champion for 2007, 2008 and 2010, and I won the National Equitation Finals the first time in 2012.
"In those shows there is a standard 'competition look.' We wear 'habits,' which consist of a shirt, tie, vest, coat and pants.
"Even though the barn is in Wisconsin and we don't get to visit often, I know the barn is very high-class and there are people there called 'grooms' who are taking very good care of my horses.
"I like the challenge riding brings. Whenever I accomplish a goal, that accomplishment feels better when I know I worked hard to achieve it.
"Competitions for my type of riding are based around different gaits, which is the different ways a horse can move. All three of my horses do three different gaits: Walk, trot and canter. These are natural gaits and don't really have to be taught, but the horses have to learn how to do them more correctly.
"In the ring other horses are with you doing the same gaits at the same time. The idea is to show the judges your horse is the best and to present your horse to the best of your ability.
"Where you are placed in the ring, meaning if the judges can see you well enough or not, is a major factor that affects how well you may do. If you have a great ride but aren't seen, you won't be placed very highly."

PREPARATION FOR PAGEANTS WAS TIMECONSUMING, LUZYNSKI SAID. SHE SPENT THE MONTHS PRECEDING AN EVENT SHOPPING FOR GOWNS, PREPARING FOR INTERVIEWS AND GETTING IN TOP SHAPE.

Her greatest allies for her preparation were her sponsoring organization, she said. She had two pageant directors who assisted her in the task of searching for costumes, gowns and music for her ballet en pointe. Her baton coach, also a choreographer, helped her with her talent. "She's also a hair stylist and a makeup artist," she said.
"It is a lot of preparation," she confessed, "But, it makes it a lot easier to feel comfortable and confident after my preparation."

Before competitions she said she had a few rituals to keep herself relaxed and confident.
"I write encouraging notes inside my shoes to keep myself confident," Luzynski said.

In addition, her mother stayed back stage to calm her nerves and offer words of encouragement.
"I get nervous before the stage portion of pageants," she said. "I pray before I go onstage every time, thanking God for giving me the opportunity to do this, and asking Him to help me do my best."

ANOTHER TITLEHOLDER

Katelyn Bradley started competing in pageants at the end of her eighth grade year, and had amassed three wins and placed in the rest of the 11 she entered.
The sophomore said she was inspired to start when she walked into a store called A Bridal Path in Bristol.
"Every girl wants to be a princess," she said. "I took the opportunity to feel like one."

Like Luzynski, Bradley said she spent the weeks leading up to a competition finding the perfect outfit combinations and mentally preparing before lastminute fittings and coaching from the store's owner.

When pageant day rolled around, Bradley said she kept her nerves in check by reminding herself pageants were just for fun and she should enjoy them.
"Pageants can be a contest of stamina, some lasting a whole week," Bradley said.

Her pageants consisted of several stages such as an eight-minute interview, two-minute talent performance, high fashion and evening gowns.

Bradley said her favorite parts of the competition were evening gown and spending time backstage with the other contestants.
"My favorite part of the pageant itself is being backstage with the amazing girls," she said. "But my favorite part of the competition is evening gown because you can see everyone's personality shine through," Bradley said.

As Told By Olivia Kiser

I began taking photographs of family and friends in middle school with a small digital camera that I received for Christmas my seventh grade year. I soon realized there was a big differences in the photographs I took and the ones my parens or peers were taking. While their photos seem staged or posed, mine appeared more candid and often were taken at different angles and perspectives. Through the years, I have developed my skills by taking classes and lessons, but I feel my true growth has come from experience. Ilove to take pictures of my friends in different locations all around the Roanoke Valley.

When I was nine months old, I was diagnosed with Type One Diabetes, and the disease has been a daily struggle for these last 18 years. I seem to have a different perspective on life, though, and can say I wouldn't change my situation. I am very involved with the local chapter of The Juvenile Diabetes research Foundation. I donate a proportion of my earnings to this foundation in hopes that one day a cure for Type One Diabetes will be a reality.

I will begin my college education at Emory and Henry next fall, where I received both a merit scholarship and an art scholarship for my photography. I plan to double major in communications and art. I now have a nicer Nikon camera along with various lenses and my own website and business, Photography by Liv. Check my work out at livtophoto.com.

FENCING AT THE YMCA, freshman Allen Britt practices his skills. Britt said he spent most of his to take part in competitions.

"I've always liked swords. After I quit an archery class, my parents found the fencing program, and। couldn't resist." he said. mid-AIR, junior Emily Fulton follows through her pole vault while practicing at Virginia Tech. facemoting, Katie Penny competes for the Floyd Ward company in Lenoir, North Carolina. "I enjoy everything about dance," the sophomore said, "including the challenge and that it's time consuming. It lets me escape."
"I DON'T ENJOY THE BLISTERS, CALLUSES AND SORENESS," senior Jenn Vigh said of her hours spent in Roanoke Athletic Center's dance studio. "But it's worth it."

Dancers reported myriad reasons for taking those first dance classes, be it because they were copying older siblings or being pushed in by parents.

But Joey d'Alelio's said he started dancing to get a girl.
But, once in the studio, the senior said he found his passion.
With the help of dance teachers, judges and peers, d'Alelio both excelled and participated in several competitions, winning first place at numerous for solos, duos and group numbers. He also held a national title.
"Just last year, I was picked to dance at New York City Dance Aliances" Summer Dance Intensive," he said.

Sophomore Katie Penny started dancing at age three, following in her sister, senior Sarah Beth Penny's footsteps. The younger Penny studied modern, ballet, tap, clogging, jazz, lyrical, hip-hop and contemporary, and performed in at least four competitions a year.
"My dance teachers' and my own determination have helped me improve my dance skills," she said.

D'Alelio said he didn't mind competing in a female-dominated sport. "My experience has been pretty good." he said. Besides, who can complain when you're the only guy in the room with a whole bunch of girls." ballerinajunior Tara Wells performs with the Divine Dance Center. Wells had 13 years of dance experience. "It is so freeing and makes me able to express myself." she said. "It's beautiful and rewarding in so many ways You can put your whole heart and soul into it and just let out all of your stress and frustration. The only bad times are when it's crunch time and it becomes stressful to be as perfect as possible."

July. I had been working there for two or three months and my shifts had started to become routine. On this night, I served my tables and gave them their checks just like any other day. There was one customer, though, who asked me to sit down for a minute so she could ask me a question.
"Hi, my name is Dawn," she said. "I'm an author and I need a model to pose for the cover of my new novel. I see you as the main character. Would you be interested?"

I was flattered and completely surprised, to say the least. She went on to introduce herself as Dawn Jouan, a Christian author, and told me about the the plot of her new book, Dreams Like Sugar Mountains. We exchanged numbers and she said she would give me a call in two weeks to set up a shoot.

When I heard back from Dawn she was so excited and kept thanking me. I felt that I should've been continuously thanking her for the opportunity. The next weekend my mom and I made our way to Dawn's house near Smith Mountain Lake.

Dawn is a photographer as well as an author, so her basement had a studio. She had me dress up in different outfits and took my picture in front of a white background. The outfits included a pirate costume (real sword included!), a dress based off of the pink one Rose wore in Titanic (which Dawn actually let me keep) and a very proper-looking early 1900 s style dress (which had more layers than anything else I have ever worn). The latter dress was so heavy it had a cage hoop. It really was a gorgeous dress, but it took forever to get on and off.

On the second day, Dawn and I drove out to the lake, and she took pictures of me on one of the miniature beaches. I dressed in raglike clothes because in the book, my character, Caresea, has just survived a shipwreck. She ended up using one of those pictures as the book cover.

Iloved every minute of this crazy, new and fun experience and anticipated reading the novel. This experience was on of the most thrilling in my life. Sometimes I still can't believe such a wonderful thing happened to me.

DRUM MAJORS, JUNIOR NATHANIEL AXT AND SENIOR EMILY CHRISMAN PERFORM THEIR SALUTE DURING THE HOMECOMING HALFTIME SHOW. CHRISMAN CONDUCTED FOR TWO YEARS. "I LIKED BEING IN THE FRONT AND DOING SOMETHING DIFFERENT," SHE SAID. "PERFORMANCES GIVE ME ADRENALINE FROM HAVING PEOPLE WATCHING." he sun beat down on the field and sweat dripped down their faces, but the band played on and the guard kept performing. Marching band and color guard practiced through the sweltering heat of the summer to perfect their performances during sports events. Color guard practiced before and through band camp in the summer, enduring a pre-band camp from eight band practiced Monday through Thursday, from eight to five-thirty and on Sunday from one to five-thirty. The summer camp consisted of repetition of movement, music numbers and lots of sweat.

TRUMPETSRAISED freshmen Tom Conroy and Allen Britt perfrom during a home-game halftime show Conroy cited focus as a necessary trait to have during performances. Axt believed that band was like one big family. "The band program is unlike anything else you can experience during your high school career. The newcomers are welcomed, and the seniors are respected," he said.

"We managed to endure the brutal heat while having fun and getting a lot done. We make so many good memoires," freshman Roshni Lauchandani said.

Once school started, color guard members practiced after school until 5:30 on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Band practiced every day after school until 5:30. Band members were also expected to practice their parts at home. They were expected to remember the music along with the motions.
"The band practices every day after school, and there's also a lot of time spent at home practicing and memorizing the music, senior John Vitello said. "Sometimes you even practice the movements in your sleep."

WE ARE THE KNIGHTS AND WE LIVE IN A CASTLE. WHEN YOU COME TO OUR SCHOOL, WE'LL GIVE YOU A HASTLE.

No matter the sport, the student section at every game was an experience any true fan was unlikely to forget, especially those during football season. Without fail, students came together every Friday night to show off their love for the school that everyone seemed to agree was more like home than anything else.
"Cave Spring is filled with incredible people, full of personality and school spirit," senior Eliza Gaylord said. "That's my family out there."

The number one rule that any super fan could tell you was: Get hyped! As football player and senior Dylan Brucki said, "If you aren't hyped by game time, you shouldn't set foot on the field. Both players and fans need to be in that spirit."

No show of Knights spirit was too extensive for fans. Some remembered the often-spotted penguin costume at the most spirited games. No matter what the cause, from penguin costumes, painting up and wearing every student's two favorite colors, no sign of school spirit was taking it too far.

No matter what happened on the field, there was no competition among our opponents as to who had the most spirit supporting them in the stands.

As senior Adair McCabe said, every super fan could be counted on to be proudly "repping the red and black."

4 CANremember sitting in the first go kart I ever raced and thinking, "This is what I was meant to do." My racing career started when I was about nine. At a 24 hour go-kart race in Charlotte, NC, I was part of a team of 5 drivers and we switched drivers every 45-90 minutes. I vividly remember waking up at 3 am to get back in the kart.

Tony Stewart, one of my racing idols, started out just like me. He then put all of his income toward racing and never gave up on going professional. Currently, he owns a NASCAR team and is placing in the top ten at every race, winning the Sprint Cuplast year. He accomplished all of his successes with patience, a virtue vital in both life and the race. Patience will save you time by helping you save tires, conserve fuel and, ultimately, pit stop.

I participated in The Indy Car Academy, a race shootout in Sebring, Florida, which took place at the end of January and lasted for three days. I heard about it when I signed up for a three-day Skip Barber racing school over the summer. The instructors said a few people may be selected based on our potential and attitude, and I was eager to be picked. The requirements were some kart experience and the completion of the three-day racing school. While there, I demonstrated potential and mechanics, and treated everyone in a sportsman like manner. I was one of 33 drivers from around the nation who were invited to the Sebring International Raceway.

This event judged racers on speed, consistency and how well we applied feedback. We were competing for a $$ 50,000$ scholarship to the Skip Barber Summer race series. Out of the 33 drivers, I finished mid-pack. Being the youngest person there, I received media attention, which may help me find sponsors.

Soon I'll be racing in Danville at the International Raceway and in Connecticut, at Lime Rock Park, or in Palm Beach, Florida, at Palm Beach International Raceway.

LOSING FIVE SENIORS FROM ITS STATE CHAMPIONSHIP TEAM, PLAYERS HAD BIG SHOES TO FILL. WITH NINE UNDERCLASSMEN, COACH TAMALYN TANIS SAID IT WAS ONE OF HER YOUNGEST TEAMS IN YEARS.

"With the average age being younger, a lot of people would have used that as a reason not to work hard," senior Kendall Scott said. "Instead, we saw it as an opportunity to reach out to underclassmen, show them the ropes and to serve them in hopes they would do the same in the future."

Character development, Alayna Foutz said, was a focus.
"We played with integrity because it motivated us to be the best we could be for our team and our school" the freshman said. "It just made us have better character all around."

Teammates had a strong connection, and fostered it with sleepovers, tie-dye parties, a lake day and even an annual pig roast. Members also ventured to Nicaragua over the summer.
"My favorite was farm day," sophomore Tessa Klimaitis said. "Especially the hay ride at the end because we all told scary stories at the top of the mountain. The team becomes more of a second family. We encourage each other and lift each other up,"

Emily Fulton saw benefit to having a young team.
"It builds for the future and people get more experience playing at the varsity level," the junior said. "We all grew as a team by the end of the season and we didn't want it to end."

FORGET THE SIDELINES. COMPETITION CHEERLEADERS PREPPED FOR THEIR OWN BATTLES. FOCUSING ON TUMBLING AND STUNTING, THE TEAM PARTICIPATED IN THREE COMPETITIONS BEFORE PLACING SECOND AT BOTH DISTRICTS AND REGIONALS.
"The competition season was amazing," sophomore Alayna Francis said. "Each person worked extremely hard to reach her full potential. We are also blessed with two great coaches, Katie and Jen, who made our season so successful. Without them, we would have never gotten as far as we did."

The most exciting part of the season the Jenna Jones said came when team earned a spot in state completion and traveled to the Siegel Center in Richmond where they placed 14th overall.
"I thought this team was the best I've ever performed with," the senior said. "We worked really hard."

She noted the Abbott charter bus on which they traveled to Richmond was equipped with beds, and the team enjoyed shopping and eating at Short Pump Mall.

THE SEASON HAD A ROCKY START. BUT AS IT PROGRESSED, THE TEAM PROVED TO BE STRONGER THAN NAYSAYERS EXPECTED, DISPROVING PREDICTIONS OF A THREE-WIN SEASON.
"After our first scrimmage, we had a bad taste in our mouths," sophomore Patrick Truskey said. "So we worked to turn the season around. We came a long way and did better than people expected."

Truskey and teammates achieved a record of 7-6 overall, and 5-4 in the region.
"We improved from week 1 to week 13," junior Austin Beeker said. "The loss to William Byrd gave us motivation to win and beating Richlands was the best feeling ever."

The Richlands rivalry had grown in recent years, Beeker said, with the team winning three out of the last four contents.
"Beating Richlands and continuing our football legacy" was important to senior Tripp Behelor. "Everyone always doubts us. But, we came out with a big win."

on the run, senior James Jackson escapes a mob of football players from Lord Botetourt on September 14. Jackson was a new student who was eager to fulfill his position as running back for his senior year, "The team was exciting. he said. "Everyone was really nice to me, so bonding was easy. I really showed them my skills when I ran 216 yards at the Richlands game." The Cavaliers. however, emerged victorious with a score of 22-17. DOUBLED UP on A TACKLE, Senior Jon Evans and junior David Morrow stop number 14 from Blacksburg. Evans said the game was memorable because it was his senior homecoming game and the team won. But, like Jackson, he said his favorite game was against Richlands, "It's always crowded, and they're a big rival for us. We played really well and won against a tough team." he said of the November II contest which the team won 31-6. in mid-kick, sophomore Zach Foutz starts the third quarter of Puiaski County game on November 12. The team defeated the Cougars 17-14. During the season, Foutz contracted meningitis from a spinal steroid shot and stayed in the hospital. "It was hard coming back," he said. "I could only watch my team play I couldn't be out there," he said. returning a kickoff, senior Jack Woody relies on his teammates to block the Blacksburg Bruins. Woody played all four years, and spent time at both wide receiver and safety. "The Blacksburg game was my favorite game of the season because we got new jerseys and we won. 'he said. The final score of the October 19 contest was 21-14.

GIRLS' VARSITY ADVANCED TO REGIONAL PLAY SAW A FAMILY'S DREAM REALIZED.
"Making it to regionals was a huge goal of ours, and to be able to say we achieved it was a huge jump." sophomore Cassi Parulis said of the varsity girls' season. "After our tough season last year, getting that far makes us realize we can do it. All we can do now is keep working."

Coach Jessica Ficarro was proud to lead the team on its journey.
"Of course I'm proud of the team," she said. "They worked so hard and made it through tight games to earn that spot at regionals."

Hailey Sitze echoed the excitement.
"After the rough season we had last year it was a great feeling being so successful this basketball season," the sophomore said.

Cait Flippen kept the team's progression in perspective.
"There's always more room to grow and get better." the freshman said. "We hope to make it even farther in the next few years, losing only one senior."

I made sure I was there to support them." avoiding the screen, junior Taylor Asimakopoulos moves by a defender. "I was 7 for 10 on the floor with 16 points," she said of the Christiansburg game. "We had to win that game to even have a chance at regionals, and we won."

ARMED AND READY

"Being on the team with my dad, brother and uncle this season was an unbelievable experience," Brody said. "I've dreamed about playing in that uniform for my dad for as long as I can remember so it was great to live out that dream.
"Sharing the experience with Cager made it even more fun. That my dad and uncle were coaching just added to the experience," he continued. "They always make me want to get better and help me get to where I want to be. I think that has made our relationships stronger." His older brother agreed.
"Having them with me on the court gives me confidence," Cager said, "because I know they've got my back."

The team made it to the regional semis before getting losing to Abingdon.
"Making it to the second round of regionals was a huge accomplishment" Terrell Simmons said. "Coming off a great season last year and being the state runner up, we had a lot of hope for this year and we knew we had a lot to live up to."

Even falling short of the mark, Simmons said he was pleased.
"Overall, we had a very successful season and I'm so proud of every one of my teammates," the senior said.

an acrobatic attempt sees senior Connor Baker take a leap of faith toward the basket. He said games against Hidden Valley proved to be biggest ones of the year. "Those games bring the biggest crowds, and it's always fun to play against your rival. Losing by one point in the first game was hard, but it made beating them the second time more special." caughtinthemiddle, senior Terrell Simmons attempts to move past the Titans. The team made it to the second round of regional play. "Overcoming adversity in the season made us stronger in the long run." Simmons said. as a RadFord player sticks to his back, freshman Brody Hicks looks for an open pass. Hicks played many positions. including forward. "In the forward position I mainly tried to play off of some of our more experienced players and then make a few shots if I got the opportunity." he said. aclearpath to the basket allows junior Trey Mills to set up for an open shot. coming up for air, Cole Cowher grabs a lungful of oxygen. "The 50 freestyle is my fastest and best event," the freshman said. "The only rule you have to follow is don't touch the bottom of the pool, just touch the wall." midway Through the BREASTSTROKE, junior Lauren Cowher rises from the water. She said she preferred the 50 freestyle to the breastroke because she enjoyed the thrill of a sprint more. "llike the freestyle much more." she said. "It's an all-out sprint and if you mess up one little thing, like a start or a turn, it throws off the time for the entire race. "Even though there are a lot of drawbacks, I still think swimming is a lot of fun," freshman Michael Chang said. "I joined a team when I was seven and loved it. I joined the school's team when I could."

Anna Elmore had to master more than an event.
"Starting off, walking around in a swimsuit made me feel awkward," the freshman said. "I realized some people have less on than I do, and if I wanted to keep swimming I'd have to get used to it. It took me about three months, but I'm more comfortable now."

Classmate Tessa Muzzy was more comfortable. "I've been swimming since I was four," she said. "To me, the 'outfit' is completely natural and normal."

The alien-like appearance caused by the snug cap and goggles combined with the affect chlorine had on hair were obstacles Sandy Chang faced.
"Chlorine makes my silky Asian hair nasty and dry." the junior said. "Rather than being shiny, it turns dull and boring. After 12 years of swimming, I've gotten used to it."

"I played in my first tournament when I was six years old. Ialways have a will win to win and desire to play my best in every tournament," Drew Lagan, 11

"My favorite courses to play on are Roanoke and Hidden Valley Country Clubs. Ilove being outside in the pretty weather. Missing school is nice too."
Meagan Board, 11
"The best experience in track is having such a close team and good coaches," senior Erin Martin said. "At practice we motivate and always support each other."

Autumn Mehta enjoyed time away from competing just as much.
"The bus rides mostly go by fast because we have so much fun together," the freshman said. "We listen to music, talk, play games and make each other laugh to keep from being nervous."

Freshman Molly Kwitny said once a meet started, competitors in early events stretched and prepared mentally while later competitors sat and watched for teammates and cheered as they passed by.
"We wish each other luck before one of our teammates goes to compete," she said. "When they run by everyone stands up and cheers and claps as they pass. We root them on until they reach the finish line."

LACROSSE STILL FIELDED A COMPETITIVE TEAM
"In previous years, we were a rec team called Southwest County," freshman Chris Weston said of the lacrosse team. "Mostly from Cave Spring and Hidden Valley, but had a handful of players from other schools."

Then, he said, that team split in two called South County Titans and Roanoke Warhawks, both relying on fundraising and donations to stay viable. For the second year, the school fielded a club team along with other county schools Hidden Valley and William Byrd.

WHILE PLAYING AGAINST ROOSTERS from lynchburg, senior Matt Reiter struggles to get the ball against Rooster Brandon Ford who attended Liberty Christian Academy. "Lacrosse is a very fun and exciting sport," said Reiter who had played for six years. "I wish people would recognize lacrosse for the sport that it is because it's one of the most physical games out there," he said.

taking abreath between strokes, freshman Casey Milan stays afloat in the pool. "The best thing about swimming is that everyone has your back, always cheering you on or telling you what you can work on to become faster and stronger," Milan said.

WHILE THE FOCUS SOMETIMES TENDED TO LAND ON THE MEN AND WOMEN OF VARSITY LEVEL PLAY, JUNIOR VARSITY PLAYERS MANAGED TO HOLD THEIR OWN ON THE COURTS AND FIELDS.
after passing the ball to the setter, freshman Fallon Delp looks for a way to penetrate the Hidden Valley Titan defense. This was Delp's first year on the team, after transferring from Roanoke Catholic. "The amount of talent we have at Cave Spring is amazing. I am looking forward to being a part of this team for the next three years." she said.afterreceiving thebaton from freshman Hunter Mollica, sophomore Matthew Stiles begins the last leg of his relay race. SLidinginto home base, freshman Jasmine Brickey is declared safe during a game against William Byrd. When not at bat, Brickey was know for capturing and recovering any hit sent to center field. "There's a lot of pressure in the center field position. If you miss the ball, you could give the other team a possible two-run advantage," she said. on the mat PERFORMING A COMPETITIONROUTINE, SOphomore Kinsey Fitzwater puts on her best cheer face. Fitzwater said motivation was a key factor in putting on a good routine. "Cheering can be very difficult. If you're not motivated, then you probably shouldn't do it," she said. STAYING LOW BEFORE HIS OPPONENT, freshman Jacob Plunkett looks for a take down against a Rustburg wrestler. Plunkett started wrestled in the 120-pound class. "While we earn points for our team at a meet, wrestling is more of an individual sport. When you win or lose, it's all on you," he said. AFTER GRabBing AREBOUND FROM A NORTHSIDE OPPONENT, freshman Alexa Vaughan fights to keep possession of the ball. Vaughan was a high scorer on the team. "Rebounding the ball is such a rush. You have the opportunity to prove yourself and rip the ball away from the other team," she said.

HOPING TOHEAR "SAFE" AS HE CROSSES OVER THE BAG, freshman Jordan Stovall dives into the dirt. "I like the challenge of hitting the ball and then trying to score a run. You're always afraid of getting tagged out, and I love that rush," he said.

"IVELEARMED THAT SHE'S GOOD AT EVERYTHINGI'MNOT GOOD AT and vice versa," senior Erin Smith said about her best friend senior Marta Timmerman. The two met the summer before kindergarten and have been inseparable ever since. Smith and Timmerman's friendship grew quickly. Smith said their friendship grew even closer as they started middle and high school. "It was almost automatic that our friendship became so much stronger because we've been growing up with each other side by side." The end of the senior year welcomed so many changes; oftentimes it meant being separated from the people we had grown up with our whole lives. Timmerman and Smith faced this new time remembering a favorite quotation, "Together forever, growing apart, maybe in distance but never in heart."

"ADAM WAS MY HELPER WHENIDIDN'TKNOW ENGLISH," senior Steve Kim said. Even though their group started as a middle school friendship built around lending help when needed and the love of gaming, (from clockwise) seniors Adam Foutz, Evan Gill, Bryan Kolozvary, Steve Kim and Josh Zayas are still as tight as ever. Gaming is not an uncommon activity for teenage boys, and it was that activity that cemented the group's friendship. Having met in middle school, the boys have helped each other with game installation, RAM downloads, school work and even "with the ladies," Kim said, who moved from Korea during the summer of seventh grade. In the same way their gaming has evolved from Xbox games, such as Diablo 3 and League of Legends to PC games such as Starcraft 2, their friendship has grown beyond the classroom and the gaming console to include hangouts at Buffalo Wild Wings, frequent Skype chats and occasional LAN parties.

Whisnant's antics were just the beginning to a strong, everlasting friendship. For over seven years, the two have been obsesssing over the same books, sharing bad jokes, creating a zombie survival plan, waching movies, baking and crafting together. Recently, Allen and Whisnant went to a One Direction concert, which both described as "awesome." "We are always there for each other, and we don't let the other awkwardly sit alone," Allen said. "Our friendship is founded on a mutual love of movies, pop culture and food," Whisnant said.

HOMIES HELPING HOMIES

"HOMIES HELPHOMIES" is somewhat of a philosophy seniors Drew Board and Eric Culbertson say they have followed throughout the course of their friendship. They became neighbors 13 years ago and quickly became best friends after finding out they had many of the same interests and classes and attended the same church. Together, they have participated in Destination Imagination, recreational basketball and baseball, middle and high school band, and have even gone on trips to Snowshoe and Myrtle Beach. "Eric has even caddied for me in golf tournaments," Board said. In high school, Board and Culbertson applied to and attended Governer's School during the same years. "We continually help each other get through difficult topics in school, as we are in many of the same classes. We've also applied to many of the same colleges," Culbertson said.

"WE'RE THERE FOR COMFORT"

"ALLA AIRLNEEDS IS SUPPORT. Through the hardest times, we're there for each other for comfort. And through all the most exciting things, we're there to celebrate with each other. Sarah Beth is a sister when no one else is around," senior Maya Azar said about her best friend senior Sarah Beth Penny. The girls have known each other since 6 th grade, where they met in a health class when they had to interview classmates for a "get-to-know" activity. Though they've shared many interests in the past, they say their common ground currently consists mostly of "NCIS" and "Law and Order: SVU." The two say they hang out as much as possible. With yearly trips to Myrtle Beach, Virginia Beach and Busch Gardens, tie-dye parties, sleepovers and movie marathons, Azar and Penny spend much of their time together. "We've always been there for each other and loved each other unconditionally," Penny said.

"HALLOWEENIS ONE OF MY FAVORITEHOLIDAVS, SO I love to carve pumpkins," sophomore Gillian Horn said. Horn and other members of the Art Club carved pumpkins for homecoming festivities. "It took about five hours over a period of four days to carve ten pumpkins," sophomore Lydia Hoeppner said. "It was interesting to see how people reacted to three girls carving pumpkins in the hallway. It was also my first time carving a pumpkin," sophomore Rabiya Asim said. Not only did the Art Club carve pumpkins, but they also painted faces at Kendall's Karnival and worked at the annual Dogtoberfest festival. The Art Club has been around for decades. It was founded by Mrs. Pat Carr and has been continued to run through the leadership of art teacher Mrs. Anne Pheiffer.

"CHRIS WESTON ANDICOMPETEDIN THE FIRST SALSA COMPETITION, which only had two entries. We came in second place, but I think our salsa was good," freshman Zach Shannon said. For the past three years, the Spanish Club has hosted a salsa competition. While some students would expect to see a dancing competion when they hear the words "salsa" and "Spanish," this competition was a chance for students to see who had the best culinary skills. The event was free, and club members encouraged students and staff and come and eat salsa while learning all about the Spanish Club.
"Usually this event is a competition, but since a storm hit and we were out of school the original day it was planned, we made the event into a fun food day. My salsa ended up winning first place. I may not have won an actual prize, but I now have bragging rights." Gillian Horn, 10

"A ONE-ACTPLAY COMPETITIONHAS HIGHHAS HIGH SCHOOLS from the same district putting together one-act plays, which mean the plays can only have one act. After performing their play for judges, the schools see who will win," senior Maddie Lerch said. On November 3rd, Lerch, seniors Lauren Chapman and Caroline Whisnant and junior Ben Roberts traveled to Pulaski High School to compete against five local high schools in the One-Act Play Competition with "Talk to me Like the Rain and Let me Listen," a play that examined the minds of an alcoholic man and an abused woman. Long before November, though, the group started preparing. "We started rehearsing in the beginning of October and practiced every other day until the competition," Chapman said. While the group place fifth, they were still pleased with their performances. "We placed fifth, but I think our performance was very strong. Our leads received honorable mention. I was very happy with how we did, especially since almost none of us had competition experience," Chapman said.

"HELPING ANY CREATURE GETTHROUGHITS TROUBLES so that it can have a second shot at happiness means the world to me," junior Emma Coogan said. Coogan is just one of many students who found happiness through helping others. "I volunteer at the Roanoke Wildlife Rescue. Our work revolves around the care of wild animals. Our main purpose is to give wildlife a second chance," Coogan said. Sophomore Samantha Casauay devotes her time to others by volunteering at at Carilion Roanoke Memorial Hospital. "My favorite part of volunteering is meeting new people and knowing that I'm making a trip to the hospital less stressful for the patient," Casauay said. Senior Tori Tomas volunteers with the PEACE Program, which helps immigrants prepare for the United States Citizenship Exam. Through this program, she teaches people to write and read English and helps them learn about United States civis. "Ilove communicating and watching people learn and grow," Thomas said.

"APCLASSESCHALLENGESTUDENTSINMANY WAVS," sophomore Kinjal Patel said. Patel was one of hundreds of students who participated in Advanced Placement (AP) classes. Students had the oppoturnity to start taking AP math courses in their sophomore year. Some considered the AP math courses to be the hardest among the AP courses offered. Students in the classes cited time management as one of the most necessary skills to possess if attempting to take AP math courses. "Students should make sure they are able to manage their time. They should be prepared to spend a lot of time on their homework and studies," Patel said. But while these classes could be a killer, there were many benefits in taking them. Many colleges looked for students who took AP classes and accepted credits earned by taking the AP tests. The work involved was also seen as good practice for college. "A student should consider an AP class because it does a lot to help prepare you for college-level courses," senior Joey

"ILOVED ALL OFTHEMOVIES AND BOOKS BUTILOVEDTHEBOOKS MORE," senior Tiffany Simmons said. Simmons and most teenage girls everywhere were sad when the Twilight Saga ended. But while sadness may have been the predominating emotion, anger and passion ran high between fans who took the side of Team Edward or Team Jacob. Whether it was Edward's love for Bella or Jacob's abs, fans everywhere found something to love. "The Twilight Saga: Breaking Dawn Part Two" did not disappoint those hard-core fans. "The end credits made me reminisce back to the other movies," Simmons said.

"I remember reading the first two books in the second grade. I have been Team Edward every since." Julie Dalotn, 9

"I used to be Team Edward until I saw the second movie. Now l'm totally Team Jacob." Kelly Alcoke, 10

"I was Team Jacob, but all that changed during the third movie. Now I am on Team Edward." Brooke Smith, 21

"I have been Team Jacob from the beginning and will always be." Casey Milan, 9
"I don't like Edward or Jacob. Idon't like Edward because he sparkles. I don't like Jacob because he is too loud. Girls talk about him way too much." Michael Chang, 9

what does that mean PSYCHOLOGY STUDENTS ATTEMPT TO DECODE LIFE

"ITOOK PSYCHOLOGY BECAUSEIT SEEMED MOREUNIQUE than other classes," junior Rachel Waddell said. Psychology was a popular elective among students. Many said they enjoyed the Norms Project. "Students go out into the community and break the social norms. They press all the buttons in an elevator, like in 'Elf,' hug strangers [and] wear clothes that is common for the other gender," Mr. Pete Lustig said. "My favorite part of class was definitely the Norms Project," junior Lauren Cowher said. Ms. Holly Moore's gym classes also dabbled in psychology. While in the class, students participated in out-of-their seat activities like performing body movement in the gym. "At first, we just thought we were doing a bunch of nonsensical physical activities. Later, I found out we were being used as psychological lab rats," freshman Khaila Mickens said. "I thought Ms. Moore had gone crazy. We walked in and she told us to do something that was not that bad, but then everything just got stranger and stranger," freshman Emma Cass said.
"WE CANUSUALLY KEEP THE TABLE TUMPINGTOAMINIMUM,"junior Bren Huggins said. Aside from mock exams, DBQs, all-nighters and energy drinks, students in Mr. Pete Lustig's Advanced Placement U.S. History class shared an extraordinary learning experience. Holding mock preceedings with histroically influential people on trial and debating societal and political issues, students were quick to get heated. "Some students are very passionate about the topic, while others just want extra credit. Screaming is sometimes involved. Tangents and accusations toward either side are also involved" junior Shabi Mustafa said. Debate topics have ranged from the abolition of slavery to who started the revolutionary war. "I feel the topics are excellent in the sense that there is no right answer and little reliance on ethical values. There are many different opinions in class. All of our learning can be related to today," Huggins said.

"The rowdiest in the debates are Hannah Wellons and myself.I attempt to lead my team in the structure and strategy. I live for bashing people over the head with my opinions, so debates are a dream come true for me. At one point I was debating the abolition of slavery. I became so envigorated I blew a vessel in my nose and got a nose bleed. I did not clean myself up until my point was finished being proven."
BrenHuggins, 11
"The debates are fun because it is so interesting to listen to other people's opinions. The topics are always interesting, and my views have sometimes been changed.I have been the tie-breaker during two debates so far. We came to a draw both times, and I was selected to play rock, paper, scissors with another student from the oppisite team. Ilost both times." Shabi Mustafa, 11

"WE DECIDED TO CHANGE OUR NAME"

"WEPERFORMED FOR AFEW VEARS UNDER THENAME 'ROARING JELLO.' When we were ready to record our first CD, we decided to change our name since Jell-O is trademarked," said Mr. Tim Sauls about his band, Celtibillies. The band started out with a simple dance gig in 1994 under the title "Fiddlesticks." Since then, they have played at the Smithsonian Folklife Festival in Washington and toured in Alaska, and played on the PBS series "Song of the Mountains" and on NPR's "The Thistle and Shamrock." Mr. Sauls, who plays a variety of instruments with great skill, began his musical endeavors with childhood piano lessons. As a high school senior, he became interested in playing stringed instruments and eventually bought his neighbor's guitar on a whim. Besides having 40 years of experience playing the guitar, he is also proficient on the fivestring banjo, fiddle, the "Irish bouzouki" (or octave mandolin) and, in the past year, the tenor banjo. His most noted skill, however, is his ability to play by ear. "Sometimes I've heard a melody so many times that I can sit with it and slowly figure it out. Sometimes I use live recordings and figure out fingering one phrase at a time. I use the same process in learning from CDs or, more recently, YouTube videos," Sauls said.

Sister,
I want you to know how much you mean to me. You are the person in this world who I most cherish and admire. I thank GOD every day for giving me such a beautiful, honest, creative, intelligent, funny, and compassionate sister. You are my best friend, my heart, and so much more than this note could ever sum up. I cannot wait until you begin college and find what it is that you love to do! Not only will you be amazing at it, but you will also be able to share your true happiness with others. Your light shines brighter than you could ever imagine. I know.... I have seen it!

STEVE KENT

ACCOLADE 2013 is a product of the offset lithography process of Herff Jones' Gettysburg, Pennsylvania plant. Mark Plyler provided white glove service (and Twizzlers!) to all 182 of our process color vegetablebased ink pages, which were produced at 175-line screen on a Komori SuperPerfector 10-color press on premium 100-pound matte paper, which contains $10 \%$ post-consumer waste. All images passed through Herff Jones' image enhancement process, known as ColorPlus, so all images could be corrected for optimum reproduction. The cover is staff-designed, featuring black silkscreen and foil on FiberMark ${ }^{\otimes}$ Red SilkTouch (in its last application before being discontinued). Endsheets feature a full table of contents and are printed in black and PMS 200 on Harmony endsheet stock ASH HY-4. For those of you who have no idea what that means: Aren't they beautiful? Design, photo, and copy credits appear on the lower left of each spread, opposite the folios on the right. Before this book could be printed, editor McKenzie Prillaman, adviser Mrs. Chrystal Shawn and yearbook consultant/guru/master of the universe (who you tellin?) Steve Kent spent hours trying to develop a concept that really showed how spectacular Cave Spring High School is (without being too obvious and obnoxious about it). Our theme of RED ALL OVER seemed to fit the bill in terms of who Cave Spring is. Competing (and winning) both in and out of school and taking pride in who we are seemed to be two major themes his year, and those themes can be seen in every picture you stare at and in every story you read. Typographically-speaking, we employed two font themes. In the WHAT WE DO section, we used Salvo Serif. In the WE'RE JUST BETTER section, we used Salvo Sans. While all caption and copy packages stayed the same throughout, we enjoyed a juxtaposition of the two Salvos in their respective sections. Unless noted, all photography, graphic design and copy is the work of a seven-member staff using seven Dell workstations running Adobe CS4 software. One Epson Perfection scanner assisted with business and baby ads. Lifetouch Photography in Salem took portraits, club and team photos. Senior Olivia Kiser and TJ Witten (special friend to Cave Spring High School) were very generous in allowing us to feature several of their photographs. Special thanks to Dr. Lorraine Lange, Mr. Steve Spangler, Mrs. Fiona Hill, Mrs. Tracey Lange, Mr. Jon Hartness and Mrs. Connie Alonso-Mosher for supporting the production of this book; and to businesses and parents who purchased advertisements and contributed to the production. (C) No portion of this book may be duplicated, reproduced or photographed, including educational materials and slideshows, without prior, written consent from the adviser, the copyright holder of this publication.

McKenzie Prillaman
Editor in Chief

McKenzie, I can't say enough to thank you for all of your hard work. Here's what I can say. though: I think you should change your name to either "Miracle Worker" or "Wonder Woman." whichever you think goes best with "Prillaman." Seriously, you are amazing ) I wish you the absolute best! XOXO. Mrs. Shawn

Molly Kwitny

lloved being in a class with you. especially one as demanding as yearbook You're so dedicated and hard-working, you always got the job done!
